Re: Apple v. Samsung, et al., Case No. 11-cv-1846-LHK (N.D. Cal.) ATTORNEYS' EYES ONLY—Contains information subject to protective order

Dear Sara:

I write regarding the replacement documents for APLNDC-Y0000051350-56, APLNDC0001772330-40, and APLNDC-Y0000232396-430, about which I wrote you late on March 13, 2012. As background, the first two documents identified above were identical to one another and were both an earlier version of the third document, which covers a longer period of time. This last document was produced on Thursday, March 8, 2012.

As noted previously, certain of the lines reflected third party information that is subject to confidentiality provisions and notice requirements. We are in the process of contacting those parties who have not received notice but we have not withheld information based on these circumstances in this new document. If any party objects to disclosure, we will raise the issue with you to discuss how to resolve it.

Finally, we are in the process of determining whether the information that we have gained should result in an expansion in the production previously made of Apple's license agreements. We will write again when that review is complete.

Sincerely,

/s/ Mia Mazza
