DEFENDANTS WELLS FARGO
BANK, N.A. AND WELLS FARGO
HOME MORTGAGE’S MOTION TO DISMISS, AND (4) GRANTING DEFENDANT FIRST AMERICAN
TITLE INSURANCE COMPANY’S MOTION TO DISMISS

(Doc. Nos. 8 & 11)

Presently before the Court are Defendants Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. and Wells Fargo Home Mortgage’s (collectively “Wells Fargo”) motion to dismiss (Doc. No. 8 (Wells Fargo MTD)) and Defendant First American Title Insurance Company’s motion to dismiss. (Doc. No. 9 (First American MTD).) Also before the Court are Plaintiff’s oppositions (Doc. Nos. 16 (Opp. to Wells Fargo’s MTD) & 17 (Opp. to First Am.’s MTD)) and Defendants’ replies. (Doc. Nos. 18 (Reply ISO First Am.’s MTD) & 20 (Reply ISO Well’s Fargo’s MTD).) Having fully considered the legal and factual issues

1 surrounding these motions, the Court GRANTS both motions to dismiss.

2 BACKGROUND

3 Plaintiff Jimit Mehta is “a co-owner as tenants in common . . . of the real property located at 4 135 5th Street, Encinitas, CA 92024.” (Doc. No. 1, Ex. A at 151–230 (FAC) ¶ 2.) Plaintiff 5 “refinanced a prior loan secured by [his] Real Property on . . . February 26, 2007 by signing a 6 promissory note in favor of WFBNA.” (Id. ¶ 7.) This loan “was in the amount of two million” 7 dollars. (Id. ¶11.) On “March 23, 2009, [Wells Fargo] and FIRST AMERICAN . . . claimed that 8 Plaintiff was in default on the Loan as reported on the Notice of Default and Election to Sell Under 9 Deed of Trust (‘NOD’). (Id. ¶ 8.) Defendant First American “recorded a Notice of Trustee Sale . .
10 . on June 26, 2009,” with the sale scheduled for July 16, 2009. (Id. ¶ 12.)

11 On July 9, 2009, Plaintiff hired counsel “to negotiate a loan modification on his behalf.” (Id.
12 ¶ 13.) On July 13, 2009, Plaintiff submitted a loan modification package to Wells Fargo. (Id. ¶ 14.) 13 Plaintiff’s counsel<sup>1</sup> “spoke with an agent of [Wells Fargo] by the name of Debra DeCristoforo . . . who 14 stated that [Wells Fargo] owned the Loan and that a complete loan package had been received.” (Id.
15 ¶ 15.) Ms. DeCristoforo allegedly told Plaintiff’s counsel that Plaintiff’s “file was being escalated for 16 the postponement of the Trustee’s Sale.” (Id. ¶ 16.) On July 29, 2009, Plaintiff’s counsel “spoke with 17 an agent of [Wells Fargo] by the name of Josh” who told counsel “that the financial worksheet and 18 profit and loss statements needed to be signed and dated.” (Id. ¶ 17.) Plaintiff claims that he 19 complied. (Id.) On August 8, 2009, counsel again “spoke with an agent of [Wells Fargo] by the name 20 of Sarah” who told counsel “that no negotiator had yet been assigned and to call back.” (Id. ¶ 18.)
21 Counsel again called Wells Fargo on August 14, 2009. (Id. ¶ 19.) According to Plaintiff, counsel 22 spoke with “Andrea” who said “that she was emailing the Foreclosure Department to escalate the file 23 and postpone the trustee’s sale date.” (Id.) According to Plaintiff, the “sale date was postponed and 24 the new sale date was [] set for October 6, 2009.” (Id.)

25 Counsel placed another call to Wells Fargo on August 21, 2009 and discovered that Wells 26 Fargo believed “that Plaintiff had called in and requested cancellation of the workout, which was not

27 28 <sup>1</sup> The term “counsel” in this Order encompasses both Plaintiff’s attorney and those working for Plaintiff’s attorney.

1 true.” (Id. ¶ 20.) When they cleared up that issue, Defendant “placed Plaintiff in a trial modification.”
2 (Id. ¶ 21.) “Plaintiff complied with the payment terms of the trial modification and made every 3 payment on time.” (Id. ¶ 23.) As such, “the trustee’s sale date was again postponed . . . to January 4 5, 2010.” (Id.)

5 Subsequently, Defendant Wells Fargo sought further information including “a copy of the 6 divorce decree, hardship letter, and updated bank statements for Plaintiff’s business and personal tax 7 returns.” (Id. ¶ 24.) Plaintiff sent almost everything, but only a part of his divorce decree. (Id. ¶¶ 8 24–25.) When counsel spoke with Wells Fargo on November 30, 2009, she was told “that the 9 modification had been cancelled because all pages of the divorce decree had not been received and 10 that the file would have to be resubmitted to complete a loan modification.” (Id. ¶ 26.) Plaintiff 11 submitted that information on December 10, 2009 and was told to call back “to set up another trial 12 modification.” (Id. ¶ 27.)

13 When Plaintiff’s counsel called back, she was told “that Plaintiff had to wait for the file to be 14 submitted to loss mitigation before financials could be reviewed.” (Id. ¶ 28.) When counsel again 15 called, Wells Fargo’s employee told her “that the file was still not in the loss mitigation department” 16 but “confirmed receipt of the fax and all required items.” (Id. ¶ 29.) That employee also “stated that 17 she was escalating the file to loss mitigation.” (Id.) Later another Wells Fargo employee stated “that 18 the file had been escalated and that [Wells Fargo] was postponing the trustee’s sale date.” (Id. ¶ 30.)

19 However, on January 5, 2010, Plaintiff found out that the sale would be held as scheduled. (Id.
20 ¶ 31.) Moreover, Plaintiff’s counsel was told “that the file had never been escalated.” (Id. ¶ 32.)
21 However, the employee told counsel that he would attempt to have the sale postponed. (Id.) Shortly 22 thereafter, counsel was told “that the file had been escalated and the loss mitigation department had 23 not responded.” (Id.) After further phone calls to Wells Fargo produced no result, counsel called First 24 American and talked with an employee who told her “that he was going to put the trustee’s sale on 25 hold until he could confirm with [Wells Fargo] whether or not [it] would postpone the trustee’s sale.” 26 (Id. ¶¶ 33–37.) However, a further call to Wells Fargo determined “that [Wells Fargo] was taking 27 Plaintiff’s Residence to sale.” (Id. ¶ 38.) The sale occurred later that day. (Id. ¶ 42.)

1 LEGAL STANDARD

2 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) permits a party to raise by motion the defense that 3 the complaint “fail[s] to state a claim upon which relief can be granted,” generally referred to as a 4 motion to dismiss. The Court evaluates whether a complaint states a cognizable legal theory and 5 sufficient facts in light of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a), which requires a “short and plain 6 statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Although Rule 8 “does not 7 require ‘detailed factual allegations,’ . . . it [does] demand[] more than an unadorned, the-defendant-8 unlawfully-harmed-me accusation.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, – US — , 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009) 9 (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007)). In other words, “a plaintiff’s 10 obligation to provide the ‘grounds’ of his ‘entitle[ment] to relief’ requires more than labels and 11 conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do.” Twombly, 12 550 U.S. at 555 (citing Papasan v. Allain, 478 U.S. 265, 286 (1986)). “Nor does a complaint suffice 13 if it tenders ‘naked assertion[s]’ devoid of ‘further factual enhancement.’” Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. at 1949 14 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557).

15 “To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted 16 as true, to ‘state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’” Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 17 570); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). A claim is facially plausible when the facts pled “allow[] the 18 court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Iqbal, 19 129 S. Ct. at 1949 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). That is not to say that the claim must be 20 probable, but there must be “more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.” Id.
21 Facts “‘merely consistent with’ a defendant’s liability” fall short of a plausible entitlement to relief.
22 Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557). Further, the Court need not accept as true “legal 23 conclusions” contained in the complaint. Id. This review requires context-specific analysis involving 24 the Court’s “judicial experience and common sense.” Id. at 1950 (citation omitted). “[W]here the 25 well-pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, the 26 complaint has alleged—but it has not ‘show[n]’—‘that the pleader is entitled to relief.’” Id.

