Re: Apple, Inc. v. Samsung Elecs. Co. et al., Case No. 11-cv-1846 LHK

Dear Sam:

I write in response to your December 14, 2011 letter, regarding proposed reciprocal stipulations to amend the parties' infringement contentions and our conversations this week regarding the same.

As you are aware, Samsung is seeking to amend its infringement contentions to identify the iPhone 4S as an accused product. Samsung plans to proceed under its previously disclosed theories for 9 of the 12 Samsung patents with respect to the additional Apple iPhone 4S product. For the remaining 3 patents, Samsung's theories will be essentially the same with the minor modifications described below.

In regards to the '460 and '893 patents, the currently accused Apple products display left/right arrow keys whereas the iPhone 4S does not. Samsung's supplemental infringement contentions would account for this change to the iPhone 4S. In regards to the '871 patent, Samsung's supplemental infringement contentions would account for the new way in which the iPhone 4S divides the display window into first and second display windows.
