UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

JAMES GUSMAN, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated,

Plaintiff,

v.

COMCAST CORPORATION,

Defendant.

Civil No. 13-cv-1049-GPC (DHB)

ORDER RESOLVING JOINT MOTION FOR DETERMINATION OF
DISCOVERY DISPUTE

[ECF No. 29]

On March 5, 2014, Plaintiff James Gusman (“Plaintiff”) and Defendant Comcast Corporation (“Comcast” or “Defendant”) filed a Joint Motion for Determination of Discovery Dispute. (ECF No. 29.) The Court held a telephonic Discovery Conference on March 14, 2014 to discuss issues raised in the joint motion. (ECF No. 33.) Following the Discovery Conference, the parties submitted a Joint Status Report. (ECF No. 37.) Having considered the arguments of the parties and the applicable law, and for the reasons set forth herein, the Court DENIES Plaintiff’s motion to compel Comcast to produce its outbound dial list and documentary evidence of prior express consent. Additionally, the Court GRANTS IN PART Comcast’s motion to compel production of Plaintiff’s retainer and fee agreements.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff commenced this putative class action on May 2, 2013 by filing a complaint alleging that Comcast violated the Telephone Consumer Protection Act

1 (“TCPA”), 47 U.S.C. § 227 et seq. (ECF No. 1.) Specifically, Plaintiff alleges that 2 “[b]eginning in February 2013, Defendant began contacting Plaintiff, sometimes as many 3 as ten times in a single day, with an automatic telephone dialing system (‘ATDS’) as 4 defined by 47 U.S.C. § 227(a)(1) using an ‘artificial or prerecorded voice’ as prohibited 5 by 47 U.S.C. [§] 227(b)(1)(A) in order to discuss Defendant’s prescription services with 6 Plaintiff.” (Id. at 4:22-26.) Plaintiff further alleges he informed a representative on each 7 occasion “that Plaintiff was not a current subscriber to Defendant’s services nor had 8 Plaintiff ever been a subscriber.” (Id. at 5:4-6.) Plaintiff did not provide his cellular 9 telephone number, which he obtained on or about February 1, 2013, to Comcast at any 10 time. (Id. at 5:7-11.) Plaintiff further alleges Comcast’s use of an ATDS to contact 11 Plaintiff was not done for emergency purposes, the calls constitute solicitations under the 12 TCPA, and “Plaintiff did not provide prior express consent to receive calls or messages 13 on Plaintiff’s cellular telephones.” (Id. at 5:21-26.)

14 According to the operative Complaint, Plaintiff seeks to certify the following class: 15 “[A]ll persons within the United States who received any unsolicited marketing and 16 artificial or prerecorded voice messages from Defendant without prior express consent 17 which message by Defendant or its agents was not made for emergency purposes, within 18 the four years prior to the filing of this action.” (Id. at 6:4-8.)

19 II. DISCUSSION

20 A. Legal Standards

21 The threshold requirement for discoverability under the Federal Rules of Civil 22 Procedure is whether the information sought is “relevant to any party’s claim or defense.”
23 FED. R. CIV. P. 26(b)(1). In addition, “[f]or good cause, the court may order discovery 24 of any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the action. Relevant information 25 need not be admissible at the trial if the discovery appears reasonably calculated to lead 26 to the discovery of admissible evidence.” Id. The relevance standard is thus commonly 27 recognized as one that is necessarily broad in scope in order “to encompass any matter 28 that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter that could bear on, any issue

1 that is or may be in the case.” Oppenheimer Fund, Inc. v. Sanders, 437 U.S. 340, 351
2 (1978) (citing Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 501 (1947)).

3 However broadly defined, relevancy is not without “ultimate and necessary 4 boundaries.” Hickman, 329 U.S. at 507. Accordingly, district courts have broad 5 discretion to determine relevancy for discovery purposes. See Hallett v. Morgan, 296
6 F.3d 732, 751 (9th Cir. 2002); Vonole v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 571 F.3d 935, 7 942 (9th Cir. 2009) (“District courts have broad discretion to control the class 8 certification process, and “[w]hether or not discovery will be permitted . . . lies within the 9 sound discretion of the trial court.”) (citing Kamm v. Cal. City Dev. Co., 509 F.2d 205, 10 209 (9th Cir. 1975)). District courts also have broad discretion to limit discovery. For 11 example, a court may limit the scope of any discovery method if it determines that “the 12 discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative, or can be obtained from 13 some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive.” FED. R.
14 Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(I).

