1
2 3
3 4
5
6
7
8	UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
9	SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
10
11	DONALD GREEN,	CASE NO. 08CV1803 JLS (BLM)
12	Petitioner,	ORDER: (1) OVERRULING PETITIONER'S OBJECTIONS; (2)
13	VS.	ADOPTING REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION; (3)
14		DENYING PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS; (4)
15	LARRY SMALL, Warden, et al.,	DENYING REQUEST FÒR EVIDENTIARY HEARING
16 17	Respondents.	(Doc. Nos. 1 & 21.)
17
10	On September 17, 2008, Petitioner Donald Green, a state prisoner proceeding pro se and in
20	forma pauperis, filed a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus. (Doc. No. 1.) On August 14, 2009,
21	Magistrate Judge Barbara L. Major submitted a Report and Recommendation (R&R) to this Court,
22	recommending that it deny Petitioner's petition for writ of habeas corpus. (Doc. No. 21.) After this
23	Court granted an extension of time, Petitioner timely filed his objections. (Doc. No. 24.) Defendants
24	did not file a reply. For the following reasons, this Court OVERRULES Petitioner's objections;
25	ADOPTS Magistrate Judge Major's R&R DENIES Petitioner's Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus; and DENIES Petitioner's request for an evidentiary hearing.
26	FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND
27	Magistrate Judge Majors' R&R extensively lays out the procedural and factual background
28	in this matter. Plaintiff makes no specific objection to these summaries. Thus, the Court adopts
	- 1	- 08cv1803

1	by reference Magistrate Judge Majors' recitation of the facts as set forth in her R&R.
2	LEGAL STANDARD
3	Rule 72(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1) set forth the
4	duties of the district court in connection with a magistrate judge's report and recommendation.
5	"The district court must make a de novo determination of those portions of the report to which
6	objection is made," and "may accept, reject, or modify, in whole or in part, the finding or
7	recommendations made by the magistrate." 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(c); see also United States v.
8	Remsing, 874 F.2d 614, 617 (9th Cir. 1989); United States v. Raddatz, 447 U.S. 667, 676 (1980).
9	However, in the absence of timely objection, the Court need "only satisfy itself that there is no
10	clear error on the face of the record." Fed. R. Civ. P. 72, Advisory Committee Notes (1983)
11	(citing Campbell v. U.S. Dist. Court, 501 F.2d 196, 206 (9th Cir. 1974)).
12	DISCUSSION
13	Petitioner was convicted of second degree murder and the use of a firearm and was
14	sentenced to a term of twenty years to life in prison with a minimum parole date of December 2,
15	2007. (Lodgment 2 at 1.) On March 14, 2007, the Board of Parole Hearings ("Board") held
16	Petitioner's Initial Parole Consideration Hearing at Calipatria State Prison. (Id.) After the
17	hearing, the Board determined that Petitioner was not suitable for parole, presenting six reasons:
18	(1) the offense was carried out in an especially callous and dispassionate manner, (2) the motive for the crime was inexplicable, (3) Petitioner had not accepted full responsibility for
19	his actions, (4) Petitioner had an escalating record of violence, assaultive behavior and unstable social relationships, (5) Petitioner had not demonstrated evidence of participation
20	in self-help programs or evidence of a positive change, and (6) Petitioner had not demonstrated adequate plans for life after prison.
21	(R&R at 3; see also Lodgment 2 at 93-96.) Petitioner was denied parole for five years. (R&R at 22
23	Petitioner filed a petition of writ of habeas corpus in Los Angeles County Superior Court,
24	which was denied by that Court as well as the California Court of Appeal and California Supreme
25	Court. (See R&R at 4.) Thereafter, Petitioner filed the instant Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus.
26	(Doc. No. 1 ("Petition").) In his petition, Petitioner asserts three grounds for relief. First, Plaintiff
27	argues that Defendants failed to comply with California Penal Code Section 3041(a), thus
28

