Re: People v. Kevin G. Vanginderen

Dear Jim:

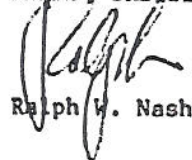

This letter will confirm arrangements to be made in City Court to resolve this matter. Kevin will plead on Monday, August 22, to petit larceny in full satisfaction of any charges relative to thefts at Cornell University. Upon his plea the People will agree to a sentence of a one year conditional discharge.

I have made arrangements to have an appropriate accusatory instrument drawn. As I noted in our telephone conversation, this matter was originally handled by the District Attorney's Office, but as it is being resolved by a misdemeanor in City Court, they would like you to handle the plea and sentence for them.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Yours very truly,

State Will Support Biotechnology Center Here Cornell One of Four Advanced Technology Centers Named

Cornell is one of four New York state universities to be designated "centers for advanced technology" by the state Science and Technology Foundation and Gov. Mario M. Cuomo.

Cuomo announced in Albany Tuesday that Cornell, Rochester, Polytechnic Institute of New York and the State University of New York at Stony Brook have been designated as centers. The center here will specialize in biotechnology.

The governor's executive budget proposes an appropriation of $2.5 million to support the program. That could mean as much as $600,000 to each of the universities.

In addition, several New York companies, including Eastman Kodak, Xerox, Bausch and Lomb, IBM and American Telephone and Telegraph, have committed more than $2.5 million to the program.

In an Albany press conference, Cuomo said "this program will create job opportunities in the years ahead" and that "thanks to the corporations and the universities, New York is once again taking a lead in shaping tomorrow's economy."

President Frank Rhodes said the designation "is a source of tremendous pride to everybody associated with the university." He called it "meaningful recognition of Cornell's continuing contribution to the vitality of our region and our state."

"The promise and the potential in our Center for Biotechnology mean an exciting future not only for the Ithaca area, but also for the State of New York, and for Cornell as a whole."

Cornell announced last year its plans to develop a biotechnology institute here. The New York State Center for Biotechnology is another component of the biotechnology program at Cornell.

The biotechnology institute is expected to be a collaboration between Cornell and several corporations that will support it. Corporate scientists will work with Cornell faculty on campus in a basic research program. All institute programs will be open and its findings available to the public.

University, Plants Union Reach 7¼% Agreement

A one-year contract agreement was reached Monday night between the university and Local 71-71A of the International Union of Operating Engineers, which represents 35 employees at the Central Heating, Water Filtration and Chilled Water Plants.

The agreement calls for a 7¼ percent wage increase "as well as other contractual improvements designed to bring contract language into line with policy and benefit improvements provided under university policy," according to a joint statement released by the negotiating teams at the conclusion of talks. Union members had ratified the agreement in a meeting Monday evening.

A previous three-year agreement was due to expire at midnight Monday. Senior Vice President William G.

Herbster said, "We view this as a fair agreement. It demonstrates what can be achieved when both parties go to the table in good faith, make reasonable proposals, have realistic expectations and negotiate responsibly."

The university and the union met seven times during this series of contract talks.

The operating engineers' union was organized at the plants three years ago.

Annual Vet College Open House to Be April 16

Saturday, April 16, has been set as the date for the 16th annual Open House of the State College of Veterinary Medicine.

Organized by the students of the state's only veterinary medicine college, the open house each year attracts thousands of visitors including families, school and club organizations and prospective students.

The 1983 Open House is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is free.

Tours of the college's research and teaching laboratories, operating rooms and animal care facilities will include more than two dozen demonstrations and exhibits, many with opportunities for visitor participation.

Visitors will be introduced to a variety of exotic animals — among them, birds and snakes — as well as the more familiar household pets and farm animals. Scheduled again this year are the popular tours of the Cornell Equine Research Park, home to more than 200 horses and ponies.

Included in the features of the 1983 Open House are presentations on pet bird nutrition, nuclear medicine, pregnancy diagnosis, preparation for surgery, care of aging animals, poisonous plants, and parasites.