15 Generally at the pre-class certification stage, discovery in a putative class action 16 is limited to certification issues such as the number of class members, the existence of 17 common questions, typicality of claims, and the representative’s ability to represent the 18 class. Oppenheimer Fund, 437 U.S. at 359. Although discovery on the merits is usually 19 deferred until it is certain that the case will proceed as a class action, the 20 merits/certification distinction is not always clear. Facts that are relevant to the class 21 determination frequently will overlap with those relevant to the merits of the case. See 22 Wal-Mart Stores Inc. v. Dukes, ___ U.S. ___, 131 S. Ct. 2541, 2551-52 (2011) (explaining 23 that often the “rigorous analysis” under Rule 23(a) “will entail some overlap with the 24 merits of the plaintiff’s underlying claim. That cannot be helped.”).

25 B. Plaintiff’s Motion to Compel

26 Plaintiff seeks a court order compelling Comcast to produce (1) its outbound dial 27 list of calls made to consumers using an ATDS (ECF No. 29 at 5:23-8:2), and (2) 28 documentary evidence of prior express consent. (Id. at 8:4-10:25.)

1 1. Outbound Dial List

2 Plaintiff’s Request for Production No. 7¹ to Comcast states:

3 Produce any and all DOCUMENTS relating to or regarding, and including, 4 any and all reports for each outbound dial list to persons that YOU called on 5 behalf of YOURSELF, and/or any third party, including those outbound dial 6 lists, in electronically searchable format (CSV for comma delimited format), 7 generated by any autodialer campaign in which YOU or YOUR agents 8 engaged since four years prior the filing of this action to the date of 9 responding to these document requests.

10 (ECF No. 29-1 at 13:8-14.)

11 Plaintiff claims Comcast’s outbound dial list is discoverable in that it is relevant 12 to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(a) class certification requirements of numerosity 13 and commonality. (ECF No. 29 at 6:6-7:19.) Plaintiff also maintains the outbound dial 14 list is relevant to the issue of manageability under Rule 23(b)(3). (Id. at 7:20-28.)

15 Comcast contends Plaintiff’s request for the outbound dial list is overbroad in light 16 of Comcast’s 22 million subscribers and because the request fails to distinguish between 17 different categories of calls, i.e., collection calls versus marketing calls. (Id. at 16:10-18 17:6.) Comcast also contends the request is not limited to calls made from any particular 19 type of dialing equipment or calls placed from the particular geographic division as the 20 calls placed to Plaintiff. (Id. at 17:7-14.)

21 a. Numerosity

22 Plaintiff contends “[t]he outbound dial list during the class period is relevant to the 23 numerosity prerequisite because it will allow Plaintiff to explain to the Court 24 approximately how many cellular telephone numbers were called during the class period, 25 which information can be used to reasonably determine whether there are enough class 26 members that resolving the claims outside the class action mechanism of recovery would 27 be impracticable.” (Id. at 6:6-12.) In support of its contention, Plaintiff relies on Stemple 28 v. QC Holdings, Inc., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 99582, at *6 (S.D. Cal. June 17, 2013).
29 (ECF No. 29 at 6:13-16.)

¹ Plaintiff’s Request for Production Nos. 8-10 contain similar language regarding production of Comcast’s outbound dial list. (ECF No. 29-1 at 13:15-14:12.)

1 The Court agrees with Plaintiff that Comcast’s outbound dial list is reasonably 2 calculated to determine the number of calls Comcast made to cell phones during the class 3 period. Thus, the outbound dial list is relevant to numerosity. However, the Court 4 concludes that Plaintiff has less intrusive and burdensome means available to him to 5 obtain evidence which could be used to satisfy the Rule 23(a)(1) numerosity prerequisite.
6 Indeed, carefully-drafted interrogatories or requests for admission, or Comcast’s Rule 7 30(b)(6) deposition, can be utilized to obtain the relevant data to determine an 8 approximate number of calls made to cell phones using an autodialer during the proposed 9 class period.

