UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

AL OTRO LADO, INC.; ABIGAIL
DOE, BEATRICE DOE, CAROLINA
DOE, DINORA DOE, INGRID DOE, ROBERTO DOE, MARIA DOE,
JUAN DOE, ÚRSULA DOE,
VICTORIA DOE, BIANCA DOE,
EMILIANA DOE, AND CÉSAR
DOE, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated,

Plaintiffs,

v.

KEVIN MCALEENAN, Acting
Secretary of U.S. Department of Homeland Security, in his official capacity, et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. 17-cv-02366-BAS-KSC

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANTS’ MOTION TO DISMISS THE SECOND AMENDED COMPLAINT

[ECF No. 192]

In this case, Organizational Plaintiff Al Otro Lado, Inc. (“Al Otro Lado”), an organization that helps individuals seek asylum in the United States, and thirteen Individual Plaintiffs—Abigail Doe, Beatrice Doe, Carolina Doe, Dinora Doe, Ingrid Doe, Roberto Doe, Maria Doe, Juan Doe, Úrsula Doe, Victoria Doe, Bianca Doe, Emiliana Doe, and César Doe—challenge conduct that they allege is “designed to

1 serve the Trump [A]dministration’s broader, publicly proclaimed goal of deterring 2 individuals from seeking access to the asylum process.” (ECF No. 189 Second Am.
3 Compl. (“SAC”) ¶ 4.) According to Plaintiffs, U.S. Customs and Border Protection 4 (“CBP”) officials “have systematically restricted the number of asylum seekers who 5 can access the U.S. asylum process through POEs along the U.S.-Mexico border.”
6 (Id. ¶ 48.) Plaintiffs seek to hold various Defendant federal officials<sup>1</sup> that have 7 authority over immigration enforcement liable in their official capacities for an 8 alleged pattern or practice by CBP officers of denying asylum seekers at ports of 9 entry (“POEs”) along the U.S.-Mexico border access to the U.S. asylum process, and 10 an alleged formalized policy designed for the same end, which Plaintiffs refer to as 11 the Turnback Policy.

13 In the months following the Court’s grant in part and denial in part of 14 Defendants’ motion to dismiss the original complaint, see Al Otro Lado, Inc. v.
15 Nielsen, 327 F. Supp. 3d 1284 (S.D. Cal. 2018), Plaintiffs filed the operative Second 16 Amended Complaint (“SAC”). Like the original complaint, Plaintiffs allege in the 17 SAC that since late 2016 there is an alleged pattern and practice amongst CBP 18 officials at POEs along the U.S-Mexico border to “deny[] asylum seekers access to 19 the asylum process” “through a variety of illegal tactics.” (SAC ¶ 2.) Five original 20 Individual Plaintiffs—Plaintiffs Abigail Doe, Beatrice Doe, Carolina Doe, Dinora 21 Doe, and Ingrid Doe (the “Original Individual Plaintiffs”)—once more allege that

24 Kirstjen M. Nielsen, Secretary, U.S. Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”), 25 (2) Kevin McAleenan, Commissioner, U.S. Customs and Border Protection 26 (“CBP”), and (3) Todd C. Owens, Executive Assistant Commissioner, Office of 27 Field Operations, U.S. CBP. (SAC ¶¶ 36–39.) In the time since the SAC’s filing in 28 November 2018, at least two defendants have changed. Pursuant to Rule 25(d), the Court hereby substitutes (1) Kevin McAleenan as Acting Secretary of DHS in place of Nielsen and (2) John P. Sanders as the Acting Commissioner of CBP. Defendants shall notify the Court in the event any further substitution is warranted.

1 they were subjected to these tactics when CBP officials denied them access to the 2 U.S. asylum process at various POEs.<sup>2</sup> Unlike the original complaint, the SAC now 3 alleges that as early as 2016, Defendants were implementing a policy to restrict the 4 flow of asylum seekers at the San Ysidro POE. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants 5 formalized this policy in spring 2018 in the form of the border-wide Turnback 6 Policy, an alleged “formal policy to restrict access to the asylum process at POEs by 7 mandating that lower-level officials directly or constructively turn back asylum 8 seekers at the border,” including through pretextual assertions that POEs lack 9 capacity to process asylum seekers. (Id. ¶¶ 3, 48–83.) Eight new Individual 10 Plaintiffs—Roberto Doe, Maria Doe, Juan and Úrsula Doe, Victoria Doe, Bianca 11 Doe, Emiliana Doe, and César Doe (the “New Individual Plaintiffs”)—have joined 12 this lawsuit, alleging that they were subjected to this Turnback Policy. Both the 13 illegal tactics and the alleged Turnback Policy have resulted in many asylum seekers, 14 particularly those from Central America, who present themselves at POEs along the 15 U.S.-Mexico border being “turned back by” and “at the instruction of” CBP officials.

18 Based on the conduct alleged, Plaintiffs press claims for violations of various 19 Immigration and Nationality Act (“INA”) provisions, which Plaintiffs call “the U.S.
20 asylum process.” In connection with the alleged INA violations, Plaintiffs assert 21 claims under the Administrative Procedure Act (“APA”), 5 U.S.C. §§ 706(1), 22 706(2), and claims directly under the Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause for 23 alleged procedural due process violations. All Plaintiffs further assert claims under 24 the Alien Tort Statute (“ATS”), 28 U.S.C. § 1350, on the ground that the alleged 25

26 <sup>2</sup> For reasons unknown to the Court, Original Individual Jose Doe was dropped 27 from this suit in the First Amended Complaint (“FAC”) filed nearly two months after 28 the Court’s prior dismissal order and he is not a plaintiff to the SAC filed a month after the FAC. (ECF Nos. 176, 189.)