2 the Board violated his right to due process by failing to comply with California Code of 3 Regulations, Title 15, Section 2403(a). (Petition at 12-15.) Third, Petitioner alleges that he v 4 deprived of his Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel at his parole hearing 5 (Petition at 15-17.) 6 I. Due Process Violation - Deprivation of Liberty Interest in Parole 7 The Due Process Clause prohibits the government from depriving an inmate of a liberi 8 interest without adequate procedural safeguards. Petitioner claims that he "was entitled to ha 9 actual parole release date set at his 'Initial Parole Consideration Hearing'" after conducting a 10 "proportionality analysis." (Petition at 10-11.) By the Board not doing so, Petitioner contend 11 it deprived him of his liberty interest in parole in violation of his due process rights. 12 Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent pa 13 (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the gracordiftee or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires imore lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefor cannot be fixed at this meeting 16 Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory languards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Tho
 Regulations, Title 15, Section 2403(a). (Petition at 12-15.) Third, Petitioner alleges that he v deprived of his Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel at his parole hearing (Petition at 15-17.) I. Due Process Violation - Deprivation of Liberty Interest in Parole The Due Process Clause prohibits the government from depriving an inmate of a liberi interest without adequate procedural safeguards. Petitioner claims that he "was entitled to ha actual parole release date set at his 'Initial Parole Consideration Hearing'" after conducting a "proportionality analysis." (Petition at 10-11.) By the Board not doing so, Petitioner contend it deprived him of his liberty interest in parole in violation of his due process rights. Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent pa (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the grat of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or pa convicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires i more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefor cannot be fixed at this meeting Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory langu. California Penal Code Section 3041 recates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interes was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 4 US. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at	1	depriving him of his liberty interest in parole. (Petition ¹ at 8-12.) Second, Petitioner claims that
4 deprived of his Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel at his parole hearing (Petition at 15-17.) 6 I. Due Process Violation - Deprivation of Liberty Interest in Parole 7 The Due Process Clause prohibits the government from depriving an inmate of a liber 8 interest without adequate procedural safeguards. Petitioner claims that he "was entitled to ha 9 actual parole release date set at his 'Initial Parole Consideration Hearing'' after conducting a 10 "proportionality analysis." (Petition at 10-11.) By the Board not doing so, Petitioner contend 11 it deprived him of his liberty interest in parole in violation of his due process rights. 12 Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent parol of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or paro convicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore cannot be fixed at this meeting 16 Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). 17 In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory langue. 18 (9t Cir. 2006).). Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty inter 19 precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 10 (9th Cir. 2006).). Then, Magistra	2	the Board violated his right to due process by failing to comply with California Code of
 (Petition at 15-17.) I. Due Process Violation - Deprivation of Liberty Interest in Parole The Due Process Clause prohibits the government from depriving an inmate of a libert interest without adequate procedural safeguards. Petitioner claims that he "was entitled to ha actual parole release date set at his 'Initial Parole Consideration Hearing'' after conducting a "proportionality analysis." (Petition at 10-11.) By the Board not doing so, Petitioner contend it deprived him of his liberty interest in parole in violation of his due process rights. Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent pa (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the gravation of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or pa convicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefor cannot be fixed at this meeting Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory langue California Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interest was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, u.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found th Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumsta	3	Regulations, Title 15, Section 2403(a). (Petition at 12-15.) Third, Petitioner alleges that he was
6 I. Due Process Violation - Deprivation of Liberty Interest in Parole 7 The Due Process Clause prohibits the government from depriving an inmate of a liber 8 interest without adequate procedural safeguards. Petitioner claims that he "was entitled to ha 9 actual parole release date set at his 'Initial Parole Consideration Hearing'' after conducting a 10 "proportionality analysis." (Petition at 10-11.) By the Board not doing so, Petitioner contend 11 it deprived him of his liberty interest in parole in violation of his due process rights. 12 Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent pa 13 (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the grat 14 of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or pa 15 more lengthy period of incarceration of this individual, and that a parole date, therefor 16 Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). 17 In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory langue 18 California Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit 19 precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 112 10 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liber	4	deprived of his Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel at his parole hearing.
 The Due Process Clause prohibits the government from depriving an inmate of a liber interest without adequate procedural safeguards. Petitioner claims that he "was entitled to ha actual parole release date set at his 'Initial Parole Consideration Hearing'" after conducting a "proportionality analysis." (Petition at 10-11.) By the Board not doing so, Petitioner contend it deprived him of his liberty interest in parole in violation of his due process rights. Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent parole the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or paronviced offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires in more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore cannot be fixed at this meeting Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory langue. California Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 112 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interval was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found th Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these irrumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at States 1 and 1 and 1 actions to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	5	(Petition at 15-17.)
 interest without adequate procedural safeguards. Petitioner claims that he "was entitled to ha actual parole release date set at his 'Initial Parole Consideration Hearing'" after conducting a "proportionality analysis." (Petition at 10-11.) By the Board not doing so, Petitioner contend it deprived him of his liberty interest in parole in violation of his due process rights. Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent parol (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the grat of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or parconvicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore cannot be fixed at this meeting Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory langue California Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interest was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 415 U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found th Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Immates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 52 1 All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	6	I. Due Process Violation - Deprivation of Liberty Interest in Parole actual parole release date set at his 'Initial Parole Consideration Hearing'" after conducting a "proportionality analysis." (Petition at 10-11.) By the Board not doing so, Petitioner contend it deprived him of his liberty interest in parole in violation of his due process rights. Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent pa (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the gratof the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or pa (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the gratof the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or pa (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the gratof the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or pa (convicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore cannot be fixed at this meeting Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory langual california Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty inter was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, . U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found th Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify<th>7</th><th>The Due Process Clause prohibits the government from depriving an inmate of a liberty</th>	7	The Due Process Clause prohibits the government from depriving an inmate of a liberty proportionality analysis." (Petition at 10-11.) By the Board not doing so, Petitioner contend it deprived him of his liberty interest in parole in violation of his due process rights. Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent part of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or part convicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore cannot be fixed at this meeting Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory langue. California Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interval was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 41 (9th Circ. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major to no analyze the magistrate judge found th Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 92 (1 All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	8	interest without adequate procedural safeguards. Petitioner claims that he "was entitled to have an it deprived him of his liberty interest in parole in violation of his due process rights. Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent para (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the grat of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or para convicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore cannot be fixed at this meeting Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory languate california Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interview as deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 40 (J.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found the Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 92 ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	9	actual parole release date set at his 'Initial Parole Consideration Hearing'" after conducting a
 Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent pa (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the gravity of the current convicted offenses, or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or pa convicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires i more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore cannot be fixed at this meeting Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory languation of the Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 111 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interview as deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 40 U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found the Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Immates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 92 ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	10	"proportionality analysis." (Petition at 10-11.) By the Board not doing so, Petitioner contends that
 Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 3041, which provides in pertinent part (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the grat of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or part convicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore cannot be fixed at this meeting Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory languate california Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interest was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 40 U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found the Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Immates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9 1 All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	11	it deprived him of his liberty interest in parole in violation of his due process rights.
 (b) The panel or the board shall set a release date unless it determines that the gravity of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or pactonvicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore cannot be fixed at this meeting Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory languate California Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interviewas deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 400 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found the Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9) ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	12	Petitioner cites to California Penal Code Section 30/1, which provides in pertinent part:
 of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current of paconvicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore cannot be fixed at this meeting Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory langual California Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interest was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 40 U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found the Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9 1. All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	13
 Cal. Penal Code § 3041(a)&(b). In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory langual California Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty inter was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 40 U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found th Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 92) ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 		of the current convicted offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current or past convicted offense or offenses, is such that consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore,
In her R&R, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with Petitioner that the mandatory langue California Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms , 461 F.3d 1123, 112 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty inter was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson , 40 U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass , 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found th Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal , 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9 	16
 California Penal Code Section 3041 creates a liberty interest in parole under Ninth Circuit precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 11 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty inter was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 40 U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found th Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9 ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	17 precedent. (R&R at 7-8 (citing Sass v. California Board of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 111 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interval was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 40 U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found the Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 92 ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	18
 (9th Cir. 2006)).) Then, Magistrate Judge Major went on to analyze whether this liberty interval was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 4 U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found th Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9)¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	19
 was deprived without adequate procedural safeguards. See Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 4 U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found th Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9 ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	20
 U.S. 454, 460 (1989); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1127. At this juncture, the magistrate judge found th Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9) ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	21
 Petitioner did receive adequate procedural protections at his parole hearing, because he was afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9) ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	22 afforded an opportunity to be heard and was informed in what respects he fell short of qualify which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9) ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	23 which the United States Supreme Court has found "affords the process that is due under these circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9) ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	24
 26 27 28 ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	25
 27 28 ¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities 	26	· · ·
The end ons to the Territon are enced to the Weinfording and Tutifornites	27	circumstances." Greenholtz v. Inmates of Nebraska Penal, 442 U.S. 1, 16 (1979). (R&R at 9-10.)
	28	¹ All citations to the "Petition" are cited to the "Memorandum of Points and Authorities" page numbers.