1 ANALYSIS

2 I. DEFENDANTS' REQUESTS FOR JUDICIAL NOTICE

3 Both Wells Fargo and First American have requested that this Court take judicial notice of 4 certain documents. (See Doc. Nos. 8-2 (Wells Fargo's RJN) & 11-1 (First Am.'s RJN).) Generally 5 on a motion to dismiss, a court may only consider three things: (1) "allegations contained in the 6 pleadings," (2) "exhibits attached to the complaint," and (3) "matters properly subject to judicial 7 notice." Swartz v. KPMG LLP, 476 F.3d 756, 763 (9th Cir. 2007) (citation omitted). However, a 8 Court may also "consider a writing referenced in a complaint but not explicitly incorporated therein 9 if the complaint relies on the document and its authenticity is unquestioned." Swartz, 476 F.3d at 763 10 (citation omitted).

11 Wells Fargo asks the Court to take notice of the Notice of Right to Cancel. (Wells Fargo's 12 RJN at 1.) They do not, however, explain into which of the above-listed categories this document 13 falls. And the Court cannot find a permissible avenue for its consideration. It is not a matter properly 14 subject to judicial notice under Federal Rule of Evidence 201. And although the First Amended 15 Complaint (FAC) alleges that Plaintiff did not receive "two copies . . . the Notice of Right to Cancel," 16 this document is not encompassed by the rule allowing consideration of "a writing referenced in a 17 complaint but not explicitly incorporated therein" because the complaint does not "rel[y] on the 18 document." Swartz, 476 F.3d at 763. This evidence is more properly received on a motion for 19 summary judgment. Therefore, Wells Fargo's request for judicial notice is DENIED.

20 First American seeks judicial notice of five documents: (1) the Deed of Trust, (2) Substitution 21 of Trustee relating to the Deed of Trust, (3) Notice of Default and Election to Sell, (4) Notice of 22 Trustee's Sale, and (5) Trustee's Deed Upon Sale. (First Am.'s RJN at 2.) Plaintiff has not opposed 23 this request. The Court finds that each of these documents is properly judicially noticed. All are 24 publicly recorded and their authenticity is not in dispute. Further, they are each repeatedly referenced 25 in the FAC. As such, First American's request for judicial notice is GRANTED.

1 II. DEFENDANTS’ MOTIONS TO DISMISS

2 The FAC alleges fourteen causes of action, all of which are pled against Wells Fargo and all 3 but three of which are pled against First American. Both parties challenge all of these claims in their 4 motions to dismiss.

5 A. Truth In Lending Act Claim

6 Plaintiff’s first cause of action is for violations of the Truth in Lending Act (TILA) against 7 Defendant Wells Fargo only. He claims that he “did not receive all required ‘material disclosures,’ 8 including but not limited to two copies of each of the Notice of Right to Cancel containing the correct 9 date of expiration of the cancellation period for the transaction.” (FAC ¶ 53.) Further, Plaintiff 10 alleges that he rescinded his loan on January 19, 2010 but Defendants have failed to take appropriate 11 action. (Id. ¶¶ 49 & 55–57.) From this, Plaintiff seeks both damages and rescission of the loan 12 transaction.

13 Wells Fargo argues that this claim must be dismissed because it is barred by the statute of 14 limitations.<sup>2</sup> (Wells Fargo’s MTD at 5.) It asserts that a damages claim must be brought within one 15 year of the occurrence of the TILA violation which is “the date the loan transaction is consummated.”
16 (Id.) Since the loan was consummated on February 16, 2007, Plaintiff’s complaint, filed on January 17 13, 2010, was not within that window.

18 Further, Wells Fargo also argues the rescission claim is time barred. (Id.) This is because the 19 right to rescind under TILA expired when the trustees sale took place. (Id. at 6.) Since the foreclosure 20 sale was January 5, 2010 and Plaintiff did not attempt to rescind until January 19, 2010, he could no 21 longer exercise his right to rescind. (Id.) Wells Fargo also argues that “Plaintiff’s failure to allege 22 tender dooms [his] TILA rescission claim.” (Id.)

23 The Court agrees with Wells Fargo. Under 15 U.S.C. § 1635(f), “An obligor’s right of 24 rescission shall expire three years after the date of consummation of the transaction or upon the sale 25 of the property, whichever occurs first, notwithstanding the fact that the information and forms 26 required under this section or any other disclosures required under this part have not been delivered

27
28 <sup>2</sup> Since the Court denied Wells Fargo’s request for judicial notice with respect to the Notice of Right to Cancel, the arguments based on that document are not addressed here. (See Wells Fargo’s MTD at 4–5.)

1 to the obligor.” 15 U.S.C. § 1635(f) (emphasis added); see also 12 C.F.R. § 226.23(a)(3) (stating 2 same). The Ninth Circuit has unequivocally stated that the sale of property is an absolute bar to 3 rescission. Meyer v. Ameriquest Mortgage Co., 342 F.3d 899, 902 (9th Cir. 2003) (citing 12 C.F.R.
4 § 226.23(a)(3)); see also Hefferman v. Bitton, 882 F.2d 379, 383–84 (9th Cir. 1989); Rosal v. First 5 Fed. Bank of Cal., 671 F. Supp. 2d 1111, 1124 (N.D. Cal. 2009). This tracks the statute’s and 6 regulation’s language which offer no flexibility in this requirement. See Meyer, 342 F.3d at 903 (“The 7 regulation is clear: the right to rescind ends with the sale.”).

8 Plaintiff’s counter-arguments do not rebut this point. Plaintiff claims that “the Trustee’s sale 9 was void or voidable” and “[n]o valid sale ever took place.” (Opp. to Wells Fargo’s MTD at 4.)
10 However, Plaintiff’s FAC provides no basis on which the sale could be avoided and Plaintiff offers 11 no other basis for avoiding the force of TILA’s explicit limitations period.

12 Since Plaintiff’s property has been sold in this case Wells Fargo’s motion to dismiss must be 13 GRANTED as to his TILA rescission claims. The statute and the regulation are clear, even if Plaintiff 14 did not properly receive notice of his right to cancel, his right to rescission expired on January 5, 2010
15 when the property was sold. And since Plaintiff cannot possibly correct this deficiency, the TILA 16 rescission request must be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

17 Next, the Court also finds that the damages claims must be DISMISSED WITH 18 PREJUDICE. As Plaintiffs point out, TILA damages claims for disclosure violations must be 19 brought within one year of the date a loan transaction is consummated. King v. California, 784 F.2d 20 910, 915 (9th Cir. 1986); 15 U.S.C. § 1640(e). Thus, to the extent that Plaintiff’s damages claim is 21 based upon Wells Fargo’s alleged failure to provide all required disclosures, the limitations period 22 expired on February 16, 2008. Further, Plaintiff cannot obtain damages for Wells Fargo’s “fail[ure] 23 to comply with the rescission provisions of 12 CFR 226.23” because, as discussed above, Plaintiff’s 24 right to rescind and Defendant’s duty to comply with the rescission procedures expired on January 5, 25 2010. Thus, Plaintiff’s TILA claim is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

26 B. California Civil Code Section 2923.5 Claim

27 Next, Wells Fargo and First American assert that Plaintiff’s claim under California Civil Code 28 section 2923.5 fails. This Court agrees.

1           “Civil Code section 2923.5 requires, before a notice of default may be filed, that a lender 2 contact the borrower in person or by phone to ‘assess’ the borrower's financial situation and ‘explore’
3 options to prevent foreclosure.” Mabry v. Superior Court, — Cal. Rptr. 3d —, 2010 WL 2180530, 4 *1 (Cal. Ct. App. 2010). The requirements of this section are “very narrow.” Id. at * 12. They do not 5 require the lender to modify the loan or do very much more than have minimal conversations with the 6 debtor to assess their position and inform them of various options to avoid foreclosure. Id. Moreover, 7 “[i]f section 2923.5 is not complied with, then there is no valid notice of default, and without a valid 8 notice of default, a foreclosure sale cannot proceed.” Id. at *7. Nonetheless, once the foreclosure sale 9 happens, the postponement remedy disappears. Id. at *14 (“the only remedy provided is a 10 postponement of sale before it happens” (emphasis in original)). Failure to comply is does not cause 11 any cloud on the property’s title. Id. Finally, although no express private right of action is written 12 into the text of section 2923.5, one California Court of Appeal has recently held that a private right 13 of action exists to enforce the provision. Id. at *8.