Making a return at the 1983 Open House are the painted horse and the painted cow, with their internal organs outlined and labeled. Those who are more curious or courageous will want to peer — with the help of a flashlight — inside one of the stomachs of the fistulated cow. Endoscopy, EKG's and auscultation (use of the stethoscope), malformations, animal breeds, mastitis, radiology, heartworms, large and small animal skeletons, and milking machines are the subjects of other presentations.

Admissions officers will be on hand to discuss careers in veterinary medicine and requirements for admission into the college, which is one of 29 in the United States.

The Open House is scheduled rain or shine. Convenient free parking can be found in the "B" lot, off New York Route 366 between Varna and Ithaca.

Nabokov's Friend to Give Talks

A Russian scholar, novelist and poet who knew author Vladimir Nabokov when they lived in Europe will be the second speaker in this spring's Nabokov Festival here.

Nina Berberova will deliver two lectures. The first, in Russian, is set for 4:30 p.m. Monday, March 21, in 202 Urin Hall "Gift." The second, in English, will be at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 22, at the A.D. White House on "Nabokov's British Ancestry," and will deal with Nabokov's readings from 1910 to 1930.

Nabokov, who died in 1977, wrote his best-known novel, "Lolita," while a member of the Cornell faculty from 1948 to 1958. He is being honored here this semester by a program that includes speakers, a film series and an Olin Library exhibition, both of which continue through March.

Berberova, who lived in several European countries before coming to the United States in 1950, describes her meeting with Nabokov in her autobiography, "Italics Are Mine." She is now at Princeton University preparing an updated edition of the work.

After becoming well-known in Europe in the 1920s for her poetry, Berberova published her first novel, "The Last and the First." It was acclaimed as the best work by a Russian emigre, about Russian emigre life.

She published three more novels while in Europe, including "Cape Storm," written while she lived in France during the 1940s and assisted victims of the Nazi occupation.

Berberova has written biographies of the composers Tchaikovsky and Borodin. Her most recent book, "Iron Woman," is the biography of a Russian woman who was the mistress and wife of many celebrities, including H.G. Wells.

Next speaker in the Nabokov Festival will be author Herbert Gold. He will do a reading on April 13 and a lecture on April 14, both at 4:30 p.m. in the Hollis Cornell Auditorium of Goldwin Smith Hall.

Discretionary Fund for CIS

A matching grant of $150,000 from the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation will help Cornell endow a discretionary fund for its Center for International Studies.

Cornell has agreed to match the foundation grant on a two-to-one basis over the next three years. University President Frank Rhodes said Cornell "is fully prepared to undertake this fund-raising campaign — with the Hewlett Foundation's splendid challenge grant as its keystone."

Milton J. Esman, director of the center, said the CIS would use the endowed discretionary fund for two main purposes: to foster innovations in international studies, both on substantive problems and on research methodologies, and to provide research opportunities for graduate students and junior faculty.

Two examples of new problem areas the CIS would like to investigate in greater depth are the political effects of the chronic unemployment crisis in the Caribbean, and the implications of the current wave of neutralism and pacifism among European youth, Esman said.

The fund would also alleviate the problem of finding money to support research out of the country by advanced graduate students and junior faculty, according to Esman.

"First class research in international and comparative studies usually requires some travel and residence abroad," he said. "The center has been attempting to help young scholars in these ways, but available resources have been too limited to meet the legitimate demand."

The center, established in 1961, sponsors and supports international and comparative teaching and research university-wide, principally through a network of interdisciplinary faculty and graduate student committees.

TIAA/CREF Rates Listed

Teachers Insurance Annuity Association and the College Retirement Equity Fund (TIAA/CREF) recently announced both future investment returns for TIAA funds and last year's performance levels for CREF funds. Various university retirement plans for statutory and endowed employees are funded through TIAA and CREF.

Effective March 1, 1983, TIAA's new effective annual interest rate will be 12 1/4 percent. This rate will be applied to all premiums credited to accumulating annuities on or after Jan. 1, 1982.