10 One of Plaintiff’s alternative proposals supports the Court’s conclusion. In lieu of 11 production of the outbound dial list, Plaintiff proposes that “Defendant’s technology 12 consultant . . . scrub the outbound dial list for cellular telephone numbers only and then 13 inform Plaintiff’s counsel of the total number of unique cell phones called during the 14 class period and call frequency. This would obviate the need for actual production of the 15 outbound dial list for pre-certification purposes.” (Id. at 5:12-17.) Thus, Plaintiff 16 concedes that production of the list is not necessary if Plaintiff were provided the total 17 number of cell phones called and the call frequency. Such information is obtainable via 18 much less burdensome discovery methods.

19 Comcast argues “[t]he breadth of [Plaintiff’s request] is staggering.” (Id. at 16:11.)
20 While Comcast would have strengthened its position by articulating with specificity the 21 burden it would face in producing its outbound dial list, the Court finds that production 22 of the outbound dial list would impose an undue burden on Comcast in light of the other 23 available means of obtaining the relevant information. As Plaintiff recognizes, “[t]he 24 court is able to make common-sense assumptions in determining numerosity.” McCabe
25 v. Crawford & Co., 210 F.R.D. 631, 644 (N.D. Ill. 2002). Similarly, the Court here 26 makes the common-sense assumption that given Comcast’s 22 million subscribers, 27 production of Comcast’s call list over a four-year period will entail significant time and 28 expense. In light of the actual information Plaintiff seeks to obtain, i.e., number of cell

1 phones called and call frequency, and the availability of other, less burdensome methods
2 of discovering this information, the Court finds that requiring Comcast to expend the time 3 and resources to produce the outbound dial list is not warranted.

4 The Court also concludes the request is also overbroad and unreasonably 5 burdensome given the uncertain nature of Plaintiff's class allegations. As stated above, 6 Plaintiff's operative Complaint seeks to certify a class of "all persons within the United 7 States who received any unsolicited marketing and artificial or prerecorded voice 8 messages from Defendant without prior express consent which message by Defendant or 9 its agents was not made for emergency purposes, within the four years prior to the filing 10 of this action." (ECF No. 1 at 6:4-8 (emphasis added).) Comcast contends that 11 marketing calls are not applicable in this case because Plaintiff did not receive marketing 12 calls. Rather, Plaintiff received collection calls made to a phone number that had 13 previously been assigned to a Comcast subscriber, but was later assigned to Plaintiff, a 14 non-subscriber. Thus, according to Comcast, this case involves a "recycled" phone 15 number. (ECF No. 29 at 15:2-5; ECF No. 29-2 at 2:13-3:2.) Although this distinction 16 goes to the merits of Plaintiff's allegations and will be decided at the proper time in this 17 case, it is important for discovery purposes because the scope of Plaintiff's proposed class 18 is not entirely clear. On one hand, the Court is bound by the class definition provided in 19 the Complaint. See Ortiz v. McNeil-PPC, Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39584, at *2 (S.D.
20 Cal. May 8, 2009). On the other hand, the "recycled" phone number facts presented by 21 Comcast, which are not disputed by Plaintiff, do not justify imposing a significant burden 22 on Comcast to produce an outbound dial list of marketing calls when it appears this case 23 involves collection calls.²

24 Accordingly, although the outbound dial list is relevant to the issue of numerosity, 25 under the circumstances of this case it is appropriate to DENY Plaintiff's request for the 26 list because "the discovery sought . . . can be obtained from some other source that is 27

28 ² Plaintiff's counsel even acknowledged during the March 14, 2014 Discovery
Conference that this case involves debt collection calls rather than marketing calls.

1 more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive” and Plaintiff “has had ample 2 opportunity to obtain the information by discovery in this action.” FED. R. CIV. P.
3 26(b)(2)(C)(I)-(ii).

4 b. Commonality

5 Plaintiff also contends Comcast’s outbound dial list is relevant to Rule 23(a)(2)’s 6 commonality prerequisite. (ECF No. 29 at 6:18-7:18.)

