

EXHIBIT U

Matt CampbellFriday, November 8, 2013 at 12:26pm CST

No problem. P.O. Box 1715, Malvern, AR 72104 I'm totally willing to be a plaintiff for you if it's helpful, by the way. It would be nice to be a plaintiff in one of these newsworthy stories and not be the attorney, too! I'm swamped until early next week, but I'll touch base with you after that and we can figure out a beer schedule.

David SladeFriday, November 8, 2013 at 9:25am CST

Hey Matt, Thanks so much for this thoughtful response. That's very helpful and it gives me some good ideas in my case investigation. And yeah, now that I'm getting my legs back under me from the surgery, we should definitely grab a beer. I think my schedule's pretty clear in the coming weeks, so just let me know what works for you. Quick question: I wrote a check for David Kizza's campaign, but have forgotten the PO Box to which I should mail it. Would you hit me with those details again? Thanks so much, David

Matt CampbellSunday, November 3, 2013 at 9:26am CST

Sucks about your appendix. If the laproscopic removal of my gall bladder is any indication, however, the only downside will be an inability to lift your kid for a few weeks. As for Facebook... I can think of a few clients that I've used FB to communicate with. It's generally been when I want to give them a quick update on something and I don't have a cell number that I can text them on. I've also had a couple potential clients reach out to me via FB because a mutual friend referred them to me. I'd say the latter scenario is more likely to contain important, privileged information, since I try (but certainly don't always succeed) in avoiding FB for transmitting sensitive info to current clients. Oh, and now that I've written all that, I realize that communications with other lawyers that I'm working on cases with is probably the most common law-related function I use FB for. Just in the last month, I see three different lawyers that I've exchanged messages with about existing cases. Let me know if any of this helps or if you need more specifics. Feel better soon. Also, when you feel up to it, let's get a beer. -Matt

David SladeWednesday, October 30, 2013 at 5:16pm CDT

Thanks so much! Take your time. I really appreciate it.

Matt CampbellWednesday, October 30, 2013 at 5:15pm CDT

I have in a couple cases. Running some errands at the moment, but I'll give you a more thorough reply tonight.

David SladeWednesday, October 30, 2013 at 5:03pm CDT

Hey Matt, quick question: do you ever send business-related communications via Facebook? E.g., contacting Pinnacle clients via this messaging function? Full disclosure: I'm putting together a privacy case against Facebook (looks like they scan these messages...most likely for data mining/profiling purposes), and am trying to think about the best possible plaintiffs. My bosses are all Luddites, so there's no FB use in our day to day. But I'm wondering whether lawyers use this as a communication mechanism professionally. Anyways, just reaching out to my various lawyer people. Hope this finds you well. -D