UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
SAN JOSE DIVISION

CONNIE RODRIGUEZ,

Plaintiff,

v.

EXPERIAN INFORMATION SOLUTIONS,
INC., et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. 16-cv-04668-BLF

ORDER GRANTING MOTIONS TO DISMISS FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT WITH LEAVE TO AMEND

[RE: ECF 26, 30]

Plaintiff Connie Rodriguez sues Defendants Experian Information Solutions, Inc. (“Experian”) and TD Bank USA, N.A. (“TD Bank”) for violations of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (“FCRA”), 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq., and the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act (“CCRAA”), California Civil Code § 1785.25(a). Both defendants move to dismiss Plaintiff’s first amended complaint (“FAC”) pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). For reasons discussed below, the motions are GRANTED WITH LEAVE TO AMEND.

I. BACKGROUND¹

Plaintiff filed for Chapter 13 bankruptcy protection on September 19, 2014, and her plan was confirmed on November 26, 2014. FAC ¶¶ 87, 91, ECF 22. On March 20, 2016, Plaintiff “ordered a three bureau report from Experian Information Solutions, Inc. to ensure proper reporting by Plaintiff’s Creditors.” Id. ¶ 92. She alleges that this report (“March 2016 Credit Report”) included four different trade lines containing inaccurate, misleading, or incomplete information. Id. ¶ 93. Plaintiff neither attaches a copy of the March 2016 Credit Report nor provides specifics regarding the alleged inaccuracies contained therein. Id. She asserts only that “multiple trade lines continued to report Plaintiff’s accounts with past due balances, inaccurate

¹ Plaintiff’s well-pled factual allegations are accepted as true for purposes of the motion to dismiss. See Reese v. BP Exploration (Alaska) Inc., 643 F.3d 681, 690 (9th Cir. 2011).

1 balances, in collections, and/or charged off. Some accounts even failed to register that Plaintiff 2 was making payments on the account through Plaintiff’s Chapter 13 plan.” Id.

3 Plaintiff disputed the inaccurate trade lines via certified mail sent to three different credit 4 reporting agencies (“CRAs”), Experian, Equifax, Inc., and TransUnion, LLC on June 22, 2016.
5 Id. ¶ 94. Each CRA received Plaintiff’s dispute letter and in turn notified the entities that had 6 furnished the disputed information (“furnishers”) by means of automated credit dispute 7 verifications (“ACDVs”). Id. ¶ 96.

8 Plaintiff ordered a second three bureau report from Experian Information Solutions, Inc. on 9 July 26, 2016 (“July 2016 Credit Report”). Id. ¶ 97. That report revealed that four furnishers, 10 including TD Bank, were continuing to report her accounts inconsistently with industry standards.
11 Id. ¶ 98-101. For example, Plaintiff alleges that TD Bank reported Plaintiff’s account as “charged 12 off and past due, despite the Court Ordered treatment of its claim under the terms of Plaintiff’s 13 Chapter 13 plan of reorganization.” Id. ¶ 99. Plaintiff further alleges that “TD Bank failed to 14 report the CII D to reflect the account had been included in Plaintiff’s Chapter 13 filing.” Id.

15 Plaintiff filed this action on August 12, 2016, asserting violations of the FCRA and 16 CCRAA against multiple CRAs and furnishers. Compl., ECF 1. All Defendants except Experian 17 and TD Bank have been dismissed. Experian and TD Bank now move to dismiss the FAC.

18 II. LEGAL STANDARD

19 “A motion to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) for failure to state a 20 claim upon which relief can be granted ‘tests the legal sufficiency of a claim.’” Conservation 21 Force v. Salazar, 646 F.3d 1240, 1241-42 (9th Cir. 2011) (quoting Navarro v. Block, 250 F.3d 22 729, 732 (9th Cir. 2001)). When determining whether a claim has been stated, the Court accepts 23 as true all well-pled factual allegations and construes them in the light most favorable to the 24 plaintiff. Reese v. BP Exploration (Alaska) Inc., 643 F.3d 681, 690 (9th Cir. 2011). However, the 25 Court need not “accept as true allegations that contradict matters properly subject to judicial 26 notice” or “allegations that are merely conclusory, unwarranted deductions of fact, or 27 unreasonable inferences.” In re Gilead Scis. Sec. Litig., 536 F.3d 1049, 1055 (9th Cir. 2008) 28 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). While a complaint need not contain detailed

1 factual allegations, it “must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to ‘state a claim to 2 relief that is plausible on its face.’” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting *Bell Atl.
3 Corp. v. Twombly*, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)). A claim is facially plausible when it “allows the 4 court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Id.

5 III. EXPERIAN’S MOTION TO DISMISS

6 The FAC contains two claims, one for violation of the FCRA (Claim 1) and the other for 7 violation of the CCRAA (Claim 2). Although the label of the CCRAA claim indicates that it is 8 asserted against “Defendants,” it is clear from the body of the FAC that the CCRAA claim is not 9 asserted against Experian. Accordingly, only the FCRA claim is asserted against Experian.
10 Experian moves to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted.