Any annuity balances resulting from premiums paid between Jan. 1, 1979, and Dec. 31, 1981, will be credited with a total effective annual rate of 11 percent, for the current year. All balances resulting from premiums and dividends credited prior to 1979 will receive a total effective rate of 9 1/4 percent, for this year.

TIAA rates are declared annually for all balances and apply for a 12-month period. This year's rate period runs from March 1, 1983, through Feb. 29, 1984.

CREF's net rate of investment return was 22.1 percent for the twelve-month period ending Dec. 31, 1982. This includes both market value changes and dividend income, less expenses. CREF's unit value was $58.93 on Feb. 28, 1983, and had increased by 3 percent above that level as of March 9, 1983.

The CREF accumulation unit value is determined monthly, based on changes in the market or capital value of CREF's portfolio. For the most recent CREF accumulation unit value, participants can call the toll-free telephone number (800) 522-5622 from within New York State, or (800) 223-1290 from outside New York State.

Bethe Lecturer to Return

"Basic Research for Culture and Profit" will be the topic for high-energy physicist Leon M. Lederman in a lecture directed toward the general public at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 23, in Cornell University's Rockefeller A.

Lederman, the director of the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory and the Eugene Higgins Professor of Physics at Columbia University, is returning to campus for the spring portion of the 1982-83 Bethe Lecture Series.

The internationally known specialist in high-energy physics will speak on the topic of "The New Accelerators" in a lecture geared to a general scientific audience at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, March 24, in Rockefeller A. Admission to the lectures is free.

Created by the Cornell College of Arts and Sciences and the Physics Department, the lecture series honors Nobel Laureate Hans Bethe.

Lederman has been associated with Columbia as a student and faculty member for more than 25 years. He received a B.A. from City College in 1943 and the M.A. and Ph.D. from Columbia in 1948 and 1951, respectively.

It is the policy of Cornell University actively to support equality of educational and employment opportunity. No person shall be denied admission to any educational program or activity or be denied employment on the basis of any legally prohibited discrimination involving, but not limited to, such factors as race, color, creed, religion, national or ethnic origin, sex, age or handicap. The university is committed to the maintenance of affirmative action programs which will assure the continuation of such equality of opportunity.

Health Education Service at Gannett Clinic Helps Make Responsible Health Decisions

The Health Education Service at Gannett Health Center was launched in the fall of 1980 to provide opportunities for members of the Cornell community to develop health-promoting skills and attitudes necessary to make responsible decisions about personal health.

When the University Health Services expanded medical services to faculty and staff on a fee-for-service basis, the department also expanded its health education activities beyond students. "The focus of our patient and community education programs is to emphasize accident and disease prevention and the self-care skills necessary to maintain and promote a high level of well-being" according to Janis Talbot, health educator.

Each semester, a number of specialized workshops are offered which provide information on topics such as first aid, CPR, nutrition, weight control and exercise, and smoking. Therapists from the Psychological Service sponsor groups to enhance emotional health and discuss topics such as anxiety, depression, procrastination, emotional crisis and relationships.

Probably the most prevalent communicable disease on campus today is the common cold, according to Talbot. Although there is no known cure, there are effective means available to reduce discomfort temporarily.

"We have a portable, self-care display which contains several pamphlets describing self-care procedures for colds," Talbot said. "It is designed to help people learn how to identify symptoms that may indicate a need for professional medical assistance."

Throughout the year professional support is given to student organizations, such as ALERT and Alpha Epsilon Delta, that work on educational projects. Upon request, the health center provides guest speakers to groups in dorms, fraternities and sororities.

Patient education has traditionally been an essential part of medical care at the health center; fact sheets, pamphlets and bulletin board displays have been prepared to supplement clinical counseling. In addition a consumer library, located on the third floor, has been established to help patients find more in-depth information on a variety of sexual health concerns.

"A new attitude that has gained in popularity and recognition is that good health is not just the absence of disease nor is it a commodity that can be bought or sold," Talbot said. "Optimal health is something one must work for and it demands time and energy and a belief that the individual must assume primary responsibility for their own health."