14           In this case, Plaintiff argues that the Defendants did not comply with section 2923.5 for several 15 reasons. First, Plaintiff claims that Wells Fargo did not contact the Plaintiff before the notice of 16 default. (FAC ¶ 66; see also id. ¶¶ 70–72.) Second, Plaintiff claims that the Defendants violated this 17 section because “[t]he required declaration is not signed under penalty of perjury and there is no 18 evidence on the face of the declaration that the declarant had any personal knowledge of the averments 19 contained therein.” (Id. ¶ 67; see also id. ¶¶ 73–78.) Because of these alleged deficiencies, Plaintiff 20 believes that “the non-judicial foreclosure, pursuant to the [Notice of Default] and [Notice of Sale], 21 is void.” (Id. ¶ 69; see also id. ¶¶ 72 & 78.)

22           Plaintiff’s argument under section 2923.5, however, does not afford him any remedy at this 23 late date. First, the 2923.5 notice need not be signed under penalty of perjury. Mabry, 2010 WL 24 2180530, at *13 (“The idea that this ‘declaration’ must be made under oath must be rejected.”). As 25 the Mabry court aptly noted, nothing in either the colloquial or legal definitions of a “declaration” 26 require it to be made under oath. Id. Further, the absence of the words “penalty of perjury” in this 27 section and the presence of that phrase in other mortgage-related statutes indicates that the legislature 28 had not intention of imposing such a requirement. Id. Finally, the statute on which Plaintiff relies

1 only applies where the statute requires the evidence of a sworn declaration, not simply a declaration.
2 See Cal. Code. Civ. P. § 2015.5. And, as noted above, section 2923.5 does not require a sworn 3 declaration. Thus, the absence of a signature under penalty of perjury does not make the notice 4 deficient.

5 Plaintiff's second argument is also foreclosed by Mabry. That court clearly indicated that (1) 6 the notice can "track the language of the statute" and (2) the person signing the notice need not have 7 been the same person who performed the options listed in section 2923.5. Mabry, 2010 WL 2180530, 8 at *14. Again, therefore, Plaintiff's allegations do not identify a problem with the 2923.5 notice.

9 Finally, even if Defendants did not contact Plaintiff as required prior to foreclosure, Plaintiff's 10 ability to raise this challenge expired on the date of the sale of his property. Id. at *14. This is 11 because "the only remedy provided [by section 2923.5] is a postponement of sale before it happens."
12 Id. In other words, Plaintiff's claim that the sale is void because of these violations is legally incorrect 13 and the alleged error places no cloud over the current property owner's title. Id. Therefore, given the 14 posture of this case, Plaintiff has no actionable claim under section 2923.5, meaning that his causes 15 of action under that section must be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

16 C. First American's Asserted Common Interest Privilege

17 Defendant First American argues that its actions in this matter are privileged under California 18 Civil Code section 2924(d). (First Am.'s MTD at 7–8.) That section provides that "(1) The mailing, 19 publication, and delivery of notices as required by this section[,] (2) Performance of the procedures
20 set forth in this article[, and] (3) Performance of the functions and procedures set forth in this article 21 if those functions and procedures are necessary to carry out the duties described in Sections 729.040, 22 729.050, and 729.080 of the Code of Civil Procedure" are privileged pursuant to California Civil Code 23 section 47. Cal. Civ. Code § 2924(d). First American argues that since its "purported liability . . .
24 arises from its acts as trustee under the Deed of Trust" and since "Plaintiff has not alleged that [it] 25 acted with malice," Plaintiff's claims cannot survive. (First Am.'s MTD at 7–8.)

26 The Court agrees. As Plaintiff and the FAC make clear, this action, at least as against First 27 American, is centered around First American's actions involving the Notice of Default and execution 28 of the foreclosure sale. (See Opp. to First Am.'s MTD at 8–10.) Additionally, the pleadings contain

1 no factual allegations which indicate malice on the part of First American. The FAC's legal 2 conclusion that they acted with malice is not entitled to any presumption of truth. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct.
3 at 1949.

4 Plaintiff cites First American's alleged disregard for California Civil Code section 2923.5 and 5 failure to give the statutorily required notice as evidence of malice and intent. First, as discussed
6 supra, Plaintiff has not pled a violation of section 2923.5 because the declaration attached to the FAC 7 is compliant with the requirements of that statutory section. See Mabry, 2010 WL 2180530, at 8 *13-*14.

9 Second, the allegations regarding a failure to provide the required notice are unavailing. For 10 example, Plaintiff argues that his ex-wife, Bonnie Mae Hudson, "received no notification from [First 11 American] regarding the impending foreclosure." (Opp. to First Am.'s MTD at 9.) However, Plaintiff 12 has no standing to raise this issue in this matter.

13 Article III, section 2 of the United States Constitution requires that a plaintiff have standing 14 to bring a claim. In order "to satisfy Article III's standing requirements, a plaintiff must show (1) it 15 has suffered an 'injury in fact' that is (a) concrete and particularized and (b) actual or imminent, not 16 conjectural or hypothetical; (2) the injury is fairly traceable to the challenged action of the defendant; 17 and (3) it is likely, as opposed to merely speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a favorable 18 decision." Friends of the Earth, Inc. v. Laidlaw Envtl. Servs. (TOC), Inc., 528 U.S. 167, 180-81 19 (2000) (citing Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560-61 (1992)).

20 In the case of Plaintiff's ex-wife, he has not established that he actually suffered an injury in 21 fact as a result of the alleged failure to provide her with notice. See Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560 n.1 ("By 22 particularized, we mean that the injury must affect the plaintiff in a personal and individual way.").
23 This claimed failure of notice did not deprive him of an opportunity to challenge the foreclosure 24 proceedings or the notice of default. Moreover, Plaintiff offers no basis upon which he can assert his 25 ex-wife's rights in this matter.<sup>3</sup>

26
27 <sup>3</sup> Further, as First American points out, Plaintiff states that Ms. Hudson "was a tenant in 28 common with Plaintiff." (Opp. to First Am.'s MTD at 9.) If she had no interest in the property at the time she allegedly did not receive notice, there would be no violation. However, since this issue is unclear from the pleadings and standing issues precluding this argument, the Court does not address it at this time.

1 Plaintiff's other basis for his allegation of malice, the apparent failure of First American "to 2 provide any notice to [Plaintiff's prior attorneys] regarding the impending foreclosure sale" despite 3 the existence of a lis pendens, is also flawed. (See Opp. to First Am.'s MTD at 9.) As Plaintiff points 4 out, California Civil Code section 2924b requires a trustee "to provide notice of an impending 5 foreclosure sale to a mortgagor and to others who have 'duly recorded a request' to be notified."<sup>4</sup> (Id.)
6 However, the relevant notice must "specify[] the name and address of the person to whom the notice 7 is to be mailed, [] identify the deed of trust or mortgage by stating the names of the parties thereto, the 8 date of recordation thereof, and the book and page where the deed of trust or mortgage is recorded or 9 the recorder's number." Cal. Civ. Code § 2924b(a). The lis pendens here, however contains none of 10 these required elements: it does not specify where the notice should be sent or identify the deed of 11 trust or mortgage in a sufficient manner. (FAC, Ex. F.) As such, the Court has no basis upon which 12 to conclude that First American was required by law to notify Plaintiff's counsel.

13 This reasoning applies equally to Plaintiff's argument that First American's liability arises 14 from it's failure to communicate. As noted above, Plaintiff has not shown that he has standing to 15 assert any failure to notify his ex-wife and has not shown that his counsel did not receive notice 16 required by law. For these reasons, the Court finds that First American is statutorily immune for 17 its communications given Plaintiff's allegations in the FAC and that the alleged failures to 18 communicate do not provide a basis for liability.