11 “Congress enacted [the] FCRA in 1970 to ensure fair and accurate credit reporting, 12 promote efficiency in the banking system, and protect consumer privacy.” *Safeco Ins. Co. of Am.
13 v. Burr*, 551 U.S. 47, 52 (2007). To that end, the FCRA imposes specific obligations on CRAs, 14 furnishers, and other categories of persons not at issue here. See generally 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et 15 seq. Many of the obligations of CRAs are described in 15 U.S.C. § 1681i. That section provides 16 that if a consumer disputes “the completeness or accuracy of any item of information,” the CRA 17 must “conduct a reasonable reinvestigation to determine whether the disputed information is 18 inaccurate and record the current status of the disputed information, or delete the item.” 15 U.S.C.
19 § 1681i(a)(1). In addition, the CRA must provide notification of the dispute to the furnisher of the 20 information. 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(a)(2). Such notification by the CRA triggers the furnisher’s 21 obligation to conduct its own investigation. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s-2(b). The FCRA expressly creates 22 a private right of action for willful or negligent noncompliance with these requirements. 15 23 U.S.C. § 1681n & o.

24 Plaintiff’s FCRA claim against Experian is subheaded “Failure to Reinvestigate Disputed 25 Information.” FAC ¶¶ 113-14. Plaintiff alleges that after she “disputed the accounts mentioned 26 above” – which the Court takes to mean the four trade lines in the March 2016 Credit Report 27 referenced earlier in the FAC – Experian was required to conduct a reasonable investigation and to 28 delete any information that was not accurate under 15 U.S.C. § 1681i-(a)(1). Id. ¶ 115. Plaintiff

1 claims that “[t]he most basic investigation required each CRA to send all relevant information via 2 an ACDV to the furnishers which they did not do.” Id. ¶ 116. Plaintiff alleges that because it did 3 not send all relevant information “to the furnishers,” Experian “failed to conduct a reasonable 4 investigation and failed to correct the misleading and or inaccurate statements.” Id. ¶ 117.

5 In the alternative, Plaintiff alleges that Experian “has its own independent duty to conduct 6 a reasonable investigation under 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(a)1.” FAC ¶ 118. Section 1681i(a)(1) does 7 not impose a freestanding duty to investigate; a CRA’s duties under that provision are triggered 8 only “if the completeness or accuracy of any item of information . . . is disputed by the consumer 9 and the consumer notifies the agency . . . of such dispute.” 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(a)(1) (emphasis 10 added). Thus it is unclear what Plaintiff means by “own independent duty” to investigate.
11 Plaintiff alleges that Experian “is not a passive entity” and that it “can and does suppress 12 inaccurate information from being reported when DFs provide inaccurate information.” FAC ¶¶ 13 119-21. Plaintiff also alleges that Experian “would have known” that certain DFs were not 14 following industry standards in their reporting. Id. ¶¶ 124-27. The Court understands these 15 allegations to claim that regardless of what information was provided to Experian by furnishers, 16 Experian had an independent duty to “suppress” that information if it did not comply with industry 17 standards.

18 Experian moves to dismiss the FCRA claim on three grounds. First, Experian asserts that 19 Plaintiff has not alleged facts showing that Experian’s credit reporting was inaccurate. Second, 20 Experian argues that Plaintiff has not alleged facts showing an entitlement to damages under the 21 FCRA. And third, Experian asserts that Plaintiff has not alleged any facts showing that Experian’s 22 response to her dispute letter regarding the March 2016 Credit Report was improper.

23 A. Inaccuracy

24 The Ninth Circuit has observed that “[a]lthough the FCRA’s reinvestigation provision, 15 25 U.S.C. § 1681i, does not on its face require that an actual inaccuracy exist for a plaintiff to state a 26 claim, many courts, including our own, have imposed such a requirement.” Carvalho v. Equifax 27
28

1 Info. Servs., LLC, 629 F.3d 876, 890 (9th Cir. 2010).² “Thus, even if a . . . CRA fails to conduct a 2 reasonable investigation or otherwise fails to fulfill its obligations under the FCRA, if a plaintiff 3 cannot establish that a credit report contained an actual inaccuracy, then the plaintiff’s claims fail 4 as a matter of law.” Doster v. Experian Info. Sols., Inc., No. 16-CV-04629-LHK, 2017 WL 5 264401, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 20, 2017) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

6 In Carvalho, the Ninth Circuit noted that it previously had “explained that an item on a 7 credit report can be ‘incomplete or inaccurate’ within the meaning of the FCRA’s furnisher 8 investigation provision, 15 U.S.C. § 1681s-2(b)(1)(D), ‘because it is patently incorrect, or because 9 it is misleading in such a way and to such an extent that it can be expected to adversely affect 10 credit decisions.’” Carvalho, 629 F.3d at 890 (quoting Gorman v. Wolpoff & Abramson, LLP, 584 11 F.3d 1147, 1163 (2009)). The Ninth Circuit went on to affirm “‘the maxim of statutory 12 construction that similar terms appearing in different sections of a statute should receive the same 13 interpretation,’” id. (quoting United States v. Nordbrock, 38 F.3d 440, 444 (9th Cir. 1994)), and to 14 cite with approval a First Circuit case, Chiang, which the Ninth Circuit summarized as “deeming 15 the term ‘inaccurate’ in section 1681i(a) to be ‘essentially the same’ as the term ‘incomplete or 16 inaccurate’ in section 1681s-2(b),” id. (citing Chiang v. Verizon New Eng. Inc., 595 F.3d 26, 37 17 (1st Cir. 2010)). Relying on Carvalho, district courts have “applied this ‘patently incorrect or 18 materially misleading’ standard to claims arising under various provisions of the FCRA that 19 involve the accuracy of information.” Prianto v. Experian Info. Sols., Inc., No. 13-CV-03461-20 TEH, 2014 WL 3381578, at *3 (N.D. Cal. July 10, 2014). In particular, courts in this district have 21 applied the “patently incorrect or materially misleading” standard to the inaccuracy requirement
22 under § 1681i. See, e.g., Banneck v. HSBC Bank USA, N.A., No. 15-cv-02250-HSG, 2016 WL 23 3383960, at *6 (N.D. Cal. June 20, 2016); Prianto, 2014 WL 3381578, at *3.

