27	banking association, with its principal place of business in San Francisco, California and
28	its main office in South Dakota. (Compl., $\P$ 7; Opp. [Doc. 9], 2:2-4.)

13-CV-1279 W

In August 2006, Plaintiffs purchased property located at 5448 La Jolla Blvd., Unit F101, La Jolla, CA 92037 (the "Residence"). (Compl., ¶ 17.) "Plaintiffs executed a 2 3 series of documents, including but not limited to, a Note and Deed of Trust, securing the Note in the amount of \$680,000 on the Residence." (Id.) Wells Fargo is the 4 5 original mortgage broker, lender and servicer used to purchase the loan. (Id.,  $\P$  7.)

On March 11, 2013, Plaintiffs filed a Complaint against Defendants in the San Diego Superior Court alleging seven state-based causes of action. On June 3, 2013, Wells Fargo removed the lawsuit to this Court based on diversity jurisdiction. Plaintiffs now seek remand on the basis that Wells Fargo is a California citizen since its principal place of business is in San Francisco. Wells Fargo opposes arguing that as a national bank, it is only a citizen of South Dakota, where its main office is located.

II. DISCUSSION

14 An action is removable to federal court only if it might have been brought here originally. See 28 U.S.C. §1441(a). The removal statute is "strictly construe[d]... 15 against removal jurisdiction." Gaus v. Miles, Inc., 980 F.2d 564, 566 (9th Cir. 16 17 1992) (per curiam). "Federal jurisdiction must be rejected if there is any doubt as to the right of removal." Id. "Th[is] 'strong presumption' against removal jurisdiction means 18 19 that the defendant always has the burden of establishing that removal is proper." Id.

20 Diversity jurisdiction exists where the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000 and the suit is between citizens of different States. 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(1). For 21 22 purposes of diversity jurisdiction, corporations are generally considered citizens of the state of incorporation and principal place of business. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(c)(1). 23 24 However, a national bank's citizenship for purposes of diversity jurisdiction is governed by 28 U.S.C. § 1348. This section provides: 25

All national banking associations shall, for the purposes of all other actions by or against them, be deemed citizens of the States in which they are receptively located.

28 U.S.C. § 1348. Thus, whether diversity jurisdiction exists in this case depends on if the term "located" includes 28 U.S.C. § 1332(c) (1)'s principal-place-of-business test.
 If it does, because Wells Fargo's principal place of business is in California, diversity jurisdiction would not exist.

5 As an initial matter, this Court recognizes that there is considerable disagreement regarding the interpretation of "located" in section 1348. While Wells Fargo argues 6 that most published decisions have interpreted "located" to only include a national 7 bank's main office, there is also a significant number of cases that have interpreted the 8 term to also include a bank's principal place of business.<sup>1</sup> Moreover, there appears to 9 10 be a growing number of cases in this district that have found the principal-place-ofbusiness test applicable to national banks. See Ortiz v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. 2013 11 12 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5661 (2013); Bickoff v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 2013 U.S. Dist. 13 LEXIS 2293 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 4, 2013); Uriarte v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 127497 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 3, 2011); Saberi v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., 14 15 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5286 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 20, 2011). Wells Fargo nevertheless argues that under Wachovia Bank v. Schmidt, 546 U.S. 303 (2006), national banks are only 16 citizens of the state in which the main office is located and that Schmidt "rejected" 1 2 application of the principal-place-of-business test to national banks.

3 In Schmidt, a national bank filed a diversity action against several South 4 Carolina citizens. After judgment was entered in favor of the defendants, the Court of 5 Appeal evaluated whether diversity jurisdiction existed. The court found that because the bank had a branch office in South Carolina, the bank was "located" in South 6 Carolina and, therefore, was a South Carolina citizen for purposes of diversity. 7 8 Accordingly, the Court of Appeal vacated the district court judgment, finding that it 9 lacked subject-matter jurisdiction.

10 The Supreme Court rejected the Court of Appeal's expansive interpretation of 11 the term "located" and held that a national bank, for purposes of diversity jurisdiction, 12 "is a citizen of the State in which its main office, as set forth in its articles of association, 13 is located." Id., 546 U.S. at 307. The Court explained:

Were we to hold, as the Court of Appeal did, that a national bank is additionally a citizen of every State in which it has established a branch, the access of a federally chartered bank to a federal forum would be drastically curtailed in comparison to the access afforded state banks and other state-incorporated entities. Congress, we are satisfied, created no such anomaly.

Id. In a footnote, the Court acknowledged that Firstar Bank, N.A. v. Faul, 253 F.3d 18 982 (7th Cir. 2001) and Horton v. Bank One, N.A., 387 F.3d 426 (5th Cir. 2004) had 19 interpreted the term "located" to include a national bank's main office and principal 20 place of business. Id. at n 8. But the Court refused to express an opinion on the issue 21 because it "is not presented by the parties or necessary to today's decision." Id. 22

Given Schmidt's explicit refusal to decide whether the term "located" includes a bank's principal place of business, Wells Fargo's claim that the decision rejected the 24 principal-place-of-business test and "parity between national banks and corporations" 25 (see Opp. [Doc. 9], 4:12–13), lacks merit. And although Schmidt acknowledged that 26 the principal-place-of-business test is not found in section 1348's language, the same is 27 true of the term "main office." Neither term is found in section 1348. Indeed, Schmidt 28 recognized that "located' is not a term of enduring rigidity" and instead focused on a discussion of section 1348's predecessor statutes, which the Court found sought to establish parity between national banks and state banks regarding access to federal courts. Schmidt, 546 U.S. at 310–312. For this reason, this Court is persuaded that Firstar and Horton are in harmony with and most accurately reflect Schmidt's reasoning.

In Horton, a national bank filed a diversity lawsuit. Similar to the situation in Schmidt, the district court interpreted "located" in section 1348 to include a bank's branch offices. Because one of the defendants was a citizen of a state in which the bank had a branch office, the district court found diversity was lacking. The Seventh Circuit reversed, relying in large part on section 1348's predecessor statutes:

12 Congress passed 28 U.S.C. § 1348 against an interpretive background which assumed the national banks were to have the same access to the 13 federal courts as state banks and corporations. No language in the statute indicates a rejection of this existing construction. A useful contrast can 14 be drawn with the 1882 Act, which stated with exceptional clarity that 15 national banks should not be able to resort to federal courts solely by virtue of their status as federal creations. Since Congress did not include 16 any language suggesting that it intended to alter the established 17 background assumption that federal courts have the same jurisdiction over national banks as over any other corporation, we presume that Congress 18 intended for 28 U.S.C. §1348's meaning to comport with the judicial 19 interpretations of its predecessor.

20 Id. at 988–989. See also Horton, 387 F.3d 426.

Because the Ninth Circuit has not yet addressed the issue in the wake of Schmidt, and Horton's reasoning appears consistent with Schmidt's reasoning, this Court finds that under section 3148, Wells Fargo Bank is "located" in California, and thus diversity jurisdiction is lacking.

Finally, Plaintiffs' also seek to recover attorney's fees. Given the unsettled state of the law within the Ninth Circuit on the issue, Defendant did not lack an objectively reasonable basis for seeking removal. 28 U.S.C. §1447(c); see Martin v. Franklin