19 D. Breach of Contract and Promissory Estoppel Claims

20 Plaintiff's fourth cause of action alleges breach of contract against Wells Fargo, while the 21 twelfth cause of action asserts promissory estoppel against both Wells Fargo and First American.<sup>5</sup> 22 Both claims involve the same factual allegations. Plaintiff alleges that Wells Fargo "orally agreed that

24 <sup>4</sup> Although Plaintiff cites California Civil Code § 2924(b), the language he cites actually comes from section 2924b(a).

25 <sup>5</sup> Although Plaintiff frames this cause of action as one for equitable estoppel, it is clear that 26 he actually intends to bring a claim for promissory estoppel. (Opp. to Wells Fargo's MTD at 15.) The 27 Court comes to this conclusion for two reasons. First, the case Plaintiff cites, Raedeke, is specifically 28 discussing promissory estoppel. (Id. (quoting Raedeke, 10 Cal. 3d at 672).) Second, "[p]romissory estoppel is based on a promise; equitable estoppel is based on misrepresentation of an existing fact."
Cotta v. City of S.F., 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 612, 625 n.8 (Cal. Ct. App. 2007) (citing Panno v. Russo, 186 P.2d 452, 454-55 (Cal. 1947)). At issue in this case is an alleged promise rather than a fact, placing this squarely within the ambit of promissory estoppel.

1 the trustee's sale scheduled for January 5, 2010 would not go forward" and "[i]n consideration of 2 [Wells Fargo's] agreement . . . Plaintiff provided documents and information to [Wells Fargo] and 3 complied with the requests of [Wells Fargo] relating to the loan modification process." (FAC ¶ 89.)
4 Further, Wells Fargo allegedly breached this agreement by selling the home on January 5, 2010. (Id.
5 ¶ 90.)

6 To prevail on his breach of contract claim Plaintiff must show (1) a contract, (2) his 7 performance or that such performance was excused, (3) that Wells Fargo breached that contract, and 8 (4) that he was damaged by the breach. Armstrong Petroleum Corp. v. Tri-Valley Oil & Gas Co., 116 9 Cal. App. 4th 1375, 1391 n.6 (2004) (quoting Careau & Co. v. Sec. Pac. Bus. Credit, Inc., 222 Cal.
10 App. 3d 1371, 1399 (1990)).

11 Wells Fargo argues that the breach of contract action is barred by the statute of frauds. (Wells 12 Fargo's MTD at 14.) It claims that this oral agreement expressly contradicts the terms of the 13 forbearance agreement which "states that the Bank could pursue its rights under the Deed of Trust, 14 including foreclosure, upon Plaintiff failing to provide the required information in the timeframe (sic) 15 provided." (Id. at 15.) "Accordingly, when Plaintiff failed to provide that information, the Loan was 16 removed from the modification review process and the trustee's sale proceeded as planned." (Id.)

17 Moreover, Wells Fargo argues that Plaintiff's allegation that he provided documents "is not 18 sufficient consideration to support a claim for breach of contract. Negotiation documents, 19 communications, and unsolicited offers, are just that, negotiations and offers." (Id.) Further, 20 Defendant believes that Plaintiff's payments are consideration "because Plaintiff already owed that 21 money." (Id.) Thus, according to Wells Fargo, Plaintiff has not stated a breach of contract claim.

22 Plaintiff disagrees. He argues that "[t]he California Supreme Court has held, that, "if there 23 exists sufficient consideration for an oral modification agreement, then full performance by the 24 promisee alone would suffice to render the agreement 'executed' within the meaning of section 25 1698." (Opp. to Wells Fargo's MTD at 15 (quoting Raedeke v. Gibraltar Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 10 Cal.
26 3d 665, 673 (1974)).) "In the present case, adequate consideration can be found in the form of 27 plaintiff's completion and submission of the loan modification application." (Id.) "[I]f not for 28 Defendants representation regarding the application, plaintiff would have spent the time pursuing

1 other options to avoid the foreclosure.” (Id.)

2 California law provides that “[u]nless the contract otherwise expressly provides, a contract in 3 writing may be modified by an oral agreement supported by new consideration.” Cal. Civ. Code § 4 1698(c). However, “[t]he statute of frauds (Section 1624) is required to be satisfied if the contract as 5 modified is within its provisions.” Id. The statute of frauds states that an “agreement . . . for the sale 6 of real property, or of an interest therein,” is “invalid[] unless [it], or some note or memorandum 7 thereof, [is] in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged or by the party’s agent.” Cal. Civ.
8 Code § 1624(a)(3). Further, if this agreement is “made by an agent of the party sought to be charged, 9 [the agreement] is invalid, unless the authority of the agent is in writing, subscribed by the party 10 sought to be charged.” Id. Nonetheless, the statute of frauds does not preclude “the application of 11 rules of law concerning estoppel.” Cal. Civ. Code § 1698(d).

12 The Court agrees with Wells Fargo, this action is barred by the statute of frauds. “In the 13 absence of consideration, a gratuitous oral promise to postpone a sale of property pursuant to the terms 14 of a trust deed ordinarily would be unenforceable under section 1698.” Raedeke v. Gibraltar Sav. & 15 Loan Ass’n, 10 Cal. 3d 665, 673 (1974) (citing Karlsen v. Am. Sav. & Loan Ass’n, 15 Cal. App. 3d 16 112, 121 (1971)). However, “if there exists sufficient consideration for an oral modification 17 agreement, then full performance by the promisee alone would suffice.” Id.

18 In this case, Plaintiff’s alleged consideration is insufficient and unrelated to the allegedly 19 broken promise. According to the FAC, Wells Fargo “orally agreed that the trustee’s sale scheduled 20 for January 5, 2010 would not go forward.” (FAC ¶ 89.) More specifically it alleges that Wells 21 Fargo’s employee told Plaintiff’s counsel “that the file had been escalated and that [Wells Fargo] was 22 postponing the trustee’s sale date.” (Id. ¶ 30.) This statement placed no conditions or expectations 23 on Plaintiff. (Id.) It was simply a response to the phone call from Plaintiff’s counsel. (Id.)

24 This is not consideration under California law. “[T]here are two requirements [under 25 California Law] in order to find consideration.” Steiner v. Thextron, 226 P.3d 359, 366 (Cal. 2010) 26 (referring to Cal. Civ. Code § 1605). First, “[t]he promisee must confer (or agree to confer) a benefit 27 or must suffer (or agree to suffer) prejudice. . . . [E]ither alone is sufficient to constitute 28 consideration.” Id. Nonetheless, “[i]t is not enough . . . to confer a benefit or suffer prejudice for there

1 to be consideration. . . . [T]he second requirement is that the benefit or prejudice must actually be 2 bargained for as the exchange for the promise. Put another way, the benefit or prejudice must have 3 induced the promisor's promise." Id.; see also Simmons v. Cal. Inst. of Tech, 209 P.2d 581, 586 (Cal.
4 1949) ("[T]he consideration for a promise must be an act or a return promise, bargained for and given 5 in exchange for the promise.").

6 Plaintiff's pleadings indicate that neither of these requirements are met here. First, presuming 7 that "plaintiff's completion and submission of the loan modification application" was actually 8 bargained for as an exchange, Plaintiff conferred no benefit on Wells Fargo nor suffered any prejudice.
9 Although "courts do not weigh the quantum of the consideration as long as it has some value," this 10 consideration has absolutely no value. A.J. Indus., Inc. v. Ver Halen, 142 Cal. Rptr. 383, 389 (Cal.
11 Ct. App. 1977) (citing Blocksidge v. Broadway Sixth Co., 24 Cal. Rptr. 622, 624 (Cal. Ct. App. 1962)).
12 Plaintiff offers no hint of how his submission of forms and other documentation provided a benefit 13 to Defendant Wells Fargo. Nor is it clear how that submission constitutes any detriment to the 14 Plaintiff. "It is well settled that something which is completely worthless cannot constitute valid 15 consideration." Grant v. Aerodraulics Co., 204 P.2d 683, 688 (Cal. Ct. App. 1949) (citing, inter alia, 16 Gifford v. Carvill, 29 Cal. 589 (1866)).