Finally, Magistrate Judge Major recognized that the Due Process Clause "also requires that 1 2 a decision to deny parole satisfy the United States Supreme Court's 'some evidence' standard." 3 (R&R at 10 (citing Superintendent, Mass. Corr. Inst., Walpole v. Hill, 472 U.S. 445, 454-57 4 (1985); Sass, 461 F.3d at 1128-28).) After properly and thoroughly analyzing the last reasoned 5 state court decision in this case, see Ylst v. Nunnemaker, 501 U.S. 797, 801-06 (1991), the magistrate judgment found sufficient evidence to support the Board's finding that Petitioner was 6 7 unsuitable for parole. (See R&R at 10-15.) In particular, Magistrate Judge Major agreed with the 8 Superior Court's consideration of the factors laid out in the regulations guiding the Board's decision finding unsuitability for parole,² especially that the "record contains considerable 9 10 evidence supporting the Board's finding that Petitioner poses as unreasonable risk of danger to 11 society." (R&R at 13.) "Although the Ninth Circuit cautioned against undue reliance on an 12 unchanging factor, such as the commitment offense, the Board relied heavily on post-commitment 13 evidence in this case, including Petitioner's nineteen disciplinary citations." (Id.) Magistrate Judge Major also rejected Petitioner's argument that the Board misapplied the "some evidence" 14 15 standard. (R&R at 14.) Ultimately, therefore, the magistrate judge found that, although Petitioner 16 has a liberty interest in parole, adequate safeguards were in place and there was sufficient evidence 17 to support the Board's finding that Petitioner posed an unreasonable risk to society if released, 18 thus recommending that this Court deny this claim for habeas relief. (See id. at 15.)