24
25 ² Carvalho involved claims asserted under the CCRAA, not the FCRA. See Carvalho, 629 F.3d at 26 881. However, in discussing the scope of the CCRAA, the Ninth Circuit drew heavily on cases 27 construing the FCRA, see id. at 889-91, and numerous courts have relied on Carvalho’s 28 explication of FCRA requirements when addressing FCRA claims, *see, e.g., Artus v. Experian
Info. Sols., Inc.*, No. 5:16-CV-03322-EJD, 2017 WL 346022, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 24, 2017); Jaras v. Experian Info. Sols., Inc., No. 16-CV-03336-LHK, 2016 WL 7337540, at *4 (N.D. Cal.
Dec. 19, 2016).

1 Experian argues that the FAC does not satisfy this pleading standard. The Court agrees for 2 the reasons discussed below.

3 1. Three Bureau Report

4 Perhaps the most obvious deficiency in Plaintiff’s allegations against Experian is her 5 failure to allege that the inaccuracies in the “three bureau” March 2016 Credit Report upon which 6 her claim is based are attributable to Experian rather than one of the other CRAs. FAC ¶ 92.
7 Plaintiff alleges that she obtained the March 2016 Credit Report after confirmation of her Chapter 8 13 plan, and that “multiple trade lines continued to report Plaintiff’s accounts with past due 9 balances, inaccurate balances, in collections, and/or charged off. Some accounts even failed to 10 register that Plaintiff was making payments on the account through Plaintiff’s Chapter 13 plan.” 11 Id. ¶¶ 91-93. These allegations neither identify Experian as the reporting entity nor identify any 12 particular past due balances or other trade lines in the March 2016 Credit Report that were 13 inaccurate.

14 Plaintiff argues that the requisite specificity is provided in paragraphs regarding TD 15 Bank’s simultaneous reporting of Plaintiff’s account as current and in collections and failure to 16 note Plaintiff’s bankruptcy. Plaintiff does not allege that those allegations appeared in the March 17 2016 Credit Report upon which her claim is based, and in fact the referenced allegations follow 18 directly after Plaintiff’s description of how she obtained the July 2016 Credit Report. FAC ¶¶ 97-19 99. Plaintiff does not allege that she disputed the July 2016 Credit Report; she obtained the July 20 2016 Credit Report “to ensure Plaintiff’s accounts had been updated.” Id. ¶ 97. Therefore 21 inaccuracies in the July 2016 Credit Report cannot form the basis of her claim.

22 Other courts in this district have dismissed FCRA claims based upon alleged inaccuracies 23 in three bureau reports where no specificity is provided as to which CRA reported the inaccuracies 24 in question. See, e.g., Doster, 2017 WL 264401, at *6 (“Plaintiff’s FAC makes only general and 25 unspecified allegations that her credit report, which was a three-bureau credit report, contained 26 inaccuracies and that the CRAs reported misleading and inaccurate information, but the FAC does 27 not allege any conduct that is specific to Experian.”). Because Plaintiff does not specify any 28 particular inaccuracies that were reported in the March 2016 Credit Report, and does not identify

1 Experian as the reporting entity, the FAC fails to state a claim of inaccurate reporting by Experian.

2 2. Reporting After Confirmation of Chapter 13 Plan

3 More fundamentally, to the extent that Plaintiff claims that it was inaccurate for Experian 4 to report delinquencies or past due balances after plan confirmation, that theory of liability has 5 been rejected by courts in this district and other districts within the Ninth Circuit. See, e.g., Artus
6 v. Experian Info. Sols., Inc., No. 5:16-CV-03322-EJD, 2017 WL 346022, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 24, 7 2017) (collecting cases); Doster, 2017 WL 264401, at *6 (“[A]s a matter of law it is not 8 misleading or inaccurate to report a delinquent debt during the pendency of a bankruptcy.”);
9 Polvorosa v. Allied Collection Serv., Inc., No. Case No. 2:16–CV–1508 JCM (CWH), 2017 WL
10 29331, at *3 (D. Nev. Jan. 3, 2017) (“[R]eporting delinquencies during the pendency of a 11 bankruptcy or during a bankruptcy’s automatic stay is not itself a violation of the FCRA.”).

12 Plaintiff argues that these decisions fail to recognize that a bankruptcy court’s order 13 confirming a Chapter 13 plan constitutes a binding final judgment regarding the rights and 14 liabilities of the debtor and his or her creditors. According to Plaintiff, because a confirmed plan 15 modifies the original debts, any post-confirmation reporting of pre-confirmation delinquencies or 16 balances is inaccurate. Plaintiff appears to be arguing that CRAs cannot report information 17 provided to them by furnishers without first independently evaluating the legal effect of a 18 confirmed Chapter 13 plan on such information.

