UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

T. K.,

Plaintiff,

v.

ADOBE SYSTEMS INCORPORATED,

Defendant.

Case No. 17-CV-04595-LHK

ORDER GRANTING WITH PREJUDICE MOTION TO DISMISS
CLAIMS FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

Re: Dkt. No. 44

Plaintiff T.K. brings this putative class action against Adobe Systems Inc. (“Adobe”) for causes of action arising out of Adobe’s sale of subscriptions to the Adobe Creative Cloud Platform (“ACCP”) to minors. Previously, the Court dismissed T.K.’s claims for injunctive relief in T.K.’s first amended complaint (“FAC”) for lack of Article III standing sua sponte, but granted leave to amend. T.K. has filed a second amended complaint (“SAC”) with amendments related to her claims for injunctive relief. Before the Court is Adobe’s motion to dismiss T.K.’s claims for injunctive relief contained in T.K.’s SAC. Having considered the parties’ briefs, the relevant law, and the record in this case, the Court GRANTS with prejudice Adobe’s motion to dismiss T.K.’s claims for injunctive relief.

I. BACKGROUND

A. Factual Background

The relevant allegations in T.K.’s SAC are as follows. In March 2016, T.K., a minor and

1 citizen of Puerto Rico, received as a gift a one-year subscription to access ACCP. ECF No. 41
2 (“SAC”) ¶¶ 11, 26. In order to access that ACCP subscription, T.K. was required to create an 3 Adobe account, which involves agreeing to Adobe’s terms of service for ACCP. Id. ¶ 27. T.K. was 4 also required to provide a credit or debit card, and T.K. provided her own debit card information.
5 Id. ¶¶ 11, 28.

6 On February 20, 2017, T.K. received an unsolicited email from Adobe informing T.K. that 7 her subscription would renew on March 20, 2017 on an annual basis for a fee of $49.99 per month
8 plus tax. Id. ¶ 31; Exh. C. T.K. did not respond to this email. SAC ¶ 31. On or about March 21, 9 2017, Adobe charged T.K. $52.99. Id. ¶ 32; Exh. D. On April 21, 2017, Adobe charged T.K. an 10 additional $52.99. SAC ¶ 33.

11 A short time after the April charge, T.K., through her parent, “contacted Adobe and 12 disaffirmed the renewal of the agreement.” Id. On April 26, 2017, Adobe refunded T.K. $52.99.
13 Id. At some unspecified time after T.K. filed the initial August 10, 2017 complaint in this case, 14 “Adobe sent $52.99 to T.K.’s debit card. T.K. did not voluntarily accept these funds.” Id. ¶ 34.
15 T.K. alleges that she was injured notwithstanding the refunds because she was denied the use of 16 these funds “beginning on April 26, 2017.” Id.

17 T.K. alleges that by refusing to initially refund both of T.K.’s monthly payments, Adobe
18 refused to allow T.K. to disaffirm the automatically renewed agreement. Id. ¶¶ 35, 36. T.K. alleges 19 that this refusal by Adobe is contrary to California Family Code § 6710, which provides minors
20 the right to disaffirm contracts. Id. T.K. alleges that Adobe misinforms its users that all sales are 21 final. Id. ¶ 42. More specifically, T.K. argues that § 10.1 of the terms of service, which states that 22 “[t]ermination of your account does not relieve you of any obligation to pay any outstanding fees,” 23 implies that “even if you cancel, you must still pay.” Id. According to T.K., this statement “is 24 contrary to the law of California and Adobe’s obligations under California and Federal law.” Id.

25 T.K. now alleges that following her disaffirmance and the filing of the second amended 26 complaint, “T.K. was required by one of her teachers to obtain a license to the ACCP for use in 27 her classroom.” Id. ¶ 45. But T.K. states that “[u]ltimately, the teacher left the school and [T.K.]

1 was not required to obtain a license” Id. T.K. further alleges that “[b]ecause of the ubiquitous
2 nature of the ACCP in education, there is a very real threat that T.K. would be required by another 3 of her teachers to obtain a license of the ACCP.” Id. ¶ 47.