Talbot and her assistant, Nancy Carrey-Beaver, are always interested in receiving suggestions. Numerous volunteer opportunities are available. They can be reached by calling 256-4782.

Magic Lanterns Turn Up in Large Quantity

Chronicle Notice Does the Job; Now for a Screen

Archivist Gould P. Colman's search for a lantern projector through the pages of the Chronicle earlier this month not only uncovered a number on campus and elsewhere but also uncovered the information that they are called magic lanterns and that there are organizations in this country, Canada and Great Britain devoted to them.

Within a few hours of a news notice appearing in the Chronicle, Colman said he had 16 phone calls notifying him of the locations of at least 20 magic lanterns on campus, some still being used.

He needs one to be able to project nearly 6,000 glass slides in University Libraries Archives, mostly scenes of the campus and Ithaca area between 1900 and 1940.

Of the many offers of a machine, Colman has settled on a mint-condition projector with all five lenses still intact to arrive any day now from the Cornell operated National Astronomy and Ionosphere Center at Arecibo in Puerto Rico.

He has also discovered that there is a Magic Lantern Society of the United States and Canada, founded in 1977. It is an offshoot of a magic lantern society in Great Britain, a group of long standing.

The American group, which held its first national convention in Rochester in 1981, prints a newsletter with all sorts of lantern and slide information and features. A recent story dealt with Lewis Carroll's interest in magic lanterns and its possible influence on his writings.

The society's chairman is Joe Koch, 819 14th Street N.E., Auburn, Wash., 98002.

Colman learned of the society from Harriet A. Peters, assistant director of placement for the Graduate School of Business and Public Information.

Incidentally, she doesn't own a projector yet, but does have a number of slides, several of them action shots from the Russo-Japanese War.

Colman said how much he appreciated the "wonderful response" to his earlier request for a projector. He wondered if the Chronicle might mention that now he needs a screen.

"A five-by-eight foot roll-down screen with or without a stand will do fine," he said.

Music

Mozart Music to be Featured

Music by Mozart will be featured in an annual concert at 8:15 p.m. Saturday, March 19, in Barnes Hall. The performing artists in the free public event are fortepianists Robert Levin and Malcolm Bilson.

Included in the program are two Mozart pieces for piano four hands: Andante and Five Variations in C Major, K. 501 and Sonata in C Major, K. 521; also two for two pianos: Larghetto and Allegro in E flat Major and Sonata in D Major, K. 448. Mozart's works for four hands and two pianos are among the earliest examples of a genre which gained prominence in the 19th century.

Dating from 1786, the Andante and Variations was conceived originally for two pianos but was changed to the more usual fourhand combination at the suggestion of Mozart's publisher. The C Major Sonata was composed in 1787, the D Major Sonata in 1781. The Larghetto and Allegro was discovered approximately 20 years ago in Czechoslovakia as a fragment of manuscript in the archives of Archduke Rudolf. Several writers have undertaken completions of the work. The completion for this concert was composed in 1982 by Robert Levin and, according to his notes, prepared for joint performance with Bilson.

The two fortepianos which will be played are replicas of two from Mozart's day: one was built in 1970 by Philip Belt after a Louis Duicken original housed in the Smithsonian Institution; the other was built in 1972 by Thomas McCobb from Belt's drawings of an original in the Toledo Museum of Art.

Levin's interest in Mozart performance dates from undergraduate years at Harvard. In his thesis "The Unfinished Works of W.A. Mozart," he analyzed three Mozart fragments and provided completions which were later published and recorded. He has received commissions to complete additional fragments and write cadenzas for leading artists. Levin headed the theory department of Curtis Institute of Music from 1968 to 1973 at the invitation of Rudolf Serkin. Since 1972 he has been a professor of music at the School of the Arts, SUNY Purchase.

Bilson has been a professor of music at Cornell since 1968, coming to Ithaca from the University of Illinois. Both Bilson and Levin perform extensively and both are deeply involved in the performance practices of the 18th century and its composers.