19 Petitioner objects to several of Magistrate Judge Majors' findings. (Doc. No. 24 ("Obj.").) 20 Petitioner first objects to Respondents' argument that Petitioner, as a California prisoner, has no 21 liberty interest in parole. This objection is irrelevant, as the magistrate judge clearly disagreed 22 with Respondents and found that Petitioner does indeed have such a liberty interest. Petitioner's 23 second objection is also without merit. Petitioner contends that he did not receive adequate 24 procedural protections because he "was entitled to have an actual parole release date set at his 25 'Initial Parole Consideration Hearing'" according to a proportionality analysis, which was not 26 done. (Obj. at 3-4.) Petitioner contends that the statutory language in California Penal Code 27 sections 3041 and 3042 require the Board to "set a parole release date . . . before a determination of unsuitability, not after." (Obj. at 4.) Petitioner also contends that the Board's and Magistrate Judge Majors' findings supporting the Board's denial of parole are incorrect or inaccurate, and that his counsel failed to object at the hearing to these findings. (Obj. at 4-5.) Further, Petitioner argues that the Board's denial was not supported by sufficient evidence. (Obj. at 4-8.) The Court OVERRULES Petitioner's objection based on this due process violation claim.

28

² See Cal. Code Regs. tit. 15 § 2402(b), (d).

6 First, Petitioner was not entitled to an actual parole release date prior to the Board's finding 7 of unsuitability. The California Penal Code clearly states that Petitioner "shall be given a release 8 date unless it determines . . . that consideration of the public safety requires a more lengthy period 9 of incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore, cannot be fixed at this 10 meeting..." Cal. Penal Code § 3401(b). The plain language of the statute, therefore, provides 11 that a determination regarding Petitioner's suitability for parole and the consideration of the public 12 safety occurs prior to setting a release date.³ In this case, the Board found that Petitioner was unsuitable and that "consideration of the public safety require[d] a more lengthy period of 13 14 incarceration" and therefore did not need to fix a release date at this hearing.