4 T.K. seeks to represent the following putative class and subclass:

5 All ACCP users who are or were minor children according to Adobe’s own records 6 for the four years preceding the date on which this complaint is filed through the 7 date on which a class is certified (“Class”). Within the Class is a Subclass of 8 minors who purchased access to the ACCP and attempted to disaffirm the 9 agreement with Adobe according to Adobe’s customer service records, but were 10 charged fees according to the disaffirmed contract (“the Minors Disaffirming 11 Subclass”).

12 Id. ¶ 49.

13 B. Procedural History

14 On August 10, 2017, T.K. filed the original complaint. ECF No. 1. On November 7, 2017, 15 Adobe filed a motion to dismiss the complaint and strike the class allegations. ECF No. 17. On 16 December 14, 2017, T.K. filed her FAC. ECF No. 29. On January 2, 2018, the Court denied as 17 moot Adobe’s motion to dismiss T.K.’s original complaint. ECF No. 30. On January 5, 2018,
18 Adobe filed a motion to dismiss the FAC. ECF No. 31. T.K. filed an opposition on January 19, 19 2018, ECF No. 34, and Adobe filed a reply on January 26, 2018, ECF No. 35. On April 17, 2018, 20 the Court granted in part and denied in part Adobe’s motion to dismiss T.K.’s FAC. ECF No. 37.
21 The Court also dismissed sua sponte T.K.’s claims for injunctive relief for lack of Article III 22 standing, but granted leave to amend “because T.K. may be able to plead sufficient facts to 23 establish standing.” Id. at 25.

24 On May, 7, 2018, T.K. filed her SAC, reasserting the claims for injunctive relief. See SAC.
25 In support of her claims for injunctive relief, T.K. pled the following allegations:

26 45. Subsequent to her disaffirmance and the filing of the instant complaint, T.K.
27 was required by one of her teachers to obtain a license to the ACCP for use in her 28 class. Because her school did not have a site license for the ACCP, T.K. would have been required to obtain a license on her own. Ultimately, the teacher left the school and she was not required to obtain a license. Had T.K. acquired the license before her teacher’s departure, she would not have needed the license to the ACCP and she would have had the same issues disaffirming the contract as complained of 1 in the instant complaint.

2 46. Thus, the conduct complained of in the complaint is capable of repetition in 3 the future for T.K.

4 47. Because of the ubiquitous nature of the ACCP in education, there is a very 5 real threat that T.K. would be required by another of her teachers to obtain a license
6 of the ACCP. Thus, the damages to T.K. are capable of [repetition] in the future.

7 48. Just as with T.K., the proposed Class can be subject to the same damages
8 complained of in the instant complaint in the future if Adobe does not change its 9 practices.

10 Id. ¶¶ 45–48. On May 21, 2018, Adobe filed the instant motion to dismiss T.K.’s claims for 11 injunctive relief. ECF No. 44 (“Mot.”). On June 6, 2018, T.K. filed an opposition. ECF No. 46
12 (“Opp’n”). On June 11, 2018, Adobe filed a reply. ECF No. 51 (“Reply”).

13 II. LEGAL STANDARD

14 A. Article III Standing

15 “Constitutional [or ‘Article III’] standing concerns whether the plaintiff’s personal stake in 16 the lawsuit is sufficient to make out a concrete ‘case’ or ‘controversy’ to which the federal judicial 17 power may extend under Article III, § 2.” City of L.A. v. Cty. of Kern, 581 F.3d 841, 845 (9th Cir.
18 2009) (quoting Pershing Park Villas Homeowners Ass’n v. United Pac. Ins. Co., 219 F.3d 895, 19 899 (9th Cir. 2000) (alteration in original). “[L]ack of Article III standing requires dismissal for 20 lack of subject matter jurisdiction under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1).” Maya v.
21 Centex Corp., 658 F.3d 1060, 1067 (9th Cir. 2011).

