Defendants.

I. INTRODUCTION

On February 8, 2013, Counter-Defendant Wade Brent filed a motion for protective order to preclude Counter-Claimant, The Welk Group, from questioning him at deposition regarding the contents of an email dated October 5, 2009.¹ [ECF No. 186.] Following his December 18, 2012 deposition,² Brent has not been questioned by Welk about the email at issue and now invokes his

²Brent attended a day-long deposition in 2010 in his capacity as putative class-representative before District Judge Battaglia granted the Welk Defendants' motion for summary judgment dismissing Plaintiffs' complaint.. See Kenny Decl. at para. 2.

Fifth Amendment right to remain silent to prevent counsel for Welk from raising the subject at any future depositions.³ Id. at 3:16-21; 5:15-18.

Welk objects to Brent's invocation of the privilege on the grounds it is overbroad and generalized as well as lacking in statutory support, which raises the issue of whether Brent's concern regarding the possibility of criminal prosecution is objectively reasonable. [ECF No. 187 at 3:10-25.] Welk contends Brent's invocation of the right against self-incrimination is frivolous and requests the Court order Brent to pay fees and costs incurred by Welk to respond to his motion.

Brent argues despite Welk's objection, he has made an adequate offer of proof to support his Fifth Amendment right to remain silent through the declarations of his lawyer (a former prosecutor) and himself. Brent states his invocation of the right was not "blanket" in that he attended his deposition as noticed and answered other questions posed to him that did not implicate the October 5, 2009 email. Brent also contends he should not have to divulge the authority under which he fears prosecution because to do so would undermine the very right against self-incrimination that he seeks to invoke. [ECF No. 188.]

II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

A. Protective Order

Under Rule 26 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a party may move for a protective order to protect a himself from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26c(1). In its protective order, a Court may forbid disclosure or forbid inquiry into certain matters as well as limit the scope of disclosure to certain matters. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26c(1)(A), (D). Specifically, under Rule 26c, the Court has "broad discretion ... to decide when a protective order is appropriate and what degree of protection is required." Seattle Times Co. v. Rhinehart, 467 U.S. 20, 36 (1984).

³On December 18, 2012, Counter-Defendant Wade Brent sat for deposition regarding the counterclaim brought against him by Counter-Claimant, The Welk Group. After a few hours of testimony, counsel for Brent informed Welk that questions regarding the October 5, 2009 email were attorney-client privileged and barred questions regarding the upper portion of the email at issue. At a second deposition, conducted on January 25, 2013, counsel for Brent informed Welk's counsel that instead of the attorney-client privilege, the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination applied to the top portion of the October 5, 2009 email. See Kenny Decl. at para. 2-4.

B. Invocation of the Fifth Amendment Privilege

"The Fifth Amendment 'can be asserted in any proceeding, civil or criminal, administrative or judicial, investigatory or adjudicatory; and it protects against any disclosure which the witness reasonably believes could be used in a criminal prosecution or could lead to other evidence that might be so used." United States v. Bodwell, 66 F.3d 1000, 1001 (9th Cir. 1995) (per curiam) (quoting Kastigar v. United States, 406 U.S. 441, 444-445 (1972)). The propriety of invoking the Fifth Amendment privilege depends on whether the risk of prosecution is substantial and real and not merely fanciful." In re Corrugated Container Antitrust Litig., 662 F.2d 875, 883 (D.C. Cir. 1981). Nevertheless, an assertion of the privilege does not require an imminent criminal prosecution or investigation. "[T]he right to assert one's privilege against self-incrimination does not depend upon the likelihood, but upon the possibility of prosecution." In re Master Key Litigation, 507 F.2d 292, 293 (9th Cir. 1974). The possibility of prosecution exists where the statute of limitations has not run, or there are no other concrete indications that criminal prosecutions are barred. Doe v. Glanzer, 232 F.3d 1258, 1263 (9th Cir. 2000).

III. DISCUSSION

In the context of deposition testimony, in order to assert the Fifth Amendment privilege, Brent must answer all questions regarding the upper portion of the October 5, 2009 email that do not pose a risk of self-incrimination. See e.g. SEC v. Thomas, 116 F.R.D. 230, 234 n.7 (D.Utah 1987); Wright & Miller, 8 Fed. Prac. & Proc. Civ. § 2018 (3d ed.). Specifically, he may claim the privilege in response to each individual deposition question when he has "reasonable cause" to believe an answer would lead to self-incrimination. Hoffman v. United States, 341 U.S. 479, 486 (1951). Currently, no questions have been asked of Brent as to the upper portion of the October 5, 2009 email. So while Brent has answered other questions posed to him at his deposition, his invocation of the privilege at this point is an improper "blanket" assertion because he has neither heard, nor answered Welk's specific questions as to the top portion of the October 5, 2009 email. Without a record of Welk's proposed questions and Brent's responses or assertions of the privilege, the Court cannot make a determination at this point about which questions, if any, entitle Brent to claim the privilege. Moreover, the Court has reviewed the portion of the October 5, 2009 email which is time-stamped 8:14 p.m., and it is not apparent from the material what federal criminal statue would be implicated by questioning on the subject. While it is not necessary for Brent to reveal the criminal statue(s) that may be at issue as Welk suggests, the Court nevertheless must have a record from which to work in order to determine the objective reasonableness of Brent's concerns about the risk of prosecution. Accordingly, the Court DENIES IN PART Brent's motion and orders Brent to appear for deposition regarding that portion of the October 5, 2009 email which is time-stamped 8:14 p.m. The Court's order does not preclude Brent from claiming the Fifth Amendment privilege during deposition where reasonable cause exists. However, Brent must do so on a question-by-question basis. Once an official record of Brent's deposition has been made, that portion of the deposition transcript addressing the October 5, 2009 email shall be made available to the Court within ten (10) days. Upon receipt of the relevant portions of the deposition transcript, the Court will determine whether Welk's questions pose real, substantial hazards of selfincrimination for Brent. See Neff, 615 F.2d at 1240 (explaining the court can conduct an in camera "examination of the questions, their setting, and the peculiarities of the case.").

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Welk's request for Brent to pay the fees and costs it incurred to respond to his motion is DENIED without prejudice. Without a record of the parties' questions and answers, a sanctions award would be unsupported and premature at this time. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(A)(iii); 37(a)(5)C.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
