Subject: RE: Apple v. Samsung: Discovery Correspondence - Samsung's disclosure of Samuel Lucente
Mia and Rich,

In response to your request for additional information regarding Mr. Lucente, while the protective order does not require that Samsung disclose whether its experts have ever participated in or consulted on, developing or designing a mobile phone, nor does it require that Samsung provide the experts list of clients, we will provide you with this information based upon our agreement yesterday that Apple will provide that same information for its disclosed experts.

Mr. Lucente was the global design manager at HP, where oversaw design of the entire range of HPs 10,000+ products, which included mobile phones. He wasn't involved in hands-on design of anything, and his engagement with HP ended in Nov. 2010. Since then he hasn't been involved in mobile phone design. On behalf of Lucente Design, Mr. Lucente spoke at a 1-day conference for Honeywell Aerospace. He also currently sits on the Design Advisory Board at Pepsico's Frito-Lay division. However, he has refrained from taking on any other clients due to this case.

Please inform by 10:00 a.m. on Monday if Apple will withdraw its objection to Mr. Lucente.

Thanks,
Melissa