1 conduct violates a duty of non-refoulement, which Plaintiffs contend is an 2 international law norm that “forbids a country from returning or expelling an 3 individual to a country where he or she has a well-founded fear of persecution and/or 4 torture[.]” Defendants move to dismiss the SAC under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to 5 state a claim. (ECF Nos. 192, 238.) Plaintiffs oppose. (ECF No. 210.) The parties 6 presented oral argument to the Court. (ECF No. 259; ECF No. 260, Hr’g Tr.) In 7 addition to the parties’ submissions, six amicus briefs have been submitted with the 8 Court’s permission. (ECF Nos. 215, 216, 219, 221, 223.)<sup>3</sup>

 10 For the reasons herein, the Court grants in part and denies in part Defendants’ 11 motion to dismiss the SAC.

12 BACKGROUND

13 I. Statutory and Regulatory Background

14 I. Statutory and Regulatory Background
 15 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1) is this case’s statutory bedrock. It provides that:

16 Any alien who is physically present in the United States or who 17 arrives in the United States (whether or not at a designated port of 18 arrival and including an alien who is brought to the United States

 22 Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New 23 York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Virginia, and Washington in 24 support of Plaintiffs, (ECF No. 215-1); (2) Amicus Curiae Brief of Amnesty

1 after having been interdicted in international or United States
2 waters), irrespective of such alien’s status, may apply for asylum 3 in accordance with this section or . . . section 1225(b)[.]

4 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1).

5 This case turns on the Section 1225(b) asylum procedure that Section 1158 6 incorporates. Section 1225 sets forth, in relevant part, certain inspection duties of 7 immigration officers, which undergird additional specific duties that arise when 8 certain aliens express an intent to seek asylum in the United States or a fear of 9 persecution.

10 Section 1225(a) establishes the general inspection duty: “[a]ll aliens . . . who 11 are applicants for admission or otherwise seeking admission . . . to . . . the United 12 States shall be inspected by immigration officers.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3). In 13 language that echoes Section 1158(a)(1), Section 1225(a) defines as an “applicant 14 for admission” “[a]n alien present in the United States who has not been admitted or 15 who arrives in the United States (whether or not at a designated port of arrival 16 including an alien who is brought to the United States after having been interdicted 17 in international or United States waters)[.]” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). An 18 implementing regulation more broadly defines “arriving alien” as “an applicant for 19 admission coming or attempting to come into the United States at a port-of-entry, or 20 an alien seeking transit through the United States at a port-of-entry, or an alien 21 interdicted in international or United States waters and brought into the United States 22 by any means, whether or not to a designated port-of-entry, and regardless of the 23 means of transport.” 8 C.F.R. § 1.2. By regulation, “application to lawfully enter 24 the United States shall be made in person to an immigration officer at a U.S. port-25 of-entry when the port is open for inspection, or as otherwise” provided. 8 C.F.R. § 26 231.1(a).

28 Section 1225(b) sets forth two sets of procedures that apply to aliens “arriving

1 in the United States.” First, pursuant to the procedure under Section 1225(b)(1), an 2 arriving alien may be summarily “removed from the United States without further 3 hearing or review” “if an immigration officer determines” that the alien “is 4 inadmissible” for making certain fraudulent or misleading representations or for not 5 having valid entry or travel documents. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i); Thuraissigiam
6 v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 917 F.3d 1097, 1100 (9th Cir. 2019) (citing, inter 7 alia, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(C) and 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(7)). Section 1225(b)(1)’s 8 removal mandate, however, does not apply if “the alien indicates either an intention 9 to apply for asylum under section 1158 [] or a fear of persecution.” Id. Instead, “[i]f 10 the immigration officer determines that an alien” is “inadmissible” for making 11 certain fraudulent or misleading representations or for not having valid entry or 12 travel documents “and the alien indicates either an intention to apply for asylum 13 under section 1158 [] or a fear of persecution, the officer shall refer the alien for an 14 interview by an asylum officer[.]” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii) (emphasis added).
15 An implementing regulation governing this expedited removal procedure imposes 16 an analogous obligation. 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4). In these circumstances, the 17 immigration officer must refer the alien to an “asylum officer,” who is statutorily 18 required to be “an immigration officer who has had professional training in country 19 conditions, asylum law, and interview techniques comparable to that provided to 20 full-time adjudicators of applications under section 1158 of this title,” and “is 21 supervised by an officer who,” inter alia, “has had substantial experience 22 adjudicating asylum applications.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(E).

24 In contrast with the Section 1225(b)(1) procedure, Section 1225(b)(2) 25 establishes the procedure for “inspection of other aliens.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2).
26 “Subject to subparagraphs (B) and (C), in the case of an alien who is an applicant for 27 admission,” the alien “shall be detained for a proceeding under [8 U.S.C. §] 1229a” 28 (the general “removal proceedings” provision) “if the examining immigration officer

1 determines that an alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled 2 to be admitted[.]” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). Subparagraph (C) provides that “in 3 the case of an alien described in subparagraph (A) who is arriving on land . . . from 4 a foreign territory contiguous to the United States, the Attorney General may return 5 the alien to that territory pending a proceeding under section 1229a[.]” 8 U.S.C. § 6 1225(b)(2)(C). In relevant part, Subparagraph (B) provides that “[s]ubparagraph (A) 7 shall not apply to an alien—(ii) “to whom paragraph (1) applies”—i.e. aliens who 8 are subject to the procedure in 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1). 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(B)(ii).
9 Consistent with Section 1225(b)(2)’s instruction that asylum applicants are 10 channeled through the Section 1225(b)(1) procedure, Section 1225(b)(2) does not 11 elaborate on any asylum procedure.

13 During the Section 1225 admission process, “[a]n alien applying for 14 admission may, in the discretion of the Attorney General and at any time, be 15 permitted to withdraw the application for admission and depart immediately from 16 the United States.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(4). By regulation, “the alien’s decision to 17 withdraw his or her application for admission must be made voluntarily[.]” 8 C.F.R.
18 § 235.4.