17 Moreover, even if this consideration had value, it fails to meet the second aspect of 18 consideration, it was not "actually . . . bargained for as the exchange for the promise." Steiner, 226
19 P.3d at 366. Plaintiff's complaint leaves no room for a bargain. (See FAC ¶ 30.) Wells Fargo's 20 employee told his counsel that the sale had been postponed. This was not in response to any 21 meaningful action by Plaintiff. (Id.) Nor is there any indication that it was conditional on any future 22 action by Plaintiff. (Id.) He was attempting to enter into a loan modification, but offers no hint that 23 Wells Fargo ever agreed to postpone the foreclosure sale in exchange for the submission of loan 24 modification paperwork. Given this inherent disconnect between the alleged statement by Wells 25 Fargo's employee on December 30, 2009 and any action taken by or requested of Plaintiff, the Court 26 finds that the alleged consideration did not induce Wells Fargo's alleged promise. Steiner, 226 P.3d 27 at 366.

28 This is the paradigmatic "gratuitous oral promise to postpone a sale of property pursuant to 1 the terms of a deed of trust” in the absence of consideration and is therefore unenforceable. Raedeke, 2 10 Cal. 3d at 673; see also Secrest v. Sec. Nat’l Mortgage Loan Trust 2002-2, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 275 3 (Cal. Ct. App. 2008) (holding that a forbearance agreement regarding foreclosure fell within the 4 statute of frauds and was therefore unenforceable). As such, Plaintiff’s breach of contract claim for 5 failure to postpone the foreclosure sale must be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

6         However, Plaintiff still argues that he is entitled to recover under the doctrine of promissory 7 estoppel. Promissory estoppel will bind a promisor ““when he should reasonably expect a substantial 8 change of position, either by act or forbearance, in reliance on his promise, if injustice can be avoided 9 only by its enforcement.”” Raedeke, 10 Cal. 3d at 672 n.1 (quoting Youngman v. Nev. Irrigation Dist., 10 70 Cal. 2d 240, 249 (1969)). “Cases have characterized promissory estoppel claims as being basically 11 the same as contract actions, but only missing the consideration element.” US Ecology, Inc. v.
12 California, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 894, 906 (Cal. Ct. App. 2005). Court have broken this doctrine down into 13 four elements: “(1) a promise that is clear and unambiguous in its terms; (2) reliance by the party to 14 whom the promise is made; (3) the reliance must be reasonable and foreseeable; and (4) the party 15 asserting the estoppel must be injured by his or her reliance.” Boon Rawd Trading Int’l Co., Ltd. v.
16 Paleewong Trading Co., Inc., 688 F. Supp. 2d 940, 953 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (citing US Ecology, 28 Cal.
17 Rptr. 3d at 904–07); see also Rennick v. O.P.T.I.O.N. Care, Inc., 77 F.3d 309, 316 (9th Cir. 1996) (“In 18 order to constitute part performance the acts (1) must be “unequivocally referable” to the terms of the 19 oral contract; (2) must irretrievably change plaintiffs’ position, and (3) must be performed in 20 reasonable reliance on the contract. (citing Am. Cas. Co. v. Curran Prods, Inc., 28 Cal. Rptr. 131, 135 21 (1963) and Monarco v. Lo Greco, 220 P.2d 737 (Cal. 1950))).

22         According to Plaintiff, those elements are satisfied here. (Opp. to Wells Fargo’s MTD at 16.)
23 He claims that “(1) Wells Fargo made a promise that it would postpone the sale if plaintiff completed 24 and submitted the loan modification application; (2) Wells Fargo should have reasonably expected 25 that plaintiff would rely on that promise; (3) plaintiff in fact did relied (sic) on that promise by 26 spending time to complete the application rather than pursuing other options to avoid the foreclosure; 27 and (4) if the promise is not enforced, injustice will occur.” (Id.)

28         The Court disagrees because Plaintiff’s complaint fails to demonstrate that he “substantial[ly]

1 change[d] [his] position, either by act or forbearance, in reliance on [Wells Fargo’s] promise.”<sup>6</sup>
2 Raedeke, 10 Cal. 3d at 672 n.1 (quoting Youngman, 70 Cal. 2d at 249). The completion of the loan 3 modification application is not reliance for several reasons. First, that application was allegedly 4 complete long before Wells Fargo ever allegedly promised to stop the foreclosure sale. (See FAC ¶¶ 5 27 & 30.) Plaintiff could not possibly have relied on a promise not yet made. Second, the FAC makes 6 clear that the instructions to Plaintiff’s counsel regarding a later phone call and additional 7 documentation were not connected to the statement that Wells Fargo “was postponing the trustee’s 8 sale date.” (Id. ¶ 30.) Thus, citing them as reliance is illogical and cannot constitute a substantial 9 change of position in reliance upon Wells Fargo’s employee’s statement regarding the sale date.
10 Finally, Plaintiff’s brief makes general and unsubstantiated reference to “other options to avoid the 11 foreclosure.” (Opp. to Wells Fargo’s MTD at 16.) However, it is unclear what realistic options 12 existed to Plaintiff less than a week before the foreclosure sale. None are listed in the FAC. Given 13 that this is absent from the pleading, the Court cannot find any meaningful forbearance in reliance on 14 the alleged promise.

15 As to Defendant First American, Plaintiff cannot state a claim. As alleged in the FAC, this 16 claim fails against First American at the first element: First American never made Plaintiff a promise.
17 With this element there can be no promissory estoppel. Of course as Plaintiff freely admits, this cause 18 of action is “aimed primarily at Defendant Wells Fargo.” (Opp. to First Am.’s MTD at 10.) His only 19 justifications for this claim are (1) that First American is “an indispensable party” and “must be 20 included [in this suit] to set aside the wrongful foreclosure sale,” and (2) that “a trustee’s or 21 beneficiary’s fraudulent conduct during foreclosure proceedings can give rise to a tort action.” (Id.
22 at 10–11.) The first is not a reason to allow Plaintiff to maintain an cause of action that does not lie 23 against First American and the second, even if true, does not excuse the requirement that all elements 24 of this cause of action be met.

25 As such Plaintiff has not established a claim for promissory estoppel and the twelfth cause of 26 action must be DISMISSED. With respect to First American, this claim is DISMISSED WITH

27 28 <sup>6</sup> Although the Court addresses only the issue of substantial change of position, the failure to address the other elements of promissory estoppel should not be read as expressing an opinion on their presence or absence.

1 PREJUDICE and as to Wells Fargo DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE. Further, since it is 2 possible that further amendment could correct the pleading deficiencies as against Wells Fargo.
3 Therefore, the Court allows Plaintiff LEAVE TO AMEND this claim with respect to the reliance 4 issue on the promissory estoppel claim as against Wells Fargo only.

5 E. Fraud, Intentional Misrepresentation and Negligent Misrepresentation Claims

6 Plaintiff's third, sixth, and eighth causes of action set forth claims for fraud, intentional 7 misrepresentation, and negligent misrepresentation. The sixth and eighth target both Defendants while 8 the third is against Wells Fargo only. All three of these claims are fraud claims making the same 9 factual allegations and governed by essentially the same standard. See Alliance MortgageCo. v.
10 Rothwell, 900 P.2d 601, 608 n.4 (Cal. 1995). Specifically, they are based on Plaintiff's claim that 11 Wells Fargo falsely told Plaintiff that the January 5, 2010 foreclosure sale had been, or was going to 12 be, postponed. (See FAC ¶ 80–82.)

13 "The elements of fraud, which gives rise to the tort action for deceit, are (a) misrepresentation 14 (false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure); (b) knowledge of falsity (or 'scienter'); (c) 15 intent to defraud, i.e., to induce reliance; (d) justifiable reliance; and (e) resulting damage." Small v.
16 Frits Cos., Inc., 65 P.3d 1255, 1258 (Cal. 2003) (quoting Lazar v. Superior Court, 909 P.2d 981, 984 17 (Cal. 1996)). Intentional misrepresentation has the same elements, Alliance Mortgage, 900 P.2d at 18 608, while negligent misrepresentation replaces the scienter requirement with a requirement that the 19 defendant have "no reasonable ground" for believing the representation to be true. Small, 65 P.3d at 20 1258.