19 In Carvalho, the Ninth Circuit noted that “reinvestigation claims are not the proper vehicle 20 for collaterally attacking the legal validity of consumer debts.” Carvalho, 629 F.3d at 892. In that 21 case, the allegedly inaccurate reporting involved a charge for medical services that the plaintiff, 22 Carvalho, claimed should have been paid by her insurance company. Id. at 882. After Carvalho 23 disputed the charge, several CRAs requested and received verification of the debt from the 24 furnisher. Id. The CRAs thereafter continued reporting the debt, but they added Carvalho’s 25 statement of dispute to her credit reports. Id. at 882-83. In rejecting Carvalho’s argument that the 26 CRAs were obligated to do more, the Ninth Circuit found that “[t]he fundamental flaw in 27 Carvalho’s conception of the reinvestigation duty is that credit reporting agencies are not 28 tribunals.” Id. at 891. The Ninth Circuit reasoned that CRAs “simply collect and report

1 information furnished by others” and thus are “ill equipped to adjudicate contract disputes.” Id.
2 For that reason, “courts have been loath to allow consumers to mount collateral attacks on the 3 legal validity of their debts in the guise of FCRA reinvestigation claims.” Id.

4 Plaintiff argues that Carvalho is distinguishable from the present case, because in 5 Carvalho there had been no adjudication of the rights and obligations of the debtor and the 6 creditor, whereas in the present case there has been such an adjudication in the form of an order 7 confirming Plaintiff’s Chapter 13 plan. Plaintiff’s argument is unpersuasive. Carvalho did not 8 turn on the lack of finality of the debt at issue, but rather on the Ninth Circuit’s conclusion that 9 CRAs are neither equipped nor obligated to determine the legal status of debts that have been 10 reported and verified by furnishers.

11 Plaintiff’s assertion of the legal effect of a Chapter 13 confirmation plan is unavailing for 12 other reasons as well. It is true that “[t]he provisions of a confirmed plan bind the debtor and each 13 creditor.” 11 U.S.C. § 1327(a). Thus a creditor seeking payment on a debt is entitled only to 14 those payments provided for under the plan, and “any issue decided under a plan is entitled to res 15 judicata effect.” In re Blendheim, 803 F.3d 477, 486 (9th Cir. 2015). However, the Court 16 declines to make the logical leap urged by Plaintiff that these authorities, governing the 17 relationships between parties to a bankruptcy action, make it a violation of the FCRA for a CRA 18 to report a historically accurate pre-confirmation debt or delinquency. Regardless of how the 19 rights and obligations of the parties to a bankruptcy are modified by a Chapter 13 plan, the 20 original debt did exist prior to confirmation and Plaintiff has cited no authority suggesting that 21 bankruptcy proceedings “erase” that historical fact for purposes of the FCRA.

22 Plaintiff’s reliance on In re Luedtke, No. 02-35082-svk, 2008 WL 2952530 (Bankr. E.D.
23 Wis. July 31, 2008), is misplaced. In Luedtke, the bankruptcy court concluded that a creditor 24 whose claim was modified by a Chapter 13 confirmation order had violated that order by 25 continuing to report the original debt to CRAs. Id. at *6. The court suggested that in addition to 26 seeking sanctions for violation of the confirmed plan, the debtor also could have sought relief 27 under the FCRA. Id. In making that suggestion, the bankruptcy court appeared to assume that the 28 creditor’s reporting of the original debt would have constituted an inaccuracy under the FCRA.

1 Id. at *5. That view, expressed in dicta by a bankruptcy court outside the Ninth Circuit almost a 2 decade ago, has not been adopted by the courts in this district. At least one court outside the 3 district has found the decision to be irrelevant to determination whether a plaintiff had pleaded a 4 viable FCRA claim. See, e.g., Wylie v. TransUnion, LLC, No. 3:16-CV-102, 2017 WL 835205, at 5 *5 n.6 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 2, 2017) (“[T]he question before the Court is whether Defendants reported 6 accurate information, not whether Defendant violated the bankruptcy code.”) (internal quotation 7 marks and citation omitted).

8 Moreover, with respect to the many debtors who fail to make all required plan payments, 9 the original debt terms ultimately are reinstated. See Blendheim, 803 F.3d at 487. Indeed, 10 historically accurate debts may be reported even after discharge, so long as the credit report 11 indicates that the debts were discharged in bankruptcy. See Mortimer v. Bank of Am., N.A., No. C-12 12-01959 JCS, 2013 WL 1501452, *9-11 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 10, 2013) (furnisher’s reporting that the 13 debt had been delinquent during the pendency of the bankruptcy was historically accurate and thus 14 not actionable under the FCRA where report also indicated that the debt had been discharged in 15 bankruptcy).

16 Plaintiff’s counsel argued at the hearing that allowing reporting of pre-confirmation 17 delinquencies or balances after a Chapter 13 plan has been confirmed will deprive debtors of 18 significant benefits that they expect to obtain through Chapter 13 bankruptcy. That issue is one 19 for Congress to resolve, not this Court. The Court’s task in evaluating Plaintiff’s FAC is to 20 determine whether the facts alleged therein make out a plausible claim that Experian’s credit 21 reporting was inaccurate. The Court simply is not persuaded that the reporting of a delinquency or 22 past due balance after plan confirmation is per se inaccurate under the FCRA.