20 II. Factual Allegations

21 A. Allegations Regarding Defendants

22 Defendants are U.S. government officials sued in their official capacity who 23 exercise authority over CBP in various capacities. The Defendant Secretary of 24 Homeland Security (the “Secretary”) “has ultimate authority over all CBP policies, 25 procedures, and practices.” (SAC ¶ 36.) The Secretary “is responsible for ensuring 26 that all CBP officials perform their duties in accordance with the Constitution and 27 all relevant laws.” (Id.) The Defendant CBP Commissioner “has direct authority 28 over all CBP policies, procedures, and practices.” (Id. ¶ 37.) Defendant oversees a

1 staff of more than 60,000 employees and “exercises authority over all CBP 2 operations.” (Id.) The Defendant Executive Assistant Commissioner (“EAC”) of 3 CBP’s Office of Field Operations oversees “the largest component of CBP and is 4 responsible for border security, including immigration and travel through U.S.
5 POEs,” for which the EAC oversees a staff of “more than 24, 000 CBP officials and 6 specialists[.]” (Id. ¶ 38.) Plaintiffs also sue 25 Doe Defendants who “were agents 7 or alter egos of Defendants, or [who] are otherwise responsible for all of the acts” 8 alleged. (Id. ¶ 39.) Defendants allegedly have denied access to the U.S. asylum 9 process to noncitizens fleeing “grave harm in their countries to seek protection in the 10 United States” “in contravention of U.S. and international law” pursuant to (1) “a 11 policy initiated by Defendants”—the Turnback Policy—and (2) “practices 12 effectively ratified by Defendants.” (Id. ¶ 1.) The Court describes Plaintiffs’ 13 allegations regarding each.

14 15 1. Alleged Pattern and Practice of Illegal Tactics

16 “Since 2016 and continuing to this day, CBP has engaged in an unlawful, 17 widespread pattern and practice of denying asylum seekers access to the asylum 18 process at POEs on the U.S.-Mexico border through a variety of illegal tactics.”
19 (SAC ¶¶ 2, 84.) CBP officials have carried out this practice through 20 misrepresentations, threats and intimidation, verbal and physical abuse, and 21 coercion. (Id. ¶¶ 84–106.) For example, CBP officials are alleged to turn away 22 asylum seekers by falsely informing them that the U.S. is no longer providing 23 asylum, that President Trump signed a new law ending asylum, that a law providing 24 asylum to Central Americans ended, that Mexican citizens are not eligible for 25 asylum, and that the U.S. is no longer accepting mothers with children for asylum.
26 (Id. ¶¶ 85–86.) CBP officials allegedly intimidate asylum seekers by threatening to 27 take away their children if they do not renounce a claim for asylum and by 28 threatening to deport asylum seekers. (Id. ¶¶ 87–88.) CBP officials allegedly force

1 asylum seekers to sign forms in English, without translation, in which the asylum 2 seekers recant their fears of persecution. (Id. ¶¶ 91–92.) CBP officials are alleged 3 to instruct some asylum seekers to recant their fears of persecution while being 4 recorded on video. (Id.) In some instances, CBP officials have “simply turn[ed]
5 asylum seekers away from POEs without any substantive explanation.” (Id. ¶¶ 93– 6 94.) Other alleged tactics include: (1) CBP officers physically block access to the 7 POE, including by “CBP sometimes enlist[ing] Mexican officials to act as their 8 agents”; (2) CBP officials impose “a fixed number of asylum seekers” per day and 9 place asylum seekers on a waiting list that results in “asylum-seeking men, women 10 and children wait[ing] endlessly on or near bridges leadings to POEs in rain, cold, 11 and blistering heat, without sufficient food or water and with limited bathroom 12 access”; and (3) racially discriminatory denials of access by CBP officers, including 13 by denying asylum seekers from specific countries access to POEs and allowing 14 “lighter-skinned individuals to pass.” (Id. ¶¶ 95–106.) Plaintiffs point to numerous 15 reports by non-governmental organization and “other experts working in the U.S.- 16 Mexico border region” as corroborating the existence and use of these tactics by 17 CBP officers. (Id. ¶¶ 107–08, 110–111, 113–16.)

18 19 2. The Alleged “Turnback Policy”

20 a. Nascent Stages

21 Plaintiffs allege that “evidence of a Turnback Policy” exists as early as May 22 2016, at least insofar as it concerns the San Ysidro POE, a POE that figures 23 prominently in the SAC and the Plaintiffs’ allegations. (SAC ¶¶ 51–53, 60; see also 24 id. ¶¶ 16, 25–26, 28, 32–35, 48 & n.37.) Plaintiffs point to a communication from 25 the “Watch Commander at the San Ysidro POE” indicating that “[t]he Asylee line 26 in the pedestrian building is not being used at this time,” with a follow-up 27 communication indicating that “it’s even more important that when the traffic is free-28 flowing that the limit line officers ask for and check documents to ensure that groups

1 that may be seeking asylum are directed to remain in the waiting area on the Mexican 2 side.” (Id.) At the time, CBP allegedly “collaborat[ed] with the Mexican 3 government to turn back asylum seekers at the San Ysidro POE,” collaboration that 4 was allegedly formalized in July 2016 and confirmed in December 2016. (Id. ¶¶ 52– 5 53.)