21 Since these are fraud claims Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b) sets the bar for Plaintiff's 22 pleadings. See Vess v. Ciba-Geigy Corp. USA, 317 F.3d 1097, 1102–03 (9th Cir. 2003). Rule 9(b)
23 states that "In alleging fraud or mistake, a party must state with particularity the circumstances 24 constituting fraud or mistake." These allegations must "be 'specific enough to give defendants notice 25 of the particular misconduct . . . so that they can defend against the charge and not just deny that they 26 have done anything wrong.' Averments of fraud must be accompanied by 'the who, what, when, 27 where, and how' of the misconduct charged. '[A] plaintiff must set forth more than the neutral facts 28 necessary to identify the transaction. The plaintiff must set forth what is false or misleading about a

1 statement, and why it is false.” Vess, 317 F.3d at 1106 (citations omitted).

2 As with the promissory estoppel claim, Plaintiff does not state a claim against First American 3 because there are no allegations that it made any misrepresentation to Plaintiff. This means that 4 Plaintiff cannot recover on any of these claims. And the other justifications discussed in section II(C), 5 supra, again do not allow these claims to remain against First American.

6 The Court finds that the same is true with respect to Defendant Wells Fargo. Wells Fargo 7 argues that these claims “are based on the same factual allegations underlying [Plaintiff’s] breach of 8 contract claim and are therefore an improper attempt to obtain punitive damages for a contract 9 dispute.” (Memo. ISO Motion at 11 (citation omitted).) Certainly Wells Fargo is correct that this is 10 related to Plaintiff’s breach of contract cause of action and that in a breach of contract action punitive 11 damages are impermissible. See Cates Constr., Inc. v. Talbot Partners, 21 Cal. 4th 28, 61 (1999).
12 However, “conduct amounting to a breach of contract becomes tortious . . . when it also violates a duty 13 independent of the contract arising from principles of tort law.” Erlich v. Menezes, 981 P.2d 978, 983 14 (Cal. 1999). One of those independent tort duties is “where the contract was fraudulently induced.”
15 Id. at 552 (citing Las Palmas Assocs. v. Las Palmas Ctr. Assocs., 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301, 310–11 (Cal.
16 Ct. App. 1991)); see also Glendale Fed. Sav & Loan Ass’n v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co., 135 Cal.
17 Rptr. 802, 821–22 (Cal. Ct. App. 1977). Thus, Plaintiff’s fraud claim is not per se impermissible 18 simply because it relates to his breach of contract allegations and this argument may be rejected.

19 Wells Fargo also claims that this cause of action is insufficiently pled. First, according to 20 Defendant, Plaintiff’s reliance on any oral statement that the foreclosure sale would be postponed was 21 not reasonable as a matter of law. (Memo. ISO Motion at 11.) Second, Wells Fargo believes that 22 these claims are not pled with the particularity required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b). (Id.
23 at 11.) Specifically, it argues that Plaintiff “does not allege facts to support his allegation that anyone 24 at Wells Fargo intended to defraud him.” (Id. at 12.) Moreover, the FAC lacks “facts sufficient to 25 show that the Wells Fargo with whom [Plaintiff] (or his attorney) spoke had the authority to postpone 26 the foreclosure.” (Id.) Similarly, Wells Fargo thinks Plaintiff has not pled reliance on or damages 27 caused by the alleged misrepresentation. (Id. at 12–13.) Finally, Defendant argues that the 28 allegations of reliance in this case are speculative at best because Plaintiff only states that he would

1 have “sought other options.”” (Id. at 13 (quoting FAC ¶ 100).)

2 The Court agrees with Defendants that Plaintiff has not sufficiently pled these claims to 3 survive Rule 9(b). However, some of Wells Fargo’s arguments on this point are simply incorrect. For 4 example, the Court cannot agree that reliance on an oral statement regarding foreclosure postponement 5 was not reasonable as a matter of law. The cases Defendant cites do not so hold, but some instead deal 6 with the breach of contract issue, see, e.g., Nguyen v. Calhoun, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436 (Cal. Ct. App.
7 2003), while others explain that no fraud occurred based on factual and evidentiary determinations 8 by the court. See, e.g., Crofoot v. Tarman, 305 P.2d 56 (Cal. Ct. App. 1957). This is, of course, not 9 to say that Plaintiff’s reliance was reasonable, but rather merely a finding that the issue of 10 reasonableness is for a later date.

11 Similarly, the issue of Wells Fargo’s employee’s authority to postpone the foreclosure sale is 12 not determinative on this claim. This is not a question of contract, and Defendant has not shown that 13 an employee without authority cannot defraud a borrower by making representations outside of the 14 scope of his employment. Instead this issue plays into the considerations required to determine 15 whether Plaintiff reasonably relied on the alleged statement and, as previously noted, today is not the 16 day to resolve that question.

17 Nonetheless, the Court must find that these three claims are inadequate because Plaintiff has 18 not pled sufficient facts to make plausible that he relied on Wells Fargo’s misrepresentation or that 19 he was damaged by those misrepresentations. As stated above, the Court cannot say that the FAC 20 contains factual allegations showing Plaintiff’s reliance on Wells Fargo’s alleged misrepresentation.
21 Specifically, the documentation submitted was not clearly done in reliance on the alleged promise and 22 Plaintiff has not specifically alleged any realistic option to prevent foreclosure had he known that the 23 foreclosure sale would proceed.

24 As to damages, although Plaintiff states in his brief that he “lost over a million dollars in 25 equity,” that is not actually alleged in the FAC. (Opp. to Wells Fargo’s MTD at 14.) Nor is it clear 26 how, exactly, that equity was “lost.” Further, it is not apparent how that loss was “caused” by the 27 misrepresentation since Plaintiff has not suggested exactly what he could have done to stop the 28 foreclosure sale.

1           Thus, since Plaintiff has not stated a claim against either Defendant, these causes of action
2 must be DISMISSED. However, the Court will grant Plaintiff LEAVE TO AMEND these claims 3 as against Wells Fargo.

4           E.       “One Action Rule” Claim

5           Plaintiff’s eighth cause of action alleges that both Defendants violated California Code of Civil 6 Procedure § 726, known as the “One Action Rule,” by “attempt[ing] to satisfy a debt secured by real 7 property by attaching property other than the secured real property.” (FAC ¶ 106). Specifically, 8 Wells Fargo applied “Plaintiff’s tender of $23,441.39 . . . to the funds demanded in the [Notice of 9 Default].” (Id. ¶ 105.) Plaintiff paid this amount as part of a forbearance agreement, and effectively 10 is arguing that any such agreement would be barred under section 726. (See Opp. to Wells Fargo’s 11 MTD at 19–20.)

12           Section 726(a) provides “There can be but one form of action for the recovery of any debt or 13 the enforcement of any right secured by mortgage upon real property . . . , which action shall be in 14 accordance with the provisions of this chapter.” The California Supreme Court has held that the 15 “general operation [of this section] has long been clear,” allowing a secured creditor to “bring only 16 one lawsuit to enforce its security interest and collect its debt.” Sec. Pac. Nat’l Bank v. Wozab, 51 17 Cal. 3d 991, 997 (1990). This section also embodies a “security-first” rule, “requir[ing] a secured 18 creditor to proceed against the security before enforcing the underlying debt.” Id. at 999.

19           This statutory provision is clearly inapplicable in this case. First, the FAC does not plead facts 20 indicating that First American is a secured creditor of Plaintiff. On the contrary, Plaintiff Pleads that 21 “Defendant FIRST AMERICAN . . . was acting as the agent or trustee for [Wells Fargo] with regard 22 to the Notice of Default . . . and Notice of Trustee Sale.” (FAC ¶ 4.) As such, this provision does not 23 apply as against First American.

