UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
SAN JOSE DIVISION

JUDE TRAZO,	)	Case No. 5:12-cv-02272-PSG
Plaintiff,	)	ORDER GRANTING MOTION FOR
v.	)	RECONSIDERATION
NESTLÉ USA, INC.,	)	(Re: Docket No. 119)
Defendant.	)

Plaintiff Jude Trazo, individually and on behalf of similarly situated Plaintiffs, moves for reconsideration of his unjust enrichment/quasi-contract claim. Because the Ninth Circuit recently decided that the duplicative nature of an unjust enrichment/quasi-contract claim is not a valid reason to dismiss it, the court GRANTS Trazo’s motion.<sup>1</sup>

I.

“Reconsideration is appropriate if the district court (1) is presented with newly discovered evidence, (2) committed clear error or the initial decision was manifestly unjust, or (3) if there is an intervening change in controlling law. There may also be other, highly unusual, circumstances warranting reconsideration.”<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Sch. Dist. No. 1J, Multnomah Cnty., Or. v. ACandS, Inc., 5 F.3d 1255, 1263 (9th Cir. 1993) (citations omitted).

1 In August 2013, the court dismissed Plaintiffs’ claim for restitution based on unjust
2 enrichment/quasi-contract.<sup>3</sup> The court specifically held that because “Plaintiffs’ quasi-contract
3 theory rests on the same allegations already covered by their other claims, which also provide for 4 restitution as a remedy, the claim is ‘merely duplicative of statutory or tort claims’ and must be
5 dismissed.”<sup>4</sup>

6 Trazo requests reconsideration on the grounds that Astiana “requires that [he] be allowed to 7 pursue a claim for unjust enrichment.”<sup>5</sup>

8 II.

9 This court has subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1367. The parties further 10 consented to the jurisdiction of the undersigned magistrate judge under 28 U.S.C. § 636(c) and 11 Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a).<sup>6</sup>

12 As a preliminary matter, while Nestlé may be right that Trazo was dilatory in bringing this 13 motion, its contention that Trazo “relinquished and waived” his unjust enrichment claim is 14 insufficient.<sup>7</sup> This court has broad discretion to reconsider and revise its prior orders.<sup>8</sup>

15 Nestlé also argues that Trazo’s motion should be denied because “the ‘unjust enrichment’ 16 claim [he is] trying to assert is not for restitution” but only for nonrestitutionary disgorgement<sup>9</sup>—an 17 entirely new claim. Since Astiana denied dismissal of a claim for restitution but did not discuss

18 _____
19 <sup>3</sup> To be precise, the court dismissed the seventh cause of action in Plaintiffs’ amended complaint.
20 See Docket No. 74 at 20-21; Docket No. 30 at ¶¶ 266-69. The third amended complaint is 21 currently the operative complaint in this suit. See Docket No. 93. Following dismissal, the court
22 granted Plaintiffs’ motion to sever, fragmenting the case into four individual cases. See Docket
23 No. 90. These include the instant case and three related cases: Belli v. Nestlé USA, Inc., Case No.
24 5:14-cv-00283-PSG; Belli v. Nestlé USA, Inc., 5:14-cv-00286-PSG and Coffey v. Nestlé USA, Inc., 25 5:14-cv-00288-PSG. In January 2015, the court terminated Belli, Case No. 5:14-cv-00283-PSG.

1 nonrestitutionary disgorgement, Nestlé asserts that the Ninth Circuit’s decision is “entirely beside 2 the point of what [Trazo] seek[s] in [his] motion[] for reconsideration.”<sup>10</sup> Nestlé’s argument is 3 unfounded. Trazo explicitly requests reconsideration of his original unjust enrichment/quasi-
4 contract claim before he discusses nonrestitutionary disgorgement as a remedy.<sup>11</sup> Trazo’s claim for 5 restitution is appropriately before the court in a request for reconsideration.

6 III.

7 The Ninth Circuit’s decision in Astiana is “an intervening change in controlling law” and 8 therefore presents a valid basis for reconsideration.<sup>12</sup>

9 First, Astiana settled the long-standing question of whether a court may dismiss a claim for 10 unjust enrichment as merely duplicative of other statutory or tort claims.<sup>13</sup> Astiana involved a
11 putative class action suit in which Plaintiffs alleged that Defendant falsely labeled its cosmetic
12 products as “All Natural.”<sup>14</sup> Plaintiffs claimed that such false labeling deceived customers into 13 buying those products and unjustly enriched Defendant as a result.<sup>15</sup> The complaint sought
14 damages under California’s Unfair Competition Law and False Advertising Law and under a quasi-
15 contract theory.<sup>16</sup> Before the class-certification stage, the district court dismissed the quasi-
16 contract claim, “concluding that restitution ‘[was] not a standalone cause of action in California
17 and [that the claim was] nonsensical as pled in any event.’”<sup>17</sup> The Ninth Circuit agreed that unjust
18 enrichment did not constitute a standalone cause of action in California.<sup>18</sup> However, it confirmed
19 that “[w]hen a plaintiff alleges unjust enrichment, a court may ‘construe the cause of action as a