7 A border-wide policy allegedly existed as early as November 2016 because 8 the Assistant Director of Field Operations for the Laredo Field Office “instructed all 9 Port Directors under his command to follow the mandate of the then-CBP 10 Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner” to request that Mexico’s immigration 11 agency “control the flow of aliens to the port of entry.” (Id. ¶ 55.) Under this 12 mandate, the Commissioner allegedly directed that “if you determine that you can 13 only process 50 aliens, you will request that [Mexico’s immigration agency] release 14 only 50,” and if the agency “cannot or will not control the flow,” then CBP staff “is 15 to provide the alien with a piece of paper identifying a date and time for an 16 appointment and return then [sic] to Mexico.” (Id.) This directive “was promptly 17 implemented” at POEs along the Texas-Mexico portion of the U.S.-Mexico border 18 and “memorialized in January 2017.” (Id. ¶¶ 56, 57.) Plaintiffs allege that in a June 19 13, 2017 hearing before the House Appropriations Committee, John P. Wagner, the 20 Deputy Executive Assistant Commissioner for CBP’s Office of Field Operations, 21 admitted that CBP officials were turning back asylum seekers at POEs along the 22 U.S.-Mexico border and argued that “the practice was justified by a lack of capacity.”
23 (Id. ¶ 59.) The CBO Field Operations Director in charge of the San Ysidro POE 24 similarly acknowledged and defended the turnbacks in December 2017. (Id. ¶ 60.)
25

26 b. Alleged Formalization and High-Level Recognition

27 The alleged border-wide policy to turnback asylum seekers through false 28 assertions of lack of capacity took on a new life in spring 2018 “following an

1 arduous, widely-publicized journey” of “a group of several hundred asylum 2 seekers”—dubbed by the press as a “caravan”—who “arrived at the San Ysidro
3 POE.” (Id. ¶ 61.) “President Trump posted a series of messages on Twitter warning 4 of the dangers posed by the group, including one indicating that he had instructed 5 DHS ‘not to let these large Caravans of people into our Country.’” (Id. (citations 6 omitted).)

8         Around this time, high-level Trump Administration officials unambiguously 9 proclaimed, “the existence of their policy to intentionally restrict access to the 10 asylum process at POEs in violation of U.S. law.” (Id. ¶¶ 5, 62.) Then-U.S. Attorney 11 General Jeff Session “characterized the caravan’s arrival as ‘a deliberate attempt to 12 undermine our laws and overwhelm our system.’” (Id. ¶ 63.) Following the arrival 13 of the “caravan,” “CBP officials indicated—in accordance with the Turnback 14 Policy—that they had exhausted their capacity to process individuals traveling 15 without proper documentation.” (Id. ¶¶ 7, 64, 67.) On May 15, 2018, then-Secretary 16 of Homeland Security Kirstjen Nielsen “characterized the asylum process . . . as a 17 legal ‘loophole’ and publicly announced a ‘metering’ process designed to restrict—18 and constructively deny—access to the asylum process through unreasonable and 19 dangerous delay.” (Id. ¶¶ 5, 65.) President Trump made a number of tweets 20 throughout June and July 2018 that further confirmed the alleged Turnback Policy, 21 including statements that “[w]hen somebody comes in, we must immediately, with 22 no Judges or Court Cases, bring them back from where they came from,” and “we 23 must IMMEDIATELY escort them back without going through years of 24 maneuvering.” (Id.) Plaintiffs point to numerous other confirmations of the 25 existence of the alleged Turnback Policy, designed and implemented by U.S.
26 officials, including statements by then-CBP Commissioner McAleenan in April 27 2018 indicating that “individuals [without appropriate entry documentation] may 28 need to wait in Mexico as CBP officers work to process those already within our

1 facilities”; a September 27, 2018 report from the Office of the Inspector General (the 2 “OIG Report”); and statements by Mexican immigration officials, one of whom 3 allegedly complained that “[CBP] was making [the Mexican immigration agency] 4 do [CBP’s] dirty work.” (Id. ¶¶ 68–76 & nn. 56–71.)

6 According to Plaintiffs, the asserted capacity concerns used to justify the 7 alleged Turnback Policy are a pretextual and false “cover for a deliberate slowdown 8 of the rate at which agency receives asylum seekers at POEs.” (Id. ¶¶ 3, 76–83.) 9 They allege that “CBP’s own statistics indicate that there has not been a particular 10 surge in [the] numbers of asylum seekers coming to POEs.” (Id. ¶ 76.) Amnesty 11 International has allegedly characterized capacity concerns as “a fiction” based on 12 the available statistics. (Id. (citation omitted).) Plaintiffs point to statements by 13 “senior CBP and ICE officials in San Ysidro, California” in early 2018, in which the 14 officials stated that “CBP has only actually reached its detention capacity a couple 15 times per year and during ‘a very short period’ in 2017.” (Id. ¶ 77.) Plaintiffs further 16 note that in the OIG Report, “the OIG team did not observe severe overcrowding at 17 the ports of entry it visited.” (Id.) And “[h]uman rights researchers visiting seven 18 POEs in Texas in June 2018 reported that ‘[t]he processing rooms visible in the 19 [POE] . . . appeared to be largely empty.’” (Id. (citations omitted).) Plaintiffs 20 otherwise point to anecdotal accounts for specific POEs, which Plaintiffs allege 21 show “abrupt” changes in assertions of a lack of capacity at POEs and CBP officers 22 allowing some asylum seekers to cross—sometimes in the span of a few hours. (Id.
23 ¶ 78.) For example, CBP officials at the Nogales, Arizona POE abruptly switched 24 from processing 6 asylum seekers a day, based on assertions of lack of capacity, to 25 20 asylum seekers a day. (Id.) And, of course, there are the alleged experiences of 26 the eight New Individual Plaintiffs, which provide a further gloss on the Turnback 27 Policy. (Id. ¶ 83.)

28

1           B.     The Plaintiffs

2           The challenge to Defendants’ alleged conduct is pressed by Organizational 3 Plaintiff Al Otro Lado and thirteen Individual Plaintiffs. For the purposes of this 4 order, the Court refers to the Individual Plaintiffs as two groups: the Original 5 Individual Plaintiffs and the New Individual Plaintiffs.<sup>4</sup> As the Court has noted, 6 Organizational Plaintiff Al Otro Lado and the Original Individual Plaintiffs have 7 been parties since this case’s inception. The Court will not retrace in great detail the 8 allegations pertaining to these Plaintiffs. The Court, however will provide relatively 9 more detail regarding the New Individual Plaintiffs because this order is the first 10 occasion to do so.