7 “Class certification requires a plaintiff to show ‘there are questions of law or fact 8 common to the class.’” Knutson v. Schwan’s Home Serv., Inc., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9 98735, at *20 (S.D. Cal. July 15, 2013) (citing FED. R. CIV. P. 23(a)(2)). “To satisfy 10 commonality, a plaintiff must actively show the putative class ‘suffered the same injury 11 . . . such that the . . . class claims will share common questions of law or fact’ with those 12 of the named plaintiffs.” Id. (citing Gen. Tel. Co. of the Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S.
13 147, 157 (1982)). “Merely stating questions common to all putative class members is 14 insufficient, however, because ‘[a]ny competently crafted class complaint literally raises 15 common ‘questions.’” Id. at *20-21 (quoting Wal-Mart, 131 S. Ct. at 2551). “As a result, 16 the test of commonality is not whether common questions exist, but whether common 17 answers to critical questions of law and fact can be reached without impediment.” Id. at 18 *21 (citing Wal-Mart, 131 S. Ct. at 2551). “Since the plaintiff carries the burden of 19 demonstrating commonality, such proof may overlap with findings of merit of the 20 plaintiff’s claim.” Id. at *21 (citing Wal-Mart, 131 S. Ct. at 2551-52).

21 In Knutson, Judge Curiel stated:

22 The common question is thus, “were we all called on our cellular 23 telephones, by an autodialer or artificial or prerecorded voice, on behalf of 24 [defendant], without having given express consent?” A list of numbers 25 dialed by an autodialer on behalf of [defendant] for a singular purpose could be relevant to this inquiry, especially since Plaintiffs claim the cell phone numbers can be reliably identified within the list and used in conjunction with evidence of lack of consent.

26 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 98735, at *22.

27 On remand in Knutson, the undersigned concluded that a truncated dial list was 28 indeed relevant to the question of commonality because it would show, after being

1 analyzed by the plaintiffs' consultants, whether the calls made by the defendant were 2 made to the putative class members' cellular telephones. Knutson v. Schwan's Home
3 Service, Inc., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 103094, at *4 (S.D. Cal. July 23, 2013).

4 Similarly, here, Comcast's outbound dial list is relevant to the issue of whether the 5 putative class members were called on their cellular phones by an ATDS. However, as 6 with the issue of numerosity, the Court concludes, in its discretion, that production of the 7 outbound dial list is unwarranted because "the discovery sought . . . can be obtained from 8 some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive" and 9 Plaintiff "has had ample opportunity to obtain the information by discovery in this 10 action." FED. R. CIV. P. 26(b)(2)(C)(I)-(ii). Specifically, Plaintiff is able to utilize less 11 burdensome methods of discovery to determine whether Comcast made calls to cell 12 phones using an ATDS without having prior express consent. Accordingly, although the 13 outbound dial list is relevant to the issue of commonality, under the circumstances of this 14 case it is appropriate to DENY Plaintiff's request for the list.³

15 2. Prior Express Consent Documentation

16 Plaintiff's Request for Production No. 12 states:

17 Produce the DOCUMENTS that YOU used to determine whether the 18 cellular telephone numbers to be called by YOU had provided their "prior 19 express consent", as that term is used in 47 U.S.C. Section 227(b)1, 20 prior to making any attempt to call those numbers, including but not limited 21 to any electronic notations in the outbound dial list that the called party provided "prior express consent," and including all DOCUMENTS that YOU may rely on at trial or other hearing in this case to establish "prior express consent" was provided to YOU since four years prior to the filing of this action to the date of responding to these document requests.

22 (ECF No. 29-1 at 14:20-28.)

23 Plaintiff seeks to compel Comcast to produce all documentary evidence of prior 24 express consent, which Plaintiff characterizes as an affirmative defense rather than an 25 element of his TCPA claim. (ECF No. 29 at 8:15-9:16.) Alternatively, Plaintiff seeks, 26

27 ³ In light of the Court's ruling that Comcast need not produce its outbound dial list, 28 the Court does not address the parties conflicting arguments regarding the application of the Cable Communications Act of 1984, 47 U.S.C. § 521 et seq.

1 at a minimum, “the blank customer contracts and other blank forms used by Defendant
2 to purportedly obtain prior express consent.” (Id. at 9:17-18.) Plaintiff claims “[t]hese 3 blank contracts/forms will assist Plaintiff in demonstrating whether the language on the 4 forms are sufficient to obtain prior express consent for Defendant to make automated and 5 or prerecorded calls to the putative class members.” (Id. at 9:20-24.) Absent this 6 documentation, Plaintiff claims he will be prejudiced if Comcast later uses unproduced 7 consent documents in opposing Plaintiff’s anticipated motion for class certification. (Id.
8 at 10:2-19.)