1 quasi-contract claim seeking restitution.”<sup>19</sup> Accordingly, the court found that Plaintiffs’
2 allegations were “sufficient to state a quasi-contract cause of action.”<sup>20</sup> The court then held that
3 “[t]o the extent the district court concluded that the [claim] was nonsensical because it was 4 duplicative of or superfluous to [Plaintiffs’] other claims, this [was] not grounds for dismissal.”<sup>21</sup>

5 The unambiguous holding in Astiana requires this court to side with Trazo and reinstate his 6 claim for restitution based on unjust enrichment/quasi-contract.<sup>22</sup> Trazo’s amended complaint
7 alleged that “Defendant sold Misbranded Food Products to Plaintiffs” and that “[a]s a result of 8 Defendant’s fraudulent and misleading labeling . . . Defendant was enriched at the expense of 9 Plaintiffs and the class.”<sup>23</sup> This allegation is sufficient to state a quasi-contract cause of action.
10 “That the claim may be duplicative of Plaintiff’s statutory claims under the UCL, FAL, and 11 [California Consumer Legal Remedies Act] is not a proper ground for dismissal at this stage of the 12 litigation, particularly as Plaintiff seeks to represent a nationwide class on [his] claim for quasi-
13 contract.”<sup>24</sup>

14 Second, Nestlé’s reliance on Lanovaz v. Twinings North America<sup>25</sup> to support its opposition 15 is misplaced because the facts and posture of that case are distinguishable to those here. In 16 Lanovaz, Plaintiff also sought reconsideration of her unjust enrichment claim, which had been 17 dismissed as “duplicative of her consumer protection claims” under the UCL, FAL and CLRA.<sup>26</sup>
18 But Lanovaz filed her motion for reconsideration after the court had “denied certification of a

1 damages class based upon [her] consumer protection claims.”<sup>27</sup> Lanovaz’s motion for 2 reconsideration further sought damages in the form of restitutionary disgorgement, a remedy also
3 available under her UCL claim.<sup>28</sup> Yet, Lanovaz had not pursued this remedy in her prior motion
4 for class certification (which, as mentioned above, was ultimately denied).<sup>29</sup> The court thus 5 determined that Lanovaz’s use of the unjust enrichment claim was an improper “vehicle for 6 belatedly obtaining a second bite at class certification.”<sup>30</sup> In other words, Lanovaz “could have
7 sought certification of a damages class equivalent to a damages class based upon an unjust
8 enrichment claim” but chose not to do so.<sup>31</sup> She therefore could not “seek class certification of a 9 damages class under an unjust enrichment claim in light of the court’s prior Certification Order.”<sup>32</sup>
10 “[T]o the extent [the] dismissal was in error in light of Astiana, [it] did not limit the remedies 11 plaintiff could have sought at the class certification stage.”<sup>33</sup> The court essentially denied the 12 motion by reason of harmless error.<sup>34</sup>

13 This is not the case here. Trazo has not yet presented the court with a motion for class
14 certification.<sup>35</sup> Reinstating Trazo’s quasi-contract claim will not give him another bite at obtaining 15 class certification or otherwise unreasonably prejudice Nestlé in any way.

24 <sup>35</sup> Nestlé argues that the reason for Trazo’s motion for reconsideration is “to reverse the unanimous 25 string of defeats [his] attorneys have suffered when trying to certify a class requiring the 26 quantification of money damages flowing from the challenged labeling statement.” Docket No.
27 120 at 2:24-28. However, this “string of defeats” does not refer to any action in this case or in any 28 of the related cases. See id. at 1 n.1. In Lanovaz, the court had previously denied certification to the same Plaintiff seeking reconsideration. See Lanovaz, 2015 WL 3627015 at *3. This is not the case here. Prior defeats suffered by Trazo’s attorneys in unrelated cases have no bearing on the immediate motion.

1           Third, to be clear, the court reinstates Trazo’s claim for restitution based on unjust
2 enrichment/quasi-contract as pled in the amended complaint,<sup>36</sup> but does not grant Trazo leave to 3 seek damages in the form of nonrestitutionary disgorgement.