12                   1.     Organizational Plaintiff Al Otro Lado

13           Al Otro Lado is a non-profit California legal services organization established 14 in 2014, which provides services to indigent deportees, migrants, refugees, and their 15 families. (SAC ¶ 17.) Al Otro Lado alleges that the Defendants’ alleged conduct has 16 frustrated its ability to advance and maintain its “central” and “organizational 17 mission” because Al Otro Lado has had “to divert substantial” time and resources 18 away from its programs “to counteract the effects of the Turnback Policy and 19 Defendants’ other unlawful practices.” (Id. ¶¶ 12–13, 17–23.)

22           <sup>4</sup> In their present motion to dismiss, Defendants divide the Individual Plaintiffs 23 into two groups. Defendants refer to the Original Individual Plaintiffs as “Territorial 24 Plaintiffs” on the ground that the SAC’s allegations show that all Original Individual 25 Plaintiffs were in a POE at the time they were allegedly denied access to the asylum 26 process. (ECF No. 192-1 at 1–2.) In contrast, Defendants refer to all New Individual 27 Plaintiffs as “Extraterritorial Plaintiffs,” based on Defendants’ view that these 28 Individual Plaintiffs’ allegations show that “they experienced the purported ‘Turnback Policy’ when they approached the border to the territorial United States at the San Ysidro, Laredo, or Hidalgo [POEs] but were prevented by CBP officers or Mexican immigration officials from physically crossing the international boundary.” (Id. at 2.) The Court declines to use Defendants’ labeling.

1                                   2. Original Individual Plaintiffs

2           Plaintiffs Abigail Doe, Beatrice Doe, Carolina Doe are natives and citizens of 3 Mexico, who fled to Tijuana, Mexico where they attempted to access the U.S.
4 asylum process at various points in May 2017, due to violence they experienced at 5 the hands of drug cartels. (SAC ¶¶ 24–26, 119–121, 125–127, 133–134.) They 6 allege that CBP officers at the San Ysidro and Otay Mesa POEs located along the 7 California-Mexico portion of the U.S.-Mexico border coerced them into signing 8 English language forms in which they recanted their fears of returning to Mexico 9 and withdrew their applications for admission. (Id. ¶¶ 24–26, 122–123, 128–130, 10 135–136.) Plaintiffs Dinora Doe and Ingrid Doe are natives and citizens of 11 Honduras, who fled to Tijuana, Mexico after violence they experienced at the hands 12 of criminal gangs and Ingrid experienced severe abuse from her partner. (Id. ¶¶ 27– 13 28, 138–140, 147–149.) Dinora presented herself at the Otay Mesa POE three times 14 in August 2016 but was told “there was no asylum in the United States,” including 15 specifically “for Central Americans,” and that she “would be handed over to 16 Mexican authorities and deported to Honduras.” (Id. ¶¶ 27, 141–144.) Ingrid 17 presented herself at the Otay Mesa and San Ysidro POEs, where CBP officers told 18 her and her children that they could not seek asylum in the United States. (Id. ¶¶ 28, 19 149–151.) Based on developments that occurred after the original complaint’s filing 20 and which the Court determined did not moot this case, Al Otro Lado, 327 F. Supp.
21 3d at 1295, 1302–04, the Original Individual Plaintiffs allege that “Defendants made 22 arrangements to facilitate” their “entry . . . into the United States.” (Id. ¶¶ 24–28, 23 124, 132, 137, 145, 152.)

25                                   3. New Individual Plaintiffs

26           Plaintiffs Juan and Úrsula Doe, husband and wife, are natives and citizens of 27 Honduras, who fled Honduras “with their sons after receiving death threats from 28 gangs.” (SAC ¶¶ 31, 171–72.) They presented themselves at the Laredo POE in late

1 September 2018, but when they “reached the middle of the bridge to the POE, CBP 2 officials denied them access to the asylum process by telling them the POE was 3 closed and that they could not enter.” (Id. ¶¶ 31, 173–74.)

5 Plaintiff Roberto Doe is a native and citizen of Nicaragua, who alleges that he 6 fled Nicaragua due to threats of violence “from the Nicaraguan government and 7 paramilitaries allied with the government.” (Id. ¶¶ 29, 153.) Roberto presented 8 himself at the Hidalgo, Texas POE in October 2018, where he encountered CBP 9 officials in the middle of the bridge between Mexico and the United States, who he 10 told that he wanted to seek asylum in the United States. (Id. ¶¶ 29, 154.) The 11 officials “[old] him the POE was full and that he could not enter.” (Id. ¶¶ 29, 155.)
12 After the FAC was filed in October 2018, Roberto returned to the Hidalgo POE 13 “where Mexican officials detained him as he was walking onto the international 14 bridge to seek access to the asylum process in the United States” and he “remains in 15 the custody of the Mexican government.” (Id. ¶¶ 29, 159.)

17 Plaintiff Maria Doe is a native and citizen of Guatemala and permanent 18 resident of Mexico. (SAC ¶¶ 30, 160.) Maria “left her husband, who was abusive 19 and is involved with cartels[.]” (Id. ¶¶ 30, 161.) Since she left him, “two different 20 cartels have been tracking and threatening her,” and located her despite her attempts 21 to find a “safe place to live” in both Guatemala and Mexico. (Id. ¶¶ 30, 161.) Maria 22 and her two children presented themselves at the Laredo, Texas POE on September 23 10, 2018. (Id. ¶¶ 30, 162.) However, “[w]hen Maria encountered CBP officials in 24 the middle of the bridge, [and] she told them that she and her children wanted to seek 25 asylum in the United States,” the CBP officials told them to wait on the Mexican 26 side of the bridge. (Id. ¶¶ 30, 162.)