Bilson currently records primarily for Nonesuch Records. Other releases are on the Titanic, Cambridge and Advent labels. This spring he will begin recording all of the Mozart Piano Concerti for Deutsche Grammophon-Archiv, with John Eliot Gardner and the English Baroque Solists. Levin has made recordings for Candide, CRI, Deutsche Grammophon, Nonesuch and Turnabout.

Bilson and Levin will present the same program in New York's Merkin Concert Hall March 22.

New Personnel Director Pledges Accessibility to Employees

At an employee trustee-sponsored brown bag luncheon recently, Lee M. Snyder, director of University Personnel Services, told attendees that he would be personally available to employees and that he was interested in suggestions as to how Personnel Services could improve policies and procedures.

Snyder noted that his current schedule included tours of worksites around the Ithaca campus and that visits to the agricultural sites would include Geneva.

Snyder told the group he was impressed with the many channels of input into the decision-making process at Cornell and the many avenues of communication. "I assure you, this does not happen at all universities," he said. Snyder also assured the group of his commitment to maintain these levels of participation and communication and remarked that University Personnel Services does not make decisions without seeking the thoughts of a large number of people.

The roles of the Employee Assembly and Personnel Support Group in personnel matters will continue to be supported by University Personnel Services, Snyder said. He cited the development of the Employee Complaint and Grievance Procedure for non-academic staff as examples of the constructive activities University Personnel Services will continue to pursue.

He said his department would continue striving to serve both Cornell's departments and its employees. Stating that he is looking forward to reviewing the results of the recent survey of employees, Snyder promised to "take a look at critical issues and improve what we can."

The Long Term Disability plan, the prescription drug program, and the conversion of the endowed non-exempt employees to the Cornell University Retirement Plan were among the significant improvements in employee benefits over the past five years, increasing basic benefits expenditures significantly, Snyder said. He emphasized that these expenditures were generated through the university policy-making structure, not required by law.

This spring, for the first time, employees will receive personalized detailed statements for their benefits, he said. The individualized, computer-generated statements will be mailed to the homes of all regular full-time and part-time non-academic staff and all academic staff whose appointments are 50 percent of full-time or greater, by the end of May. Snyder responded to questions from the brown bag lunch group with a discussion of differing benefits philosophies.

Noting improvements each year in the promotion of employees from within Cornell, the new personnel director said the university will continue working on programs to advance current employees. He mentioned the concept of career ladders as a means to help employees identify their potential to progress along a planned path of career advancement. He said general guidelines to be developed by Personnel Services would recognize that not every employee takes the same path or pursues the same goals.

Snyder also expressed enthusiasm for the Recreation Club and other employee-generated programs, saying, "it takes a lot of employee involvement to make these things work," he said, and he encourages employees to get involved in such programs.

James Law Lecture Scheduled

The fourth lecture in the 1982-83 James Law Distinguished Lecturer Series will be given at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, March 24, in the James Law Auditorium, by Dr. Jean D. Wilson, professor of Internal Medicine, University of Texas. Dr. Wilson's topic is "Hormonal and Genetic Control of Sex Differentiation". Admission is free and the public is invited.

Dr. Wilson will examine the development of male and female embryos, particularly the formation of the male phenotype and the role secretions of the fetal testes play in sex differentiation. Of these secretions, testosterone is responsible for virilization of the Wolffian duct system into the epididymis, vas deferens, and seminal vesicle.

It has recently been discovered that a metabolite of testosterone, dihydrotestosterone, induces development of the prostate and male external genitalia. Dr. Wilson will discuss how impairment in the action or formation of these male sex hormones, or in the protein receptor to which they bind, results in developmental anomalies involving both internal and external genital structures.

Dr. Wilson received his B.A. from the University of Texas at Austin, and his medical degree in 1955 from the University of Texas, Southwestern Medical School. He has over 160 professional publications to his credit and is the editor of "Benign Prostatic Hyperplasia."

Brief Reports

Summer Announcement Is Now Available

The 1983 edition of the Summer Session Announcement, "Cornell Summer," was recently delivered to the same drop points as the Chronicle. The Summer Session staff requests that those who are responsible for Chronicle distribution also make copies of the announcement available to all faculty, staff and students in their building.