9 In opposition to Plaintiff’s request, Comcast argues that because Plaintiff “has 10 never been a Comcast subscriber [he] lacks standing to challenge the efficacy” of 11 Comcast’s subscriber agreements. (Id. at 13:23-24.) Comcast also contends that it is 12 Plaintiff that must prove lack of consent as an element of his TCPA claim. (Id. at 20:5-13 14.) Comcast also argues disclosure of its subscriber’s consent documentation raises 14 privacy concerns. (Id. at 20:16-21:6.) Finally, Comcast’s counsel represented during the 15 March 14, 2014 Discovery Conference that Comcast has already produced a screenshot 16 showing that the prior subscriber had provided the phone number at issue as well as 17 copies of its Agreement for Residential Services and its Customer Privacy Notice (see id.
18 at 19:5-8), and that Comcast does not expect to rely on any other documents on the issue 19 of prior express consent.

20 Upon consideration of this issue, the Court concludes that Comcast has satisfied 21 its discovery obligation. Plaintiff agrees with Comcast that he was not a Comcast 22 subscriber at the time he received the phone calls at issue. (ECF No. 1 at 5:4-6.)
23 Moreover, Comcast has produced its Agreement for Residential Services and its 24 Customer Privacy Notice. At this stage of the case it is premature to order Comcast to 25 provide any more specific express consent documents, particularly in light of the fact that 26 Plaintiff, at this juncture, has failed to clearly define the putative class definition. As 27 discussed above, the Complaint alleges a class definition involving marketing calls; 28 however, in the recently filed Joint Status Report (ECF No. 37), Plaintiff’s class

1 definition emphasis has morphed into an emphasis on debt collection calls. Because the 2 class definition appears to be a moving target, it is inappropriate to require Comcast to 3 provide additional express consent documentation until after Plaintiff has clearly defined 4 his class definition in his formally filed class certification motion. In this regard, any 5 surprise Plaintiff may experience when Comcast opposes class certification is a result of 6 Plaintiff's own decisions which have left the class definition in flux.

7 Accordingly, Plaintiff's motion to compel Comcast to produce further documents 8 regarding prior express consent is DENIED. In light of this ruling, the Court need not 9 address at this stage the parties' conflicting positions on whether prior express consent
10 is an affirmative defense to be established by Comcast or an element of Plaintiff's TCPA 11 claim on which Plaintiff bears the burden of proof.

12 C. Comcast's Motion to Compel

13 Comcast seeks an order compelling Plaintiff to produce his retainer and fee 14 agreements with counsel in this case and in any other TCPA class actions initiated by 15 Plaintiff. (ECF No. 29 at 22:1-25.)⁴

16 Defendant served the following document request on Plaintiff: "All DOCUMENTS 17 CONCERNING any agreement with, or the terms pursuant to which [Plaintiff] retained, 18 any attorney to represent [Plaintiff] in this action, including engagement letters or 19 retention agreements between [Plaintiff] and any attorney CONCERNING this action."
20 (ECF No. 29-2 at 5:24-26, 31:3-6.) Defendant served a separate request seeking the same 21 type of documents with respect to any other putative class action initiated by Plaintiff.
22 (Id. at 5:24-26, 31:14-18.)

23 Defendant claims the responsive documents are not privileged and that, "in 24 putative class actions, retainer and fee agreements are relevant to 'the ability of named 25

26 ⁴ Comcast's portion of the parties' joint motion also addressed Comcast's request 27 for Plaintiff's cell phone records. (ECF No. 29 at 21:8-27.) However, on March 13, 28 2014, Comcast filed a status report indicating that this issue has been "resolved and Comcast withdraws its request that the Court compel Plaintiff to produce his cell phone records." (ECF No. 31 at 2:13-14.) Counsel for both parties confirmed during the March 14, 2014 Discovery Conference that this issue has been resolved.

1 plaintiffs to protect the interest of potential class members and hence are a proper subject
2 for discovery.’” (ECF No. 29 at 22:8-17 (quoting Epstein v. Am. Reserve Corp., 1985
3 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15842, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 18, 1985)).)

4 Plaintiff objected to both requests on grounds that they are (1) not relevant or 5 reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence; (2) overbroad as 6 to scope and time and, therefore, unduly burdensome; (3) vague and ambiguous; and (4) 7 seeking documents in violation of the attorney-client privilege. (Id. at 31:8-12, 21-24.)