28 Plaintiff Bianca Doe is a transgender woman who is a native and citizen of 1 Honduras. (Id. ¶¶ 33–34, 184, 191.) Bianca “has been subjected to extreme and 2 persistent physical and sexual assault, as well as discrimination and ongoing threats 3 of violence in Honduras and Mexico City . . . because she is a transgender woman[.]” 4 (Id. ¶¶ 33, 184–85.) Bianca presented herself at the San Ysidro POE on September 5 19, 2018, where “CBP officers . . . stat[ed] that she could not apply at that time 6 because they were at capacity.” (Id. ¶¶ 33, 185.) Bianca returned the next day and 7 “was given a piece of paper with the number ‘919,’ placed on a waiting list, and told 8 that she would have to wait several weeks to proceed to the POE.” (Id. ¶¶ 33, 186.) 9 On September 28, 2018, Bianca “attempted to enter the United States without 10 inspection by climbing a fence on a beach in Tijuana[.]” but “once over the fence, a 11 U.S. Border Patrol officer stopped [her]” and she “expressed her desire to seek 12 asylum in the U.S.” (Id. ¶¶ 33, 187.) “The U.S. Border Patrol Officer told [her] that 13 there was no capacity in U.S. detention centers and threatened to call Mexican police 14 if [she] did not climb the fence back into Mexico.” Bianca did so. Bianca presented 15 herself “again” at the San Ysidro POE on October 8, 2018. (Id. ¶¶ 33, 188.) “She 16 was told, once again, that CBP had no capacity for asylum seekers.” (Id. ¶¶ 33, 188.)

18 Plaintiff Emiliana Doe is a transgender woman and a native and citizen of 19 Honduras. (Id. ¶¶ 34, 191.) She “was subjected to multiple sexual and physical 20 assaults, kidnapping, and discrimination, as well as threats of severe harm and 21 violence in Honduras because she is a transgender woman.” (Id. ¶ 34.) After fleeing 22 Honduras in June 2018, Emiliana reached Tijuana in September 2018 and presented 23 herself at the San Ysidro POE, where a stranger told her she would need to get on 24 “the waiting list” to apply for asylum. (Id. ¶ 192.) After going to the San Ysidro 25 POE and speaking with two women, “[s]he was given a piece of paper with the 26 number ‘1014’ on it, placed on a waiting list, and told to return in six weeks.” (Id.
27 ¶¶ 34, 192.) On October 8, 2018, “[f]eeling desperate and unsafe, Emiliana returned 28 to the POE just a few weeks later,” but “CBP officers . . . t[old] her that there was

1 no capacity for asylum seekers and instruct[ed] her to wait for Mexican officials.”

4 Plaintiff César Doe is a native and citizen of Honduras. (SAC ¶¶ 35, 196.) 5 “César has been threatened numerous times with severe harm and death and 6 kidnapped by members of the 18th street gang.” (Id. ¶¶ 35, 196.) He alleges, inter 7 alia, that on one occasion, he “present[ed] himself at the San Ysidro POE” “with 8 two staff members from Al Otro Lado” “but CBP officers refused to accept him.”
9 (Id. ¶¶ 35, 199.)

11 Plaintiff Victoria Doe is a 16-year old native and citizen of Honduras. (SAC 12 ¶¶ 32, 179.) She “has been threatened with severe harm and death by members of 13 the 18th street gang for refusing to become the girlfriend of one of the gang’s 14 leaders.” (Id. ¶¶ 32, 179.) Victoria fled to Mexico where she gave birth to a son.
15 (Id. ¶¶ 32, 179.) Victoria and her son arrived in Tijuana as part of a “refugee 16 caravan” and went to the San Ysidro POE on October 8, 2018. (Id. ¶¶ 32, 180.)
17 “When Victoria expressed her desire to seek asylum in the United States, CBP 18 officers . . . stat[ed] that she could not apply for asylum at that time and t[old] her to 19 speak to a Mexican official without providing any additional information.” (Id. ¶¶ 20 32, 181.) Except for Roberto Doe, all New Individual Plaintiffs allege that 21 “following the filing of the First Amended Complaint in this case, Defendants made 22 arrangements to facilitate the[ir] entry . . . into the United States.” (SAC ¶¶ 30–35.)

23

24 III. Procedural Synopsis

25 Organizational Plaintiff Al Otro Lado and, on behalf of themselves and a 26 putative class, the Original Individual Plaintiffs commenced this action against 27 Defendants on July 12, 2017 in the United States District Court for the Central 28 District of California. (ECF No. 1 (“Compl.”).) After the Central District transferred

1 the action to this Court on November 29, 2017, Defendants renewed their motion to 2 dismiss the original complaint in its entirety. (ECF No. 135.)

4 The Court granted Defendants’ motion in part. Al Otro Lado, Inc. v. Nielsen, 5 327 F. Supp. 3d 1284 (S.D. Cal. 2018). In relevant part, the Court dismissed the 6 Section 706(1) APA claims of Plaintiffs Abigail Doe, Beatrice Doe, and Carolina 7 Doe to the extent they sought to compel relief under 8 C.F.R. § 235.4 for allegedly 8 being coerced into withdrawing their applications for admission. Id. at 1314–15.
9 The Court also dismissed Plaintiffs’ Section 706(2) APA claims based on an alleged 10 “pattern or practice” because the Court was not convinced that Plaintiffs had 11 plausibly alleged facts to “support[] the inference that there is an overarching policy” 12 and, consequently, had failed to identify a final agency action. Id. at 1320. The 13 Court granted Plaintiffs leave to amend their Section 706(2) claims. Id. at 1321. The 14 Court otherwise denied Defendants’ motion to dismiss on all other grounds. Id. at 15 1295–1304 (rejecting Defendants’ argument that the entire case was moot because 16 Defendants had allowed original Individual Plaintiffs to be processed for admission 17 at a POE after filing of the case); id. at 1306–08 (rejecting Defendants’ argument 18 that the United States had not waived sovereign immunity for ATS claims on the 19 ground that Section 702 of the APA provides a “broad waiver of sovereign immunity 20 for claims against the United States for nonmonetary relief”); id. at 1311–13 21 (rejecting Defendants’ argument that Plaintiffs cannot challenge an alleged pattern 22 or practice of alleged CBP officer denials of access to the asylum process under 23 Section 706(1) of the APA).