They also suggest that departmental offices keep copies for future reference. Additional copies are available from the Information Center in Day Hall or the Summer Session Office in B12 Ives Hall.

The announcement cover was created and drawn by Zevi Blum '57, associate professor of art. Blum's etching illustrates the theme for "Cornell Summer"—"1984: How Close Are We?"

Students, staff and community members who wish to nominate themselves or others should contact the Women's Studies Program, 332 Uris Hall, 256-6480, for details. Nominations will be open until April 14.

Book Fund Will Honor Woman, Radio Pioneer

A book fund has been established at the university in memory of Margaret Ross Cuthbert, Class of 1908, a pioneer in radio broadcasting and Supervisor of Public Affairs for the National Broadcasting Co. at the time of her retirement in 1952.

The fund, which will be used for the purchase of books in the humanities, is part of the Cornell Library Associates' Endowment Fund. The monies, which amount to $27,500, are the bequest of Alice Blinn, Cornell Class of 1917 and life-long friend of Miss Cuthbert.

Miss Blinn was an editor of the "Ladies Home Journal" from 1934 until her retirement in 1952. Miss Blinn, who died in 1982, was elected an alumni trustee of the university in 1944, becoming the second woman to serve on the Board of Trustees. She was a library associate for more than 30 years.

It was through Miss Blinn that Miss Cuthbert received her first job in radio in 1925 with station WEAJ in New York City. This station became the flag station for NBC in 1926, and Miss Cuthbert became the producer of many programs and director of Women's and Children's Programs.

Assemblies Approve Fines Collection Policy

Changes in the collection process for on-campus parking fines for faculty and staff, which was discussed in last week's Chronicle, was endorsed by the Employee Assembly by a vote of 5-4-1, and unanimously passed by the University Assembly in separate meetings last week.

The proposal will go before the Board of Trustees at that meeting later this month and, if endorsed by the board, will then go to the New York State Legislature for a Charter Change.

Brief Reports

Stop Smoking Workshop Will Be Offered In April

University Health Services, in conjunction with the Tompkins County Cancer Society, will sponsor a free workshop for members of the Cornell community who want to stop smoking.

"FreshStart" is a four-session workshop designed to help participants stop smoking by providing them with essential information and helpful strategies needed to direct efforts at stopping, according to Janis Talbot, health educator. The sessions are 1½ hours long and will be held from 7:30-9:30 p.m. April 4, 7, 11 and 14.

"FreshStart uses a straightforward, non-nonsense approach," Talbot said. "The program emphasizes not only how to stop, but how to stay off smoking. Individual situations are given more attention than is group process. The Cancer Society feels that it is significant that a person who takes two weeks to stop smoking is just as likely to stay off cigarettes as a person who takes months to stop."

Enrollment deadline is March 28. To register call the Health Education Office at Gannett Health Center at 256-4782. Classes are limited to 20 people.

Assyriologist to Talk About 'New' Language

An Italian Assyriologist who recently deciphered a "new" language — from the 25th century B.C. — will speak at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, March 17, in 230D Rockefeller Hall.

Giovanni Pettinato of the University of Rome will lecture on "The Archives of Ebla," the ancient north Syrian city whose civilization and language were virtually unknown until 1964.

The Italian expedition excavating the ground of Tell Mardikh in Syria began to discover inscriptions on clay tablets in 1974. The next year an entire library of more than 15,000 texts and fragments was uncovered.

Pettinato, the epigraphist for the expedition, deciphered the language written in cuneiform script and has continued to publish hundreds of texts.

Many of the tablets are bilingual, written in Eblaite and Sumerian, and include a 3,000 word-bilingual dictionary, the longest ever found in antiquity, according to David I. Owen, associate professor of Near Eastern Studies at Cornell.

The archive includes economic, literary, religious and mathematical documents as well as international treaties, all of which date to the 25th century B.C., Owen said.