15 Second, Petitioner argues that he was not afforded procedural safeguards because, though 16 he was represented by counsel at the hearing, his counsel "failed to object to the board relying 17 upon factors in denying petitioner parole." (Obj. at 4.) First, as discussed infra, the Court agrees 18 with the magistrate judge and finds that Petitioner has not established ineffective assistance of 19 counsel. However, even if true, counsel's failure to object to the Board's reliance on factors 20 Petitioner believes are incorrect does not amount to a violation of due process. Petitioner must be 21 "afford[ed] an opportunity to be heard" and given the reasons why parole was denied. Greenholtz, 22 442 U.S. at 16. "The Constitution does not require more." Id. Here, Petitioner was given the 23 opportunity to present argument and submit evidence on his behalf. (See Lodgment 2 at 62-71, 24 87-92.) He also answered questions relating to the factors the Board considers in the suitability 25 analysis. (Id. at 12-92.) After the hearing, Petitioner was informed of the reasons why he was 26 denied parole. (Id. at 93-96.) Counsel's alleged failure to object to these finding does not equate

27

28

³ The fact that section 3401(a) states that the board "shall normally set a parole date" does not change this analysis. Cal. Penal Code § 3401(b).

1 to a deprivation of the procedural safeguards set forth by the United States Supreme Court.

2 Lastly, the Court finds that the magistrate judge correctly applied the "some evidence" 3 standard to the Board's determination and properly found that this standard is satisfied. As 4 Petitioner did in his petition, he again argues that the relevant inquiry is whether there is "some 5 evidence" that the Board constitutes a "current threat to safety" and not whether there is "some 6 evidence" supporting the Board's denial in general. (Obj. at 5; Petition at 26 (citing Hayward v. 7 Marshall, 512 F.3d 536, 543 (9th Cir. 2008).) The magistrate judge and the Court agree that this 8 is the correct standard, and the transcript of the proceedings make clear that this was the standard 9 which the Board applied. (See Lodgment 2 at 93 (concluding that "the prisoner is not suitable for parole and would pose an unreasonable risk of danger to society or a threat to public safety if 10 11 released from prison").) Thus, this objection is moot.

12 Moreover, the factors upon which the Board relied support this "threat to public safety" 13 finding. Although Petitioner contends that the factors which the Board should consider under 14 California Code of Regulations § 2402(d) have been met, specifically that he "has 6 out of 9 15 factors tending to show suitability," the evidence does not support this. (Obj. at 6-7.) The fact 16 that there is some positive aspects of Petitioner's behavior, such as Petitioner's vocational training, 17 work record, and that Petitioner has engaged in some rehabilitative programs does not prevent the board or the Court from finding that "some evidence" supports a finding that Petitioner may be a 18 19 threat to society. In fact, the Board considered these factors and found that the "positive aspects of 20 [Petitioner's] behavior do not outweigh the factors for unsuitability." (Lodgment 2 at 97.) 21 Specifically, the Board relied on Petitioner's nineteen disciplinary citations, "many of which 22 [were] for serious misconduct such as mutual combat and battery." (R&R at 11; Lodgment 3 at 1-23 2.) In fact, Petitioner was recently involved in an altercation with an inmate and attempted battery 24 on a peace officer. (R&R at 11; Lodgment 3 at 1-2.) Moreover, a psychologist diagnosed 25 Petitioner with antisocial personality disorder. (Id.) Thus, the Board properly found Petitioner 26 poses an unreasonable risk of danger to society at that time, and recommended that Petitioner 27 continue to demonstrate positive change by remaining disciplinary free and fully participating in 28 self-help programs. (R&R at 3 (citing Lodgment 2 at 99-100).) The Court finds, therefore, that Petitioner's argument that the Board misapplied the "some evidence" standard is without merit.

 For those reasons, Petitioner's objection is OVERRULED and the Court ADOPTS Magistrate Judge Major's recommendation..

4

II.

Due Process Violation – California Code of Regulation, title 15, Section 2403

5 Petitioner's second claim is for a due process violation arising from the Board's alleged 6 failure to establish a uniform term of imprisonment as set forth in California Code of Regulations, 7 title 15, section 2403. (Petition at 12-15.) Petitioner contends that this regulation requires his 8 release date to be set pursuant to the regulations' matrix of base terms. (Id.) Magistrate Judge 9 Major first recognized that the claim, although couched as a due process violation, is really a 10 review of the Board's application of California law. (R&R at 13.) Magistrate Judge Major then 11 went on to find that it did not have jurisdiction to review the Board's application of California law 12 because "[i]n conducting habeas review, a federal court is limited to deciding whether a conviction 13 violated the Constitution, laws, or treatises of the United States." (R&R at 15 (quoting Estelle v. 14 McGuire, 502 U.S. 62, 67-68 (1991).) This Court agrees.