22 The plaintiff bears the burden of establishing Article III standing. See Thompson v.
23 McCombe, 99 F.3d 352, 353 (9th Cir. 1996). To meet that burden, the plaintiff “must establish 24 ‘the irreducible constitutional minimum of standing,’ consisting of three elements: injury in fact,
25 causation, and a likelihood that a favorable decision will redress the plaintiff’s alleged injury.”
26 Lopez v. Candaele, 630 F.3d 775, 785 (9th Cir. 2010) (quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 27 U.S. 555, 560–61 (1992)). To establish an injury in fact, the plaintiff must show that he or she has 28 suffered “an invasion of a legally protected interest which is (a) concrete and particularized, and
(b) actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical” Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

“In a facial attack, the defendant challenges the sufficiency of the allegations of subject

1 matter jurisdiction in the complaint.” Payne v. Office of the Comm’r of Baseball, 2016 WL
2 6778673, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 16, 2016) (citing Love v. United States, 915 F.2d 1232, 1245 (9th
3 Cir. 1990)). When determining whether to dismiss a complaint for lack of Article III standing, a 4 court “must accept as true all material allegations of the complaint and must construe the 5 complaint in favor of the complaining party.” Maya, 658 F.3d at 1068 (citing Warth v. Seldin, 422
6 U.S. 490, 501 (1975)). “At the pleading stage, general factual allegations of injury resulting from 7 defendant’s conduct may suffice, for on a motion to dismiss we ‘presum[e] that general allegations
8 embrace those specific facts that are necessary to support the claim.” Id. (citing Lujan, 504 U.S.
9 at 561) (alteration in original). However, “[t]his is not to say that plaintiff may rely on a bare legal 10 conclusion to assert injury-in-fact.” Id.

11 B. Leave to Amend

12 If the Court determines that a complaint should be dismissed, it must then decide whether 13 to grant leave to amend. Under Rule 15(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, leave to amend 14 “shall be freely given when justice so requires,” bearing in mind “the underlying purpose of Rule 15 15 to facilitate decisions on the merits, rather than on the pleadings or technicalities.” Lopez v.
16 Smith, 203 F.3d 1122, 1127 (9th Cir. 2000) (en banc) (alterations and internal quotation marks 17 omitted). When dismissing a complaint for failure to state a claim, “a district court should grant 18 leave to amend even if no request to amend the pleading was made, unless it determines that the 19 pleading could not possibly be cured by the allegation of other facts.” Id. at 1130 (internal 20 quotation marks omitted). Accordingly, leave to amend generally shall be denied only if allowing 21 amendment would unduly prejudice the opposing party, cause undue delay, or be futile, or if the 22 moving party has acted in bad faith. Leadsinger, Inc. v. BMG Music Publ’g, 512 F.3d 522, 532
23 (9th Cir. 2008).

24 III. DISCUSSION

25 T.K. seeks injunctive relief only as part of her cause of action under the Unfair
26 Competition Law (“UCL”). Specifically, T.K. requests “an injunction requiring Adobe to conform 27 its practices to California and federal law.” SAC ¶ 99. Further, in her prayer for relief, T.K. also

1 requests “[a]n injunction that either requires Adobe to [] cease selling subscriptions to the ACCP
2 to minors or substantially change its practices regarding transactions with minors, and to otherwise
3 conform its practices with California and federal law.” Id. at 25 ¶ E. In support of her claims for 4 injunctive relief, T.K. alleges that following her disaffirmance and the filing of the SAC, “T.K.
5 was required by one of her teachers to obtain a license to the ACCP for use in her classroom,” but 6 that “[u]ltimately, the teacher left the school and [T.K.] was not required to obtain a license” Id.
7 ¶ 45. T.K. also asserts that “[b]ecause of the ubiquitous nature of the ACCP in education, there is a
8 very real threat that T.K. would be required by another of her teachers to obtain a license of the 9 ACCP.” Id. ¶ 47.