Pettinato's talk is sponsored by the Department of Near Eastern Studies, in cooperation with Classics, History of Art, Mathematics, Modern Languages and Linguistics and the programs of Jewish Studies and Archaeology.

City and Regional Planning Offers Summer Program

Tuition for the courses is $700. Institute charges range from $150 to $375. Limited financial aid may be available in some instances.

The speaker will be Meir Pa'il, professor of military history at Tel Aviv University and a former member of the Knesset, who will be addressing the topic from an Israeli perspective.

Pa'il was a member of the Palmach prior to Israeli independence, after which he joined the Israeli Defense Forces. He served as Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces Military Academy, and as Chief of the Department of Tactics and Operational Doctrine of the Armed Forces Supreme General Staff.

Pa'il is active in the Israeli Council for Israeli-Palestinian Peace and in Sheli, the Israel Peace Party.

The series is sponsored by: Committee to Support Israeli Peace Groups, Palestine Human Rights Committee, Progressive Zionist Alliance, Government Department, Cornell United Religious Work, International Student Programming Board and Peace Studies.

The Week in Sports

Men's Lacrosse Opens Saturday

The Cornell men's lacrosse team opens up its 1983 season Saturday with a big game at home against Adelphi University, starting at 2 p.m. on Schoellkopf Field.

The Red team is anxious to begin the season and pick up where it left off in 1982 when it had an 11-2 overall record, captured its ninth straight Ivy League title and made it all the way to the semifinals of the NCAA tournament. It was the best season for the Red since 1978. Sixteen lettermen are back and there are veterans returning at nearly every position.

The Big Red should have one of its most explosive attacks in recent years, as seniors Bruce Bruno and Matt Crowley return up front. Both were first team All-Ivy a year ago, while Bruno was named third team All-American and the Ivy League Player of the Year and Crowley received honorable mention All-American honors. Bruno finished the season with 22 goals and 38 assists; Crowley with 35-17-52. Another key attackman is Kevin Cook, a transfer from Nassau Community College where he was the 1982 junior college player of the year.

Midfield is an area where the Red figures to have a great deal of depth. Among the returnees are seniors Paul Mercer and Tarik Ergin, junior Andy Phillips and sophomores Ken Entenmann, Jamie Smith and Tim Gordon. Mercer was second team All-Ivy a year ago with 16 goals and five assists, while Ergin converted on 153 of 253 faceoffs and led the team in ground balls with 106. Phillips had nine goals and four assists.

The defense will have an entirely different look this spring, as gone from last year's defensive unit are All-Americans Tim Daly and Sam Happel and fellow starter Mike Haushalter. Senior Bill Nordhausen and junior Mike Higgins both played a great deal at midfield defense in 1982, while senior Vinnie Ilardi will also receive playing time after being a goaltender during his first three years at Cornell. Senior Bob Miller, junior Kevin Loucks and freshman Steve Paletta are also being counted on. Among those who will be on the defensive midfield unit are seniors Josh Cully and Steve Fitzpatrick, and sophomores Rob Gilmartin and Steve Dadourian.

The Big Red looks solid in goal with junior Peter Ruchkin and senior J.D. Phillips. Ruchkin emerged as the starter early last year and recorded the highest save percentage by a Big Red goaltender (.765) since 1973.

SAGE CHAPEL

Director of CURW Will Be Speaker

Robert L. Johnson, director of Cornell United Religious Work, will speak at the 11 a.m. Sunday, March 20, Sage Chapel Service. His sermon topic will be "God As Father."

Johnson came to Cornell in May 1982 as director of CURW. He continues to serve as president of the National Institute for Campus Ministries, a position he has held since 1980.

Archaeology Travel Scholarships Available

Applications for Hirsch travel scholarships for summer field training for archaeology students are being accepted through April 5.

Details and application forms are available from members of the archaeology faculty or Beverly Phillips at 265 McGraw Hall between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Some 10 students, participating in properly supervised archaeological field schools and research projects in the United States and abroad, will receive up to $700 toward travel expenses. Undergraduate archaeology students will be preferred candidates, but others with a proven interest in archaeology may apply.