8 “The Ninth Circuit has repeatedly held retainer agreements are not protected by the 9 attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine.” Hoot Winc, LLC v. RSM McGladrey 10 Fin. Process Outsourcing, LLC, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 103045, at *5 (S.D. Cal. Nov.
11 4, 2009) (citing Ralls v. United States, 52 F.3d 223, 225 (1995); United States v.
12 Blackman, 72 F.3d 1418, 1424 (9th Cir. 1995); In re Michaelson, 511 F.2d 882 (9th Cir.
13 1975)); see also Carrizosa v. Stassinis, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 66358, at *3 (N.D. Cal.
14 Aug. 31, 2006) (stating that under Ninth Circuit law, fee agreements generally fall outside 15 the scope of the attorney-client privilege). “Communications between attorney and client 16 that concern the identity of the client, the amount of the fee, the identification of payment 17 by case file name, and the general purpose of the work performed are usually not 18 protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege.” Paul v. Winco Holdings, Inc., 19 249 F.R.D. 643, 654 (D. Idaho Feb. 27, 2008) (quoting Clarke v. Am. Commerce Nat’l 20 Bank, 974 F.2d 127, 129 (9th Cir. 1992)). However, “correspondence, bills, ledgers, 21 statements, and time records which also reveal the motive of the client in seeking 22 representation, litigation strategy, or the specific nature of the services provided, such as 23 researching particular areas of law, fall within the privilege.” Id.

24 Here, the Court concludes Plaintiff’s retainer and fee agreement with counsel in 25 this case is relevant to the Rule 23(a)(4) analysis of whether Plaintiff is an adequate 26 representative of the class. See Rolex Emps. Ret. Trust v. Mentor Graphics Corp., 136 27 F.R.D. 658, 666 (D. Or. 1991); Epstein, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15842, at *7 (“Fee 28 agreements are relevant to the ability of named plaintiffs to protect the interest of

1 potential class members and hence are a proper subject for discovery.” (citing Klein v.
2 Miller, 82 F.R.D. 6, 8-9 (N.D. Tex. 1978) (“[I]nquiry into Plaintiffs’ . . . fee arrangement
3 is relevant to the question of Plaintiffs’ ability to protect the interests of potential class 4 members by adequate funding of this lawsuit, and the question of award of attorneys fees 5 in the settlement of possible judgment of this lawsuit.”)).

6 Moreover, the attorney-client privilege generally does not preclude disclosure of 7 fee agreements. Epstein, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15842, at *7 (“[F]ee agreements are not 8 ordinarily subject to the attorney-client privilege.”) (citing Klein, 82 F.R.D. at 8-9)). In 9 resolving the instant dispute, the Court relies on a similar analysis performed by 10 Magistrate Judge Barbara L. Major in Stanley v. Bayer Healthcare LLC, 2011 U.S. Dist.
11 LEXIS 132363, at *12-13 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 16, 2011). In that case, Judge Major 12 concluded “it is clear that retainer agreements are not typically protected by 13 attorney-client privilege.” Id. at *12. However, in light of the plaintiff’s claim that the 14 contents of her retainer agreement would reveal privileged communications, Judge Major 15 ordered that an unredacted copy of the agreement be submitted to chambers for in camera 16 review. Id.

17 The Court concludes that Plaintiff’s retainer and fee agreement with counsel 18 pertaining to the instant lawsuit is relevant to class certification and should be produced 19 to the Court for in camera review to determine whether disclosure would reveal 20 privileged communications. However, Comcast has not established the relevancy or need 21 for Plaintiff’s retainer and fee agreements pertaining to other TCPA class actions.
22 Accordingly, Comcast’s motion to compel production of Plaintiff’s retainer and fee 23 agreements is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART.

1 III. CONCLUSION⁵

2 Based on the foregoing, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED:

- 3 1. Plaintiff's motion to compel Comcast to produce its outbound dial list and 4 additional documentation regarding prior express consent is DENIED.

26 ⁵ The Court notes that it received and reviewed a joint statements from the parties, 27 which was emailed to chambers on March 31, 2014, regarding Plaintiff's anticipated 28 request for an extension of the class discovery cutoff and Plaintiff's deadline to file his motion for class certification. Initially, the Court advises that any request for extension must be properly filed via CM/ECF. Moreover, because Plaintiff's anticipated requested appears to be premised on an expectation that additional documents would be forthcoming from Comcast, given the Court's ruling on the instant discovery dispute, the Court does not believe that any extensions of the deadlines are warranted at this time.