10 Adobe’s primary assertion is that T.K. has no standing to assert her claims for injunctive
11 relief because T.K. has not alleged an imminent injury. Mot. at 2. Adobe maintains that T.K. failed
12 to allege any intention to purchase another subscription to ACCP, and that T.K.’s assertion that it
13 is possible that one of her teachers may require her to purchase ACCP is conjecture and not 14 sufficient to demonstrate real or imminent harm. Mot. at 2. For the reasons stated below, the Court
15 agrees with Adobe that T.K. lacks standing to seek prospective injunctive relief.

16 To demonstrate constitutional standing for “injunctive relief, which is a prospective 17 remedy, the threat of injury must be ‘actual and imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical.’” 18 Davidson v. Kimberly-Clark Corp., 889 F.3d 956, 966 (9th Cir. 2018) (quoting Summer v. Earth 19 Island Inst., 555 U.S. 488, 493 (2009)). “In other words, the ‘threatened injury must be certainly 20 impending to constitute injury in fact’ and ‘allegations of possible future injury are not sufficient.”
21 Id. (citing Clapper v. Amnesty Int’l USA, 568 U.S. 398, 409 (2013)). “Past wrongs, though 22 insufficient by themselves to grant standing, are ‘evidence bearing on whether there is a real and 23 immediate threat of repeated injury.’” Id. (quoting City of L.A. v. Lyons, 461 U.S. 95, 102 (1983)).
24 “Where standing is premised entirely on the threat of repeated injury, a plaintiff must show ‘a 25 sufficient likelihood that [s]he will again be wronged in a similar way.’” Id. (quoting Lyons, 461 26 U.S. at 111).

27 The Court agrees with Adobe that T.K. has failed to allege the “real and immediate threat 28

1 of repeated injury” necessary to demonstrate Article III standing to seek injunctive relief. See
 2 Davidson, 889 F.3d at 966 (quoting Lyons, 461 U.S. at 102). The Ninth Circuit has clearly stated
 3 that mere “allegations of possible future injury are not sufficient.” See Davidson, 889 F.3d at 967
 4 (quoting Clapper 568 U.S. at 409). Here, T.K. does not allege any actual intention or plan to 5 purchase ACCP again in the future. Instead, T.K. alleges only possible future injury. In fact,
 6 T.K.’s own opposition states that “[t]he Complaint leaves open the possibility that Plaintiff may 7 wish, or be required, to utilize the ACCP in the future.” Opp’n at 5 (emphasis added). Because the 8 “possibility that Plaintiff may wish” is not sufficient pursuant to Davidson, T.K. has failed to 9 establish standing to seek injunctive relief on that ground. See 889 F.3d at 967.

10 In opposition, T.K. points to Ries v. AriZona Beverages USA LLC, 287 F.R.D. 523 (N.D.
 11 Cal. 2012). T.K. claims that the district court in Ries found standing because the plaintiffs had not 12 “disclaimed an interest in purchasing [the beverages] in the future.” Opp’n at 5. Based on her 13 reading of Ries, T.K. argues that she has standing because she similarly did not disclaim an 14 interest in using ACCP in the future. Opp’n at 5. However, T.K. mischaracterizes the holding of 15 Ries. In Ries, the district court held that the plaintiffs had standing to enjoin defendants from 16 making deceptive representations on their AriZona beverages even though the plaintiffs now knew 17 of the products’ contents. Id. at 533. The district court noted that the harm from deceptive
 18 beverage advertising continues even after the consumer is aware of the deceptive advertising 19 because “the fact that [consumers] discovered the supposed deception some years ago does not 20 render the advertising any more truthful.” Id. Most importantly, what distinguished the plaintiffs 21 in Ries, and what ultimately gave them standing, was that they had “stated [their] intent to 22 purchase in the future.” Id. at 533; see Phillips v. Apple, Inc., No. 15-CV-04879-LHK, 2016 WL 23 1579693 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 19, 2016) (distinguishing Ries by noting that “the plaintiffs in Ries 24 alleged that they intended to purchase AriZona beverages in the future,” while the plaintiffs in 25 Phillips did not allege an intent to consume the product at issue in the future). Unlike the Ries 26 plaintiffs, T.K. has not alleged that she intends to purchase ACCP in the future. Therefore, Ries 27 does not save T.K.’s claims for injunctive relief.