Adelphi, Saturday's opponent, should be one of the top teams in the nation this season. Last year, the Panthers had a 10-4 record and qualified for the NCAA tournament where they lost to Virginia (10-4) in the quarterfinals. Adelphi topped the Big Red last spring in the season opener for the Red on Long Island, 15-7, so Cornell will be out for revenge.

In other Cornell sports action this weekend, two Big Red winter teams are scheduled for competition. The women's fencing team will be at the NCAA championships at Penn State Thursday through Saturday. The squad's last competition was at the Northeastern championships at Brandeis two weeks ago, and Cornell took first place, avenging last year's second place finish. Ellen Belknap led the team with a 15-7 record, while Christine Hamori and Sio Moss fenced well in turning in 13-6 and 13-7 scores, respectively. All three performers have a shot at placing high in individual competition this weekend.

The women's polo team will oppose an alumni squad Sunday, beginning at 8:15 p.m. at the Oxley Arena. The Red currently has an 8-4 record and its last match was an 11-10 victory over the Upstate Polo Club on Feb. 26.

This post is slanderous and untrue and at minimum a public disclosure of private information going back over 25 years. I have google searched my name every year for the past ten years and this is the first time this disturbing post has ever come up. Why is it on your library site now? AFFIDAVIT OF
NELSON E. ROTH
IN SUPPORT OF
APPLICATION TO UNSEAL RECORD

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
vs.
KEVIN VANGINDEREN,

Defendant

STATE OF NEW YORK :
: ss.:
COUNTY OF TOMPKINS :

Nelson E. Roth, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

1. I am an attorney admitted to practice before the courts of the State of New York, and am one of the attorneys defending Cornell University in a civil matter just commenced in the Superior Court of California, County of San Diego by Kevin Vanginderen. I am fully familiar with the procedural facts and circumstances of this matter as set forth below.

2. I make this affidavit in support of Cornell's application pursuant to CPL §160.50(1)(d) to unseal all records and papers relating to the arrest and prosecution of the above-captioned matter, as necessary to Cornell's defense in the civil action brought by the defendant-now-plaintiff Vanginderen, which is currently pending in Superior Court of California, County of San Diego.

3. Vanginderen's complaint, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A, was served upon Cornell University on October 3, 2007, nearly twenty four years after his arrest for crimes alleged in the above-captioned matter prosecuted in this Court. A report of his arrest was published in the Cornell Chronicle on March 17, 1983. The newly commenced civil action centers around that article published on March 17, 1983. Vanginderen contends that the article is defamatory, and desires to re-write history by removing the article from the digitized copy of the Cornell Chronicle now available on-line.

4. As stated in his complaint, Vanginderen communicated by email to Cornell prior to filing suit. However, when Cornell requested Vanginderen to consent pursuant to CPL §160.50(1)(d) to an unsealing order so that Cornell could evaluate the facts surrounding his threatened claim, he abruptly declined to consent and instead filed the lawsuit, Exhibit A.

5. The alleged conduct of Vanginderen reported in the Cornell Chronicle on March 17, 1983 is at the very heart of his pending civil complaint, as revealed in the allegations of the complaint itself, wherein Vanginderen claims that the report of his arrest is false and libelous. Case law is clear that a plaintiff waives the statutory privilege accorded by CPL § 160.50 when the plaintiff files a civil action placing in issue the contents of the sealed records, thus warranting the unsealing of those records upon a proper application by the party who must defend against the civil action. See Commercial Union Insurance Co. v. Jones, 216 A.D.2d 967, 968 (4th Dep't 1995); In re Scott D., 13 A.D.3d 622, 623 (2d Dep't 2004); cf. Green v. Montgomery, 95 N.Y.2d 693, 699 (2001) (applying same waiver analysis in the context of unsealing a juvenile record).

Wherefore, Cornell respectfully requests that the records of the criminal proceeding in the above-captioned matter be unsealed forthwith, including this Court's records, the records held by the District Attorney's Office and the records held by Cornell University Police.