24           Second, with respect to Defendant Wells Fargo, Plaintiff’s allegations indicate that he 25 voluntarily sent Wells Fargo the money at issue to be applied against his debt pursuant to a 26 forbearance agreement. (FAC ¶¶ 21–22; FAC, Ex. D.) And despite Plaintiff’s arguments, the 27 security-first rule does not prohibit agreements between a lender and borrower that attempt to prevent 28 foreclosure on the security interest. Instead, this rule requires the sale of the secured property before

1 the lender pursues the debtor personally for any further deficiency. See, e.g., Walker v. Cmty. Bank, 2 10 Cal. 3d 729, 736 (1974) (“the clear purpose of section 726 . . . requir[es] a secured creditor to 3 exhaust all security first”). An example of this is Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab where 4 the Plaintiff took a setoff against the subject loans from the Defendants’ demand account. This 5 account apparently was entirely disassociated from the loan other than the fact that the account holders 6 had personally guaranteed the loan. That court “reaffirm[ed] the long-standing rule that under section 7 726(a) a bank is not allowed to take a unilateral setoff of funds in a depositor’s demand account 8 against a debt secured by the depositor’s interest in real property.” Sec. Pac, 51 Cal. 3d at 1000.

9 In this case, no set-off occurred and Wells Fargo did not pursue the Plaintiff’s assets prior to 10 foreclosure. Instead, the parties agreed to a forbearance agreement which required the Plaintiff to 11 make certain payments. He made those payments but failed to fulfill his obligations regarding another 12 aspect of the agreement. (FAC ¶ 26.) This was not a set-off or other attempt to pursue Plaintiff 13 personally prior to foreclosure, but was, as the FAC acknowledges, a joint agreement to stave off 14 foreclosure. As such, application of the one-action or security-first rules is improper and no 15 amendment can cure the deficiency. Therefore, the eighth cause of action is DISMISSED WITH 16 PREJUDICE.

17 G. Intentional and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress Claims

18 The tenth and eleventh causes of action allege that Defendant intentionally and negligently 19 inflicted emotional distress on Plaintiff. (See FAC ¶¶ 117–124.) Both claims generically allege that 20 unspecified conduct caused Plaintiff severe emotional distress and that Defendants acted either 21 intentionally or negligently in that conduct. (Id.)

22 A claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress requires that the plaintiff allege: “(i) 23 outrageous conduct by defendant, (ii) an intention by defendant to cause, or reckless disregard of the 24 probability of causing, emotional distress, (iii) severe emotional distress, and (iv) an actual and 25 proximate causal link between the tortious conduct and the emotional distress.” Nally v. Grace Cmty.
26 Church, 763 P.2d 948, 961 (Cal. 1988). Conduct is outrageous when it is “so extreme as to exceed 27 all bounds of that usually tolerated in a civilized community.” Id. (quoting Davidson v. City of 28 Westminster, 649 P.2d 894, 901 (Cal. 1982)). “Insults, indignities, annoyances, petty oppressions or

1 other trivialities will not suffice. The conduct must be such that it would cause an average member 2 of the community to immediately react in outrage.” Gomon v. TRW, Inc., 34 Cal. Rptr. 256, 264 (Cal.
3 Ct. App. 1994).

4 Negligent infliction of emotional distress, on the other hand, “is a form of the tort of 5 negligence, to which the elements of duty, breach of duty, causation and damages apply.” Huggins 6 v. Longs Drug Stores Cal., Inc., 862 P.2d 148, 151 (Cal. 1993). The relevant “duty may be imposed 7 by law, be assumed by the defendant, or exist by virtue of a special relationship.” Potter v. Firestone 8 Tire & Rubber Co., 863 P.2d 795, 807 (Cal. 1993) (citing Marlene F. v. Affiliated Psychiatric Med.
9 Clinic, 770 P.2d 278, 282 (1989)). “The existence of a duty is a question of law.” Huggins, 862 P.2d 10 at 151 (citing Marlene F., 770 P.2d at 281). However, “there is no duty to avoid negligently causing 11 emotional distress to another, and . . . damages for emotional distress are recoverable only if the 12 defendant has breached some other duty to the plaintiff.” Potter, 863 P.2d at 807 (citing Boyles v.
13 Kerr, 855 S.W.2d 593, 594 (Tex. 1993)); see also id. at 807–08 (“[U]nless the defendant has assumed 14 a duty to plaintiff in which the emotional condition of the plaintiff is an object, recovery is available 15 only if the emotional distress arises out of the defendant's breach of some other legal duty and the 16 emotional distress is proximately caused by that breach of duty.”). However, even when the defendant 17 breaches some other duty, that “breach of the duty must[, with rare exceptions,] threaten physical 18 injury, not simply damage to property or financial interests.” Id. at 808.

19 Wells Fargo argues that “Plaintiff has not alleged any facts against Wells Fargo to support a 20 conclusion that the Bank did anything with any ill will or with the specific intent to cause Plaintiff’s 21 emotional distress.” (Wells Fargo’s MTD at 19.) Nor does Wells Fargo think that Plaintiff has pled 22 any facts demonstrating outrageous conduct. (Id.) According to Defendant, it cannot be liable for 23 “pursu[ing] what it believed to be its legal rights (including its right to foreclosure).” (Id.)

24 As to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim, Wells Fargo argues that Plaintiff 25 cannot state a claim because it, as a financial institution, owes no duty of care to Plaintiff as a 26 borrower. (Wells Fargo’s MTD at 19.) Since Plaintiff has not alleged that Wells Fargo acted beyond 27 its role as a lender he allegedly cannot establish a duty which Wells Fargo breached. (Id. at 20.)

28 First American simply argues against both claims that Plaintiff has alleged no “outrageous”

1 conduct on its part, as all allegations relate to Wells Fargo's conduct. (First Am.'s MTD at 13.)

2 The Court finds that both of these claims are insufficiently pled. First, there is no suggestion
3 that either Wells Fargo or First American owed Plaintiff a duty sufficient to support his negligent 4 infliction of emotional distress claim. Certainly the parties had no special relationship where 5 Plaintiff's emotional condition was an object. Potter 863 P.2d at 807–08. Further, there is no 6 suggestion that Plaintiff was threatened with physical injury or that this case falls within one of the 7 exceptions. Finally, Plaintiff does not specifically argue in opposition to the dismissal of his negligent 8 infliction claim. As such, the Court finds that the eleventh cause of action must be DISMISSED 9 WITHOUT LEAVE TO AMEND.

10 Next, Plaintiff's intentional infliction of emotional distress claim lacks sufficient allegations 11 to satisfy the elements of this tort. First, it is not clear that either Wells Fargo's behavior or First 12 American's was outrageous in the sense that it was "so extreme as to exceed all bounds of that 13 usually tolerated in a civilized community." Nally, 763 P.2d at 961 (quoting Davidson, 649 P.2d at 14 991). Plaintiff was in default on his loan, Wells Fargo had the legal right to foreclose, and First American 15 had the right to complete the foreclosure sale. The fact that one of Defendant Wells Fargo's 16 employees allegedly stated that the sale would not occur but the house was sold anyway is not 17 outrageous as that word is used in this context. Id. Second, Plaintiff has not alleged facts that would 18 indicate that Wells Fargo intended to cause, or disregarded the possibility of causing, emotional 19 distress. Third, the connection between Defendant's action and the emotional distress is inadequately 20 stated. To the extent that the connection is Plaintiff's loss of property, "[n]o California case has 21 allowed recovery for emotional distress arising solely out of property damage." Erlich, 981 P.2d at 22 985. Further, although Plaintiff suggests that "pulling his bags off the airplane for his scheduled 23 flight" is a further basis, it is not clear how Defendants' conduct caused Plaintiff to take this action, 24 how Defendants' would have any idea that Plaintiff was getting on a plane that day, or why getting 25 off a flight was an actual cause of Plaintiff's emotional distress. Absent these essential elements, 26 Plaintiff's intentional infliction of emotional distress claim cannot stand.