25 In November 2018, Plaintiffs filed the operative Second Amended Complaint, 26 a pleading that raises claims largely identical to those in the original complaint albeit 27 upon an expanded set of factual allegations and with some refinement. (SAC ¶¶ 28 244–303.) All Individual Plaintiffs seek to press their claims on behalf of a putative

1 class of “noncitizens who seek or will seek to access the U.S. asylum process by 2 presenting themselves at a POE along the U.S.-Mexico border and are denied access 3 to the U.S. asylum process by or at the instruction of CBP officials.” (Id. ¶¶ 1, 236–
4 43.) Once more, Plaintiffs seek only declaratory and injunctive relief. (Id. at 100.)

6 LEGAL STANDARDS

7 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2) requires that a complaint set forth “a 8 short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief,” 9 in order to “give the defendant fair notice of what the . . . claim is and the grounds 10 upon which it rests.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007) (quoting 11 Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47 (1957)). A defendant may test the sufficiency of 12 a complaint on several grounds, including on the ground that the court lacks subject 13 matter jurisdiction over the complaint or that the complaint fails to state a claim for 14 relief. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1), (6).

16 A Rule 12(b)(1) motion tests whether a court possesses subject matter 17 jurisdiction to adjudicate the claims in the action. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12 (b)(1); Savage 18 v. Glendale Union High Sch., 343 F.3d 1036, 1039–40 (9th Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 19 541 U.S. 1009 (2004). As is relevant here, a Rule 12(b)(6) motion that asserts lack 20 of jurisdiction due to the alleged presence of a political question in a case is “more 21 appropriately construed as a Rule 12(b)(1) motion[.]” Corrie v. Caterpillar, 503
22 F.3d 974, 982 (9th Cir. 2007); Yellen v. United States, Civ. No. 14-00134 JMS-KSC, 23 2014 WL 2532460, at *1 (D. Haw. June 4, 2014) (same). Thus, although Defendants 24 nominally raise a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, the Court construes their motion on this 25 issue as raised under Rule 12(b)(1). When a party asserts a Rule 12(b)(1) challenge 26 limited to the pleadings, as Defendants do here, the Court accepts Plaintiffs’ factual 27 allegations as true and draws all reasonable inferences in Plaintiffs’ favor to 28 determine whether the allegations are sufficient to invoke federal jurisdiction. Pride

1 v. Correa, 719 F.3d 1130, 1133 (9th Cir. 2013).

3 A Rule 12(b)(6) motion tests whether the allegations, even if true, fail to state 4 a claim upon which relief may be granted. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6); N. Star Int'l v.
5 Ariz. Corp. Comm'n, 720 F.2d 578, 581 (9th Cir. 1983). To survive a Rule 12(b)(6) 6 motion, a plaintiff is required to set forth “enough facts to state a claim for relief that 7 is plausible on its face.” Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570. “A claim has facial plausibility 8 when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw reasonable 9 inferences that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 10 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (citation omitted). To assess the legal sufficiency of a 11 complaint, the court accepts as true the complaint’s factual allegations and construes 12 them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Hishon v. King & Spalding, 467 13 U.S. 69, 73 (1984). A court may consider materials properly submitted as part of 14 the complaint. Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 688–89 (9th Cir. 2001).

Defendants’ motion to dismiss raises a variety of arguments for why the SAC should be dismissed in whole or in part, some of which are familiar and others of which are new. The Court distills Defendants’ arguments into four overarching parts. First, Defendants argue that the Court lacks jurisdiction under the political question doctrine to consider certain factual allegations or grant certain forms of relief. Second, and forming the bulk of Defendants’ motion to dismiss, is a set of arguments that Plaintiffs fail to state Sections 706(1) and 706(2) APA claims. Third, Defendants seek dismissal of the New Individual Plaintiffs’ Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause claims, principally on the ground that the Fifth Amendment does not apply extraterritorially. Fourth, Defendants seek dismissal of Plaintiffs’ ATS claims. The Court considers each set of arguments in turn.

1 I. The Political Question Doctrine

2 Defendants argue that that the political question doctrine bars judicial review
3 of “Defendants’ coordination with a foreign nation to regulate border crossings.”
4 (ECF No. 192-1 at 25.) Pointing to allegations in the SAC regarding interactions 5 between U.S. and Mexican government officials, Defendants argue that granting 6 Plaintiffs’ request to enjoin the alleged Turnback Policy “would prohibit Defendants 7 from ‘coordinating’ with Mexican government officials as they carry out their 8 statutory responsibility to manage the flow of traffic across the border.” (Id. at 25– 9 26, 28 (citing SAC ¶¶ 3, 7, 50–83, 86–87, 96, 98–102, 108–10, 114, 116).) The 10 Court rejects Defendants’ political question doctrine argument at this juncture.