23 However, it appears to be an open question whether such reporting could satisfy the 24 inaccuracy requirement if the report is unaccompanied by any indication that the consumer is in 25 bankruptcy. See Devincenzi v. Experian Info. Sols., Inc., No. 16-CV-04628-LHK, 2017 WL
26 86131, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 10, 2017) (declining to decide whether allegations that the “credit 27 report contained no indication at all that the debts were the subject of a pending bankruptcy . . .
28 would be sufficient to state a claim” but granting plaintiff leave to attempt to assert FCRA claim

1 based on that theory). It is this Court’s view that it may well be possible for a plaintiff to allege 2 facts showing that the reporting of a pre-confirmation debt or delinquency is materially misleading
3 absent any reference to a pending Chapter 13 bankruptcy in the report, at least where a confirmed 4 plan governs the timing and amounts of post-confirmation payments on the debt.

5 Plaintiff has not alleged such facts here, as she has not identified any particular inaccuracy
6 contained in the March 2016 Credit Report upon which her claim is based, and has not stated 7 whether the March 2016 Credit Report mentioned her bankruptcy.

8 3. Metro 2 Format

9 In addition to her theory of FCRA liability based on the effect of plan confirmation, 10 Plaintiff asserts a related theory based on industry standards regarding credit reporting. She 11 devotes more than thirty paragraphs of the FAC to a tutorial on industry standards and in 12 particular the “Metro 2 format” adopted by the Consumer Data Industry Association (“CDIA”).
13 See FAC ¶¶ 37-71. According to Plaintiff, Metro 2 provides instruction on what updates must be 14 made when a bankruptcy is filed, and deviation from the Metro 2 format is inaccurate or 15 misleading. The Ninth Circuit has not spoken on the effect of the Metro 2 format, if any, on the 16 obligations of CRAs and furnishers under the FCRA. However, district courts within the Ninth 17 Circuit overwhelmingly have held that a violation of industry standards is insufficient, without 18 more, to state a claim for violation of the FCRA. See, e.g., Doster, 2017 WL 264401, at *5
19 (collecting cases); Mestayer v. Experian Info. Sols., Inc., No. 15-CV-03645-EMC, 2016 WL 20 7188015, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2016).

21 The out-of-district cases cited by Plaintiff do not persuade this Court to take a contrary 22 view. In Dreher v. Experian Info. Sols., Inc., No. 3:11-CV-00624-JAG, 2013 WL 2389878, at *7 23 (E.D. Va. May 30, 2013), the district court held that industry standards could be considered at the 24 summary judgment stage as part of the totality of evidence regarding the reasonableness of 25 Experian’s failure to identify the main source of disputed information. That ruling does not 26 advance Plaintiff’s argument that deviation from Metro 2 constitutes a per se inaccuracy under the 27 FCRA. In Nissou-Rabban v. Capital One Bank (USA), N.A., No. 15CV1675 JLS (DHB), 2016
28 WL 4508241, at *5 (S.D. Cal. June 6, 2016), the district court held that the plaintiff had alleged a

1 claim under the FCRA where she alleged that Metro 2 was Synchrony’s chosen method of 2 reporting and that Synchrony’s deviation from Metro 2 might be misleading to such an extent as to 3 affect credit decisions. Courts in this district have found such allegations to be insufficient. See, 4 e.g., Mestayer, 2016 WL 7188015, at *3 (credit report that deviated from Metro 2 was not 5 misleading where report disclosed bankruptcy); see also Doster, 2017 WL 264401, at *5 6 (collecting cases). This Court finds the latter decisions to be better reasoned and therefore 7 concludes that allegations that a credit report deviated from the Metro 2 format is insufficient, 8 without more, to state a claim under the FCRA.

9 The Court does not mean to suggest that Metro 2 is wholly irrelevant to the evaluation of a 10 claim asserted under the FCRA. It may be that allegations of deviations from the Metro 2 format 11 could bolster other allegations of inaccuracy or be relevant to allegations of negligence on the part 12 of the reporting entity. However, Plaintiff’s reliance on Metro 2 as an independent source of 13 liability under the FCRA is unavailing.

14 B. Damages

15 Experian also asserts that Plaintiff has failed to allege facts sufficient to entitle her to 16 recovery of damages. The FCRA creates a private right of action for willful or negligent 17 noncompliance with § 1681i. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681n & o; Gorman v. Wolpoff & Abramson, LLP, 18 584 F.3d 1147, 1154 (2009). If a failure to comply with § 1681i is willful, the plaintiff may 19 recover either actual damages or statutory damages between $100 and $1,000, as well as any 20 appropriate punitive damages. 15 U.S.C. § 1681n(a). If a failure to comply with § 1681i is 21 negligent, the plaintiff is limited to recovery of “any actual damages sustained by the consumer as 22 a result of the failure.” 15 U.S.C. § 1681o(a)(1). Experian contends that Plaintiff has not alleged 23 facts showing entitlement to recovery under either theory.