The Court further agrees that, even if the Court did have authority to grant Petitioner federal habeas relief, the claim would fail on its merit. California Code of Regulations, Title 15, Section 2403(a) clearly articulates that the base term is only set for a lifetime prisoner who is found to be suitable for parole. See Cal. Code. Regs. tit. 15 § 2403(a); see also Cal. Penal Code § 3041(b); In re Dannenberg, 34 Cal. 4th 1061, 1098-99 (Cal. 2005). Because the Board found that Petitioner was not suitable for parole, a base term did not need to be set.

Petitioner's objection is the same as his original claim, which has already been rejected by the magistrate judge and now by this Court. Thus, Petitioner's objection is OVERRULED and Magistrate Judge Major's recommendation is ADOPTED.

24

III. Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

Petitioner's third claim for relief is that he was denied his Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel. (Petition at 15-17.) Petitioner argues that counsel's performance at his parole hearing prejudiced his defense. (Id. at 15-16.) Magistrate Judge Major recommends the Court deny this claim because "the United States Supreme Court has not 'clearly established' that the Sixth Amendment right to counsel applies to parole hearings, or that due process requires inmates to be represented by counsel at such hearings." (R&R at 16 (citing Pennsulvania v. Finley, 481 U.S. 551, 555 (1987); Greenholtz, 442 U.S. at 16; Dorado v. Kerr, 454 F.2d 892, 896 (9th Cir. 1972)).) Further, California law requiring appointment of counsel at initial parole hearings does not entitle Petitioner to habeas relief. (R&R at 17 (citing Bonin v. Calderon, 59 F.3d 815, 842 (9th Cir. 1995)).)

Petitioner's objection does not address this finding. Instead, Petitioner focuses on his counsel's performance at the hearing. He argues that "[c]ounsel should have made a presentation at the opening of the hearing based on the factors tending to demonstrate this inmate's suitability as opposed to unsuitability contained in the regulations." (Obj. at 9.) This objection is without merit.

12 First, the Court agrees that Petitioner's ineffective assistance of counsel claim cannot 13 provide the basis for habeas relief. Further, even if the Court were to proceed on the claim, it would fail on its merits. To succeed on this claim, Petitioner must establish that counsel's 14 15 performance was deficient and that this performance prejudiced his defense. Strickland v. 16 Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 687-89 (1984). Counsel's performance must fall within an "objective 17 standard of reasonableness." Id. The magistrate judge found that counsel's performance was not 18 deficient and that, even if it were, the factors demonstrating Petitioner's unsuitability for parole 19 make it unlikely that counsel's performance prejudiced Petitioner. (R&R at 18-19.) This Court 20 agrees. 21 Petitioner's objection focuses on counsel's lack of an opening statement. However, 22 Magistrate Judge Major addressed this argument in her R&R: 23 While the failure to make an opening or closing statement may fall below an objective standard of reasonableness in other situations, counsel's performance here was entirely 24 reasonable. At the outset of the hearing, the Presiding Commissioner and Petitioner's attorney discussed whether an opening statment was necessary. . . The record reflect that 25 opening statement are not customary and that Petitioner's attorney did not think there were any unusual facts or circumstances in this case that would warrant an opening statement. 26

(R&R at 18-19 (citing Lodgment 2 at 11-12.) This Court agrees with this reasoning and therefore Petitioner's objection is OVERRULED. The Court ADOPTS Magistrate Judge Major's recommendation.

1	CONCLUSION
2	For the reasons stated above, the Court OVERRULES Petitioner's objections, ADOPTS
3	Magistrate Judge Major's R&R in its entirety, DENIES Petitioner's petition for writ of habeas
4	corpus, and DENIES Petitioner's request for an evidentiary hearing.
5
6	IT IS SO ORDERED.
7
8	DATED: March 11, 2010
9	Honorable Janis L. Sammartino
10	United States District Judge
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
20
21
22 23
23 24
24 25
23 26
20 27
27
20		