27 As to Plaintiff's arguments, the claim that the Defendants were "in a position of power over 28 plaintiff," it is not particularly relevant. (Opp. to Wells Fargo's MTD at 21; Opp. to First Am.'s MTD

1 at 14.) Plaintiff offers no indication that the mortgage itself was unfair or placed Defendants in a 2 position of power. At the time of the foreclosure, the Defendants’ supposed “position of power” arose
3 solely from Plaintiff’s failure to make the required loan payments. (FAC ¶ 12.) Without that failure 4 to pay and the subsequent default, no foreclosure could have occurred. This is not the type of abuse 5 of a position of power sufficient to support an emotional distress claim.

6 Similarly, Plaintiff’s citation to Crisci v. Sec. Ins. Co. of New Haven, 66 Cal. 2d 425 (1967), 7 is not helpful. Although the California Supreme Court allowed emotional distress damages in that 8 case, it noted that “[r]ecovery of damages for mental suffering in the instant case does not mean that 9 in every case of breach of contract the injured party may recover such damages.” Id. at 434. It also 10 noted the importance of the insurance context and the desire to protect against the mental distress 11 which could accompany the losses insured against. Id. Such factors are not present here.

12 Thus, since Plaintiff has not stated a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress, the 13 tenth cause of action is DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE and with LEAVE TO AMEND.

14 H. Injunctive Relief and Declaratory Relief Claims

15 In Plaintiff’s thirteenth cause of action he seeks injunctive relief. (FAC ¶¶ 127–29.) In the 16 fourteenth cause of action he requests declaratory relief. (Id. ¶¶ 130–33.)

17 “Injunctive relief, like damages, is a remedy requested by the parties, not a separate cause of 18 action.” Cox Commc’n PCS, L.P. v. City of San Marcos, 204 F. Supp. 2d 1272, 1283 (S.D. Cal. 2002).
19 Thus injunctive relief must be tethered to some independent legal duty owed by the defendant to the 20 plaintiff. Martone v. Burgess, 2008 WL 3916022, at *4 (N.D. Cal. 2008).

21 Plaintiff asks this Court to “construe the thirteenth cause of action as a request [for an 22 injunction] and not as a separate cause of action.” (Opp. to Wells Fargo’s MTD at 23.) The Court 23 will do so. However, since no claims remain which could serve as the basis for an injunction, this 24 cause of action is DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE and WITH LEAVE TO AMEND.

25 Under federal law, a litigant may bring an action pursuant to the Declaratory Judgment Act.
26 28 U.S.C. § 2201.<sup>7</sup> However, this Act “is an enabling Act, which confers discretion on the courts

27
28 <sup>7</sup> Although the FAC does not specifically state whether Plaintiff seeks declaratory relief under federal or state law, the Court presumes that he intends to invoke federal law because that is the sole subject of his opposition briefing on this issue. (See Opp. to Wells Fargo’s MTD at 22–23.)

1 rather than an absolute right upon the litigant.” Pub. Serv. Comm’n of Utah v. Wycoff Co., Inc., 344 2 U.S. 237, 241 (1952); see also Zemel v. Rusk, 381 U.S. 1, 19 (1965); A.L. Mechling Barge Lines, Inc.
3 v. United States, 368 U.S. 324, 331 (1961). The Court can exercise this discretion and decline to 4 consider a declaratory judgment claim even where that claim contains a justiciable controversy.
5 United States v. Washington, 759 F.2d 1353, 1356 (9th Cir. 1985) (citing, inter alia, Int’l Harvester 6 Co. v. Deere & Co., 623 F.2d 1207, 1217 (7th Cir. 1980)). Even “after a full consideration of the 7 merits, [the court may] exercise its discretion to refuse to grant declaratory relief because the state of 8 the record is inadequate to support the extent of relief sought.” Id. (citing Nat’l Automatic Laundry 9 & Cleaning Council v. Schultz, 443 F.2d 689, 703 (D.C. Cir. 1971)).

10 Plaintiff suggests that his “request for declaratory relief is not redundant in the face of the other 11 causes of action, and it may be useful in clarifying the legal relations between the parties.” (Opp. to 12 Wells Fargo’s MTD at 23.) The specific items which Plaintiff believes would be clarified are “the 13 actual status and validity of the loan, Deed of Trust, and Notice of Default, Trustee’s Sale Deed and 14 ownership in Plaintiff’s Residence.” Id.

15 The Court, however, declines to consider Plaintiff’s request at this time. All of the other 16 causes of action are being dismissed and there is no basis for the declaratory judgment action to 17 remain alone. Thus, it is DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE and WITH LEAVE TO 18 AMEND.

19 I. Quiet Title Claim

20 The fifth cause of action seeks to quiet title on the subject property. (FAC ¶¶ 92–94.) It states 21 that the Defendants are asserting an adverse interest and that Plaintiff seeks to quiet title as of 22 February 16, 2007. (Id.)

23 Quiet title claims may establish title against adverse claims to real property or any interest 24 therein. Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 760.020. A complaint alleging such a claim must be verified and 25 include (1) a description of the property; (2) the basis for plaintiff’s title; (3) the adverse claim or 26 claims to title; (4) the date as of which the determination is sought; and (5) a prayer for determination 27 of plaintiff’s title against the adverse claims. Id. § 761.020.

28 The Court finds that this claim must be DISMISSED because Plaintiff has not alleged that he

1 is able to tender the amount of his indebtedness. California law holds that a plaintiff cannot quiet title 2 in his property against his mortgage lender “without discharging his mortgage debt. The cloud upon 3 his title persists until the debt is paid.” Aguilar v. Bocci, 114 Cal. Rptr. 91, 92 (Cal. Ct. App. 1974) 4 (citing Burns v. Hiatt, 87 P. 196, 197 (Cal. 1906)); see also Distor v. US Bank NA, 2009 WL 3429700, 5 at *6 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (“[P]laintiff has no basis to quiet title without first discharging her debt.”).
6 In this case, Plaintiff has not alleged either that he has tendered his indebtedness or that he is able to 7 do so. Absent this key offer, the Court must DISMISS this claim WITHOUT PREJUDICE.

8 Plaintiff’s arguments do not change this conclusion. First, the Court has already addressed and 9 rejected Plaintiff’s claims regarding the consequences of Wells Fargo’s alleged non-compliance with 10 section 2923.5. Even if Defendant failed to comply with that section, Plaintiff’s only remedy was a 11 postponement of the foreclosure sale and that only prior to the sale. Mabry, 2010 WL 2180530 at 12 *7 & *14. Since the sale has already occurred, there was no defect in the chain of title.

13 Second, Plaintiff’s argument that he should not be required to allege an ability to tender is 14 unconvincing. At the end of the day, if Plaintiff wishes to avoid his loan he is going to have to pay 15 it off in its entirety.<sup>8</sup> Requiring at least an allegation of tender at the outset is reasonable since it
16 would waste both the parties’ time and the Court’s time should he be unable to pay at the case’s 17 conclusion.

18 I. California Business and Professions Section 17200 Claim

19 Finally, Plaintiff’s ninth cause of action is for violations of California Business and Professions 20 Code section 17200. As both parties agree, this claim stands and falls with the viability of Plaintiff’s 21 other claims. (See Wells Fargo’s MTD at 17–18; Opp. to Wells Fargo’s MTD at 20.) Since all of 22 Plaintiff’s other claims have been dismissed, this claim is also DISMISSED WITHOUT 23 PREJUDICE and WITH LEAVE TO AMEND.

---

26
27 <sup>8</sup> Further, although Plaintiff repeatedly refers to this as an “ambush foreclosure,” there are no 28 which indicate that is the case. Plaintiff was long on notice of the date of the foreclosure sale on the property. Moreover it is unclear how Plaintiff was deprived of his ability to tender prior to the sale since there is no allegation that Defendant would not have simply allowed him to immediately pay off his entire debt at any time between the filing of the Notice of Default and the foreclosure sale.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated, Defendant First American’s motion to dismiss is GRANTED and Defendant Wells Fargo’s motion to dismiss is also GRANTED. Plaintiff’s first, second, fourth, seventh and eleventh causes of action are DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE as to all Defendants. Plaintiff’s third, sixth, eighth, and twelfth causes of action are DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE as to Defendant First American. All remaining claims are DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE and WITH LEAVE TO AMEND as discussed above.