12 “In general, the Judiciary has a responsibility to decide cases properly before 13 it, even those it ‘would gladly avoid.’” Zivotofsky v. Clinton, 566 U.S. 189, 194–95, 14 (2012) (quoting Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. 264, 404 (1821)). The “political 15 question doctrine” is a recognized “narrow exception” to the Judiciary’s Article III 16 responsibility. Id. at 195 (citing Japan Whaling Ass’n v. Am. Cetacean Soc’y, 478 17 U.S. 221, 230 (1986)). The doctrine “excludes from judicial review those 18 controversies which revolve around policy choices and value determinations 19 constitutionally committed for resolution to the halls of Congress or the confines of 20 the Executive Branch[.]” Japan Whaling Ass’n, 478 U.S. at 230. As such, “[t]he 21 political question doctrine concerns the jurisdictional ‘case or controversy 22 requirement’ of Article III of the Constitution, . . . and the Court must address it 23 ‘before proceeding to the merits[.]’” Ahmed Salem Bin Ali Jaber v. United States, 24 861 F.3d 241, 245 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (citing first Schlesinger v. Reservists Comm. To 25 Stop the War, 418 U.S. 208, 215 (1974) and quoting second Tenet v. Doe, 544 U.S.
26 1, 6 n.4 (2005)) (emphasis added). If a political question is inextricable from a case, 27 the doctrine “prevents a plaintiff’s claims from proceeding to the merits.” Ahmed 28 Salem Bin Ali Jaber, 861 F.3d at 245 (citing Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 211 1 (1962)).

3 There are at least six different “formulations” for determining whether a case 4 presents a political question that is understood to deprive a federal court of subject 5 matter jurisdiction. Baker, 369 U.S. at 217. As Defendants recognize, a case need 6 only present one formulation for a political question to preclude jurisdiction. Ahmed
7 Salem Bin Ali Jaber, 861 F.3d at 245 (citing Schneider v. Kissinger, 412 F.3d 190, 8 194 (D.C. Cir. 2005)). The only formulation on which Defendant rely here is that 9 there is a “textually demonstrable constitutional commitment of the issue to a 10 coordinate political department[.]” Baker, 369 U.S. at 217.

12 In particular, Defendants contend that this case presents the political question 13 “whether and to what extent it is lawful for the United States to (allegedly) 14 collaborate with the government of Mexico to control the flow of travel across the 15 countries’ shared border[.]” (ECF No. 192-1 at 26.) Viewed in this light, Defendants 16 contend that “Plaintiffs’ allegations and requests for relief are squarely outside the 17 Court’s jurisdiction” under the first Baker formulation because “[f]oreign-relations 18 matters are clearly committed by [the] Constitution to the Executive Branch, 19 particularly as they relate to the United States’ efforts to manage the flow of travel 20 across the border.” (Id. at 27.) For this reason, Defendants argue that “[t]he Court 21 does not have jurisdiction to declare unlawful or enjoin [the alleged coordination 22 with Mexican government officials][.]” (Id. at 28.) The Court disagrees with 23 Defendants’ view about the questions this case presents and, thus, rejects 24 Defendants’ argument that the political question doctrine precludes this Court from 25 reviewing Plaintiffs’ claims or granting corresponding relief.

26
27 The Court acknowledges that “[t]he exclusion of aliens is ‘a fundamental act 28 of sovereignty’ by the political branches[.]” Trump v. Hawaii, 138 S. Ct. 2392, 2407

1 (2018) (quoting United States ex rel. Knauff v. Shaughnessy, 338 U.S. 537, 542
2 (1950)). The Executive possesses a recognized power “to regulate the entry of aliens
3 into the United States” through its “inherent” “executive power to control the foreign 4 affairs of the nation[.]” Knauff, 338 U.S. at 542; E. Bay Sanctuary Covenant v.
5 Trump, 909 F.3d 1219, 1231 (9th Cir. 2018). The Executive’s foreign affairs powers 6 are understood to “derive from the President’s role as ‘Commander in Chief,’ [the 7 President’s] right to ‘receive Ambassadors and other public Ministers,’ and [the 8 President’s] general duty to ‘take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed’[.]” E.
9 Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 909 F.3d at 1232 (citing U.S. Const. art. II, § 2, cl. 1 10 (referring to President as “Commander in Chief”), id. § 3 (President’s power to 11 receive ambassadors)) (internal citations omitted). But the Executive’s recognized 12 power over foreign affairs under Article II of the Constitution is not exercised in a 13 constitutional vacuum. By virtue of Article I, Congress possesses certain powers 14 that render the admission or exclusion of aliens and foreign affairs an intimately 15 legislative matter, including the specific constitutionally enumerated legislative 16 powers “[t]o establish an uniform rule of Naturalization,’ to ‘regulate Commerce 17 with foreign Nations,’ and to ‘declare War[.]’” E. Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 909 18 F.3d at 1231 (citing U.S. Const. art. I § 8, cl. 4 (uniform naturalization rule power), 19 id. § 8, cl. 3 (foreign commerce power), id. § 8, cl. 11 (war power)) (internal citations 20 omitted). For this reason, it is indisputable that “‘over no conceivable subject is the 21 legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over’ the admission of 22 aliens.” Fiallo v. Bell, 430 U.S. 787, 792 (1977) (quoting Oceanic Navigation Co.
23 v. Stranahan, 214 U.S. 320, 339 (1909)).

25 The claims asserted in this case undercut Defendants’ invocation of the 26 political question doctrine. Plaintiffs’ claims primarily concern alleged violations of 27 various INA provisions and an implementing regulation through alleged denials of 28 access to the U.S. asylum process and an alleged policy and pattern or practice of

1 denying asylum seekers access to the U.S. asylum process. (SAC ¶¶ 203–223 2 (describing statutory and regulatory scheme that applies to asylum seekers); id. ¶¶ 3 256–69 (APA Section 706(1) claims based on certain INA provisions and 4 implementing regulation); id. ¶¶ 270–82 (APA Section 706(2) claims premised on 5 certain INA provisions and implementing regulation); id. ¶¶ 283–93 (Fifth 6 Amendment Due Process Clause claims premised on certain INA provisions and 7 implementing regulation).) Federal courts have the power to “review the political 8 branches’ action to determine whether they exceed the constitutional or statutory 9 scope of their authority.” E. Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 909 F.3d at 1232 (citing 10 Hawaii, 138 S. Ct. at 2419).

12 Although Plaintiffs’ claims concern immigration, the statutory questions the 13 claims raise do not task the Court with, nor