24 1. Willfulness

25 A defendant acts “willfully” for purposes of the FCRA if the defendant knowingly or 26 recklessly disregards its statutory duties. Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. v. Burr, 551 U.S. 47, 57-58 27 (2007). “[A] company subject to FCRA does not act in reckless disregard of it unless the action is 28 not only a violation under a reasonable reading of the statute’s terms, but shows that the company

1 ran a risk of violating the law substantially greater than the risk associated with a reading that was 2 merely careless.” Id. at 69. Thus a plaintiff seeking to recover damages under a willfulness theory 3 “must allege, at a minimum, that the defendant’s reading of the FCRA is ‘objectively 4 unreasonable.’” Kirchner v. Shred-it USA Inc., No. 2:14-1437 WBS, 2014 WL 6685210, at *1 5 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 25, 2014) (quoting Safeco, 551 U.S. at 69).

6 As discussed above, Plaintiff has not sufficiently alleged that Experian’s reporting 7 contained an actual inaccuracy. Even had she done so, she has not alleged any facts showing that 8 such inaccuracy was the result of Experian’s knowing or reckless disregard of its statutory duties.
9 Plaintiff argues in her opposition that Experian recklessly disregarded its statutory duties by 10 failing to reinvestigate Plaintiff’s dispute or correct the alleged inaccuracies as prescribed by 11 industry standards, when it knew that the disputed report deviated from Metro 2. As discussed, 12 deviation from the Metro 2 format alone is insufficient to state a violation of the FCRA.

13 2. Negligence

14 In order to recover under a negligence theory, Plaintiff must plead and prove actual 15 damages resulting from Experian’s violation of the FCRA. 15 U.S.C. § 1681o(a)(1). Plaintiff’s 16 FCRA claim against Experian is based on her allegations that after Plaintiff disputed information 17 in the March 2016 Credit Report, Experian failed to reinvestigate. See FAC ¶¶ 114-28. However, 18 she does not allege facts showing that she suffered any damages flowing from Experian’s alleged 19 failure. See id.

20 Accordingly, the FAC is subject to dismissal on the ground that Plaintiff has failed to 21 allege facts showing an entitlement to damages.

22 C. Lack of Factual Specificity

23 Experian’s final argument is that Plaintiff has not provided any factual basis for her 24 allegation that Experian’s response to her dispute letter was inadequate. The Court agrees.

25 Plaintiff alleges that after she disputed the March 2016 Credit Report, Experian was 26 required to conduct a reasonable investigation and to delete any information that was not accurate.
27 FAC ¶ 115. Plaintiff then claims that each CRA was required “to send all relevant information via 28 an ACDV to the furnishers which they did not do.” Id. ¶ 116. When a consumer disputes

1 information on a credit report, the CRA must provide notification of the dispute to the furnisher of 2 the information. 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(a)(2). Thus an allegation that Plaintiff disputed a particular 3 account reported in the March 2016 Credit Report, and that Experian failed to notify the furnisher
4 of the disputed information, would state a claim under the FCRA, assuming that all other pleading 5 requirements regarding inaccuracy and damages were satisfied. However, as discussed above, 6 Plaintiff's allegations regarding the asserted inaccuracies in the March 2016 Credit Report do not 7 identify any particular account or item of information reported by Experian. Moreover, elsewhere 8 in the FAC Plaintiff alleges that "each CRA received Plaintiff's dispute letter and in response sent 9 Plaintiff's dispute to each DF via an ACDV." FAC ¶ 96. Based on that allegation, it would 10 appear that Experian did satisfy its notification obligations under the FCRA.

11 Plaintiff also alleges that Experian would have known that the furnishers' reporting of 12 certain accounts deviated from the industry standard, but Experian did not suppress that inaccurate 13 information. FAC ¶¶ 124-27. Plaintiff does not identify any specific errors or inaccuracies that 14 Experian should have suppressed. Plaintiff alleges only that Experian "would have known" that 15 "failure to report a CII given that a Chapter 13 was filed" and "reporting a past due balance post 16 confirmation" do not comport with industry standards. Id. These allegations are not sufficient to 17 state a claim under 15 U.S.C. § 1681i(a)(1).

18 Plaintiff's conclusory allegation that Experian "failed to conduct a reasonable 19 investigation," id. ¶ 123, likewise is inadequate to state a claim under the FCRA. See O'Connor v.
20 Capital One, N.A., No. CV 14-00177-KAW, 2014 WL 2215965, at *7 (N.D. Cal. May 29, 2014) 21 (No FCRA claim stated where plaintiff "fails to offer any factual allegations supporting his 22 contention that Defendant's investigation of his disputed account was unreasonable").

23 Accordingly, Experian's motion to dismiss Plaintiff's FCRA claim is GRANTED.

24 IV. TD BANK'S MOTION TO DISMISS

25 Both Claim 1 for violation of the FCRA and Claim 2 for violation of the CCRAA are 26 asserted against TD Bank. TD Bank seeks dismissal of both claims under Rule 12(b)(6).

27 A. FCRA (Claim 1)

28 The FCRA creates a private right of action against furnishers for noncompliance with

1 duties imposed under 15 U.S.C. § 1681s-2(b). Gorman, 584 F.3d at 1154. Section 1681s-2(b) 2 imposes certain obligations on a furnisher, such as a duty to conduct an investigation, when the 3 furnisher receives notice from a CRA that a consumer disputes information reported by the 4 furnisher. Id. A plaintiff is required to plead and prove four elements to prevail on an FCRA 5 claim against a credit furnisher: “(1) a credit reporting inaccuracy existed on plaintiff’s credit 6 report; (2) plaintiff notified the consumer reporting agency that plaintiff disputed the reporting as 7 inaccurate; (3) the consumer reporting agency notified the furnisher of the alleged inaccurate 8 information of the dispute; and (4) the furnisher failed to investigate the inaccuracies or further 9 failed to comply with the requirements in 15 U.S.C. 1681s-2(b) (1)(A)-(E).” Denison v.
10 Citifinancial Servicing LLC, No. C 16-00432 WHA, 2016 WL 1718220, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 29, 11 2016). A furnisher’s duties under § 1681s-2(b) of the FCRA arise “only after the furnisher 12 receives notice of dispute from a CRA.” Gorman, 584 F.3d at 1154.