4           Trazo may not seek damages in the form of nonrestitutionary disgorgement for two reasons.
5 First, “[a] motion for reconsideration ‘may not be used to raise arguments or present evidence for 6 the first time when they could reasonably have been raised earlier in the litigation.’”<sup>37</sup> Trazo’s
7 amended complaint did not discuss nonrestitutionary disgorgement as a remedy for quasi-contract,
8 and the two cases on which Trazo primarily relies to support his argument for nonrestitutionary
9 disgorgement summarize precedent that predated the court’s August 2013 dismissal of Trazo’s
10 quasi-contract claim.<sup>38</sup> As such, Trazo could have reasonably raised an argument for 11 nonrestitutionary disgorgement earlier in this litigation, but chose not to do so. He cannot use a 12 motion for reconsideration to raise that argument now.

13           Second, nonrestitutionary disgorgement is not the appropriate remedy for a quasi-contract
14 claim based on alleged mislabeling of a consumer product.<sup>39</sup> Trazo cites a number of cases to 15 support his argument that he can pursue nonrestitutionary disgorgement under a quasi-contract
16 theory. But none of those cases address that remedy in the context of a product mislabeling

25 694 (2006)) (finding that “[t]he proper measure of restitution in a mislabeling case is the amount
26 necessary to compensate the purchaser for the difference between a product as labeled and the
27 product as received”); Ivie v. Kraft Foods Glob., Inc., Case No. 5:12-cv-02554-RMW, 2015 WL 28 183910, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 14, 2015) (concluding that “restitutionary damages [in a mislabeling case should] be the price premium attributable to the offending labels, and no more”); *Rahman v.
Mott’s LLP*, Case No. 3:13-cv-03482-SI, 2014 WL 6815779, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 3, 2014) (determining the appropriate amount of restitution under a quasi-contract claim “will likely involve demonstrating what portion of the sale price was attributable to the value consumers placed on the” allegedly misleading labels).

1 claim.<sup>40</sup> The nonrestitutionary disgorgement remedy which Trazo seeks would require Nestlé “to 2 surrender . . . all profits earned as a result of [the alleged] unfair business practice regardless of 3 whether those profits represent money taken directly from persons who were victims of the unfair
4 practice.”<sup>41</sup> Yet, Trazo’s amended complaint specifically sought restitution, “a remedy whose 5 purpose is ‘to restore the status quo by returning to the plaintiff funds in which he or she has an
6 ownership interest.’”<sup>42</sup> “The proper measure of restitution in a mislabeling case is the amount
7 necessary to compensate the purchaser for the difference between a product as labeled and the
8 product as received,” not the full purchase price or all profits.<sup>43</sup> “There is no reason to go beyond 9 the price premium, and doing so would result in a windfall to plaintiff.”<sup>44</sup>

12 <sup>40</sup> See Astiana, 783 F.3d at 762-63 (discussing restitution as a remedy for a quasi-contract claim 13 alleging consumer product mislabeling); Am. Master Lease LLC, 225 Cal. App. 4th at 1482-84 14 (holding that both restitutionary and nonrestitutionary “[d]isgorgement based on unjust enrichment
15 [are] appropriate remed[ies] for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty”); Meister, 230 Cal.
16 App. 4th at 396-99 (discussing disgorgement as a remedy available for breach of a fiduciary duty);

19 remedies of a quasi-contract claim for trespass).

20 Even the recent decision Trazo filed with the court contradicts his argument for nonrestitutionary
21 disgorgement. See Docket No. 122; Khasin v. R.C. Bigelow, Inc., Case No. 3:12-cv-02204-WHO,
22 2015 WL 4104868, at *3 (N.D. Cal. July 7, 2015). In Khasin, the court had previously dismissed
23 Plaintiff’s claim for “disgorgement based upon unjust enrichment” because unjust enrichment was 24 “not an independent legal claim.” Khasin, 2015 WL 4104868 at *1 (internal quotations omitted).
25 Plaintiff’s complaint alleged that “Plaintiff and the Class paid a premium for the Misbranded Food
26 Products and . . . it would be unjust and inequitable for Defendant to retain the benefit without 27 restitution to Plaintiff and the Class of all monies paid to Defendant for the products at issue.” Id.
28 at *3 (internal quotations omitted) (emphasis added). In light of Astiana, the court held that “these unjust enrichment allegations [were] sufficient to state ‘a quasi-contract claim seeking restitution.’”
Id. (emphasis added). The court did not discuss nonrestitutionary disgorgement as a potential remedy. See generally id.

Circuit referred to the remedy for the quasi-contract claim as the “return of [a] benefit” previously held by the plaintiff that was “unjustly conferred” on the defendant. Astiana, 783 F.3d at 762.