13 Plaintiff’s FCRA claim against TD Bank is subheaded “Failure to Reinvestigate.” FAC ¶ 14 103-04. Plaintiff alleges that TD Bank “violated section 1681s-2(b) by failing to conduct a 15 reasonable investigation and re-reporting misleading and inaccurate account information.” Id. ¶ 16 106. Presumably, this claim is based upon TD Bank’s conduct upon receiving notice of Plaintiff’s 17 dispute regarding the March 2016 Credit Report. Plaintiff alleges that she sent dispute letters to 18 Experian and other CRAs regarding unidentified inaccuracies contained in the March 2016 Credit 19 Report, and that the CRAs in turn sent Plaintiff’s dispute to each furnisher by means of an ACDV.
20 Id. ¶¶ 94-96.

21 TD Bank moves to dismiss the FCRA claim on two grounds. First, TD Bank asserts that 22 Plaintiff has not alleged facts showing that TD Bank’s reporting was inaccurate. Second, TD 23 Bank asserts that Plaintiff has not alleged facts showing that she has suffered injury sufficient to 24 confer Article III standing. Because the argument regarding lack of Article III standing goes to 25 this Court’s subject matter jurisdiction, the Court takes up that argument first.

26 Before turning to TD Bank’s arguments, however, the Court addresses TD Bank’s request 27 for judicial notice of documents filed by Plaintiff in her bankruptcy case. See RJN, ECF 26-1.
28 The request is GRANTED, as the documents are proper subject for judicial notice. See Reyn’s

1 Pasta Bella, LLC v. Visa USA, Inc., 442 F.3d 741, 746 n.6 (9th Cir. 2006).

2 1. Article III Standing

3 “[T]he ‘irreducible constitutional minimum’ of standing consists of three elements.”
 4 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547 (2016) (quoting Lujan v. Defs. of Wildlife, 504 U.S.
 5 555, 560 (1992)). “The plaintiff must have (1) suffered an injury in fact, (2) that is fairly traceable 6 to the challenged conduct of the defendant, and (3) that is likely to be redressed by a favorable 7 judicial decision.” Id. (citing Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560-61). “The plaintiff, as the party invoking 8 federal jurisdiction, bears the burden of establishing these elements.” Id.

9 TD Bank challenges the first element, injury in fact. A plaintiff does not automatically 10 satisfy the injury in fact requirement “whenever a statute grants a person a statutory right and 11 purports to authorize that person to sue to vindicate that right.” Spokeo, 136 S. Ct. at 1549.
 12 “Article III standing requires a concrete injury even in the context of a statutory violation.” Id.
 13 “‘Concrete’ is not, however, necessarily synonymous with ‘tangible.’” Id. “[T]he risk of real 14 harm” may satisfy the concreteness requirement. Id. Moreover, “the violation of a procedural 15 right granted by statute can be sufficient in some circumstances to constitute injury in fact.” Id.
 16 “In other words, a plaintiff in such a case need not allege any additional harm beyond the one 17 Congress has identified.” Id. However, a plaintiff “cannot satisfy the demands of Article III by 18 alleging a bare procedural violation” of a statute. Id. at 1550.

19 Several courts in this district have concluded that claims of inaccurate credit reporting 20 regarding debts and debt delinquency are sufficient to satisfy the injury in fact requirement. See, 21 e.g., Mamisay v. Experian Info. Sols., Inc., No. 16-CV-05684-YGR, 2017 WL 1065170 (N.D. Cal.
 22 Mar. 21, 2017); Artus, 2017 WL 346022; Keller v. Experian Info. Sols., Inc., No. 16-CV-04643-23 LHK, 2017 WL 130285 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 13, 2017). Those courts distinguished a “bare procedural 24 violation” of the FCRA which the Supreme Court held could not establish concrete harm – for 25 example, the dissemination of an incorrect zip code – from the inaccurate reporting of a 26 consumer’s debts and debt delinquencies. Mamisay, 2017 WL 1065170, at *2 (“This inaccurate 27 reporting of debt constitutes the precise harm Congress sought to protect against in enacting the 28 FCRA, and thus, cannot be classified as a ‘mere procedural violation.’”); Artus, 2017 WL 346022,

1 at *3 (“Since Plaintiff alleges that TD Bank was notified that its credit reporting was inaccurate 2 and failed to undertake one of its duties under § 1681s-2(b), she has not merely alleged a ‘bare 3 procedural violation’ but rather a harm the court finds sufficiently concrete based on Congress’ 4 intent in enacting the FCRA”); Keller, 2017 WL 130285, at *4 (“Inaccurate reporting about 5 whether Plaintiff has a debt and whether that debt is delinquent could harm a Plaintiff’s credit and 6 employment prospects.”). This Court finds that reasoning to be persuasive and likewise concludes 7 that Plaintiff’s claim of inaccuracies in the reporting of her debts and delinquencies is sufficient to 8 satisfy the injury in fact requirement of Article III.

9 2. Inaccuracy

10 Although Plaintiff has asserted a claim which satisfies Article III’s requirements, she has 11 not pled the claim adequately. TD Bank argues that numerous courts have rejected Plaintiff’s 12 theories of liability based on the reporting of debt delinquency during the pendency of a Chapter 13 13 bankruptcy and the failure to conform to Metro 2. TD Bank’s argument is well-taken for the 14 reasons discussed in section III.A., above. Consistent with the Court’s discussion above, Plaintiff 15 might be able to allege the existence of an inaccuracy based on TD Bank’s reporting of specific 16 debt amounts or delinquencies after confirmation of Plaintiff’s Chapter 13 plan if the reporting 17 contained no mention of Plaintiff’s bankruptcy. See Devincenzi, 2017 WL 86131, at *7 (declining 18 to decide whether allegations that the “credit report contained no indication at all that the debts 19 were the subject of a pending bankruptcy . . . would be sufficient to state a claim” but granting 20 plaintiff leave to attempt to assert FCRA claim based on that theory). Plaintiff has not alleged 21 such reporting with respect to the March 2016 Credit Report, which is the only report she alleges 22 that she disputed.

23 Accordingly, TD Bank’s motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s FCRA claim is GRANTED on the 24 ground that Plaintiff has failed to allege an actionable inaccuracy.

25 B. CCRAA (Claim 2)

26 Subject matter jurisdiction in this case is based on federal question with respect to 27 Plaintiff’s FCRA claim and supplemental jurisdiction with respect to her CCRAA claim. See FAC 28 ¶ 13. Plaintiff has yet to allege a viable federal claim, and if she fails to do so this Court will

1 decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over her state law claim. See Sanford v.
2 MemberWorks, Inc., 625 F.3d 550, 561 (9th Cir. 2010) (“[I]n the usual case in which all federal-3 law claims are eliminated before trial, the balance of factors to be considered under the pendent 4 jurisdiction doctrine – judicial economy, convenience, fairness, and comity – will point toward 5 declining to exercise jurisdiction over the remaining state-law claims.”) (internal quotation marks 6 and citation omitted).

7 Accordingly, the Court DECLINES TO ADDRESS the merits of Plaintiff’s CCRAA claim 8 against TD Bank at this time.

9 V. LEAVE TO AMEND

10 Having concluded that Experian and TD Bank are entitled to dismissal of Plaintiff’s FCRA 11 claims against them, the Court must determine whether leave to amend is warranted. In deciding 12 whether to grant Plaintiff leave to amend her pleading, the Court must consider the factors set 13 forth by the Supreme Court in Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178 (1962), and discussed at length by 14 the Ninth Circuit in Eminence Capital, LLC v. Aspeon, Inc., 316 F.3d 1048 (9th Cir. 2003). A 15 district court ordinarily must grant leave to amend unless one or more of the Foman factors is 16 present: (1) undue delay, (2) bad faith or dilatory motive, (3) repeated failure to cure deficiencies 17 by amendment, (4) undue prejudice to the opposing party, and (5) futility of amendment.
18 Eminence Capital, 316 F.3d at 1052. “[I]t is the consideration of prejudice to the opposing party 19 that carries the greatest weight.” Id. However a strong showing with respect to one of the other 20 factors may warrant denial of leave to amend. Id.

21 The first factor (undue delay), second factor (bad faith), and fourth factor (undue 22 prejudice) do not weigh against granting leave to amend at this time, although the Court may well 23 have a different view in the event that Plaintiff’s counsel fails to address the deficiencies 24 addressed herein and persists in submitting pleadings consisting primarily of copy-and-paste 25 boilerplate allegations. The third factor (failure to cure deficiencies) weighs slightly against 26 granting leave to amend, as Plaintiff previously amended her pleading. Finally, with respect to the 27 fifth factor (futility of amendment), the Court has grave reservations whether Plaintiff will be able 28 to state a viable FCRA claim against Experian or TD Bank. However, because it is not clear that

1 Plaintiff cannot do so, the Court will grant her leave to amend.

2 If Plaintiff chooses to amend her FCRA claim, she shall allege with specificity what 3 reporting is attributable to each defendant and shall attach a copy of each report or allege the 4 contents of the offending trade lines verbatim. Failure to do so will be deemed an admission that 5 Plaintiff is incapable of pleading specific facts giving rise to liability under the FCRA.

6 VI. ORDER

- 7 (1) Defendant Experian's motion to dismiss the FAC is GRANTED WITH LEAVE 8 TO AMEND;
- 9 (2) Defendant TD Bank's motion to dismiss the FAC is GRANTED WITH LEAVE
10 TO AMEND as to Plaintiff's FCRA claim; the Court declines to address Plaintiff's 11 CCRAA claim unless and until Plaintiff states a viable federal claim;
- 12 (3) Leave to amend is limited to the FCRA claim discussed in this order and the related 13 CCRAA claim; Plaintiff may not add new claims or parties without express leave 14 of the Court;
- 15 (4) Any amended pleading shall be filed on or before May 4, 2017; and
- 16 (5) Failure to meet the May 4 deadline to file an amended complaint or failure to cure 17 the deficiencies identified in this Order will result in a dismissal of Plaintiff's 18 claims with prejudice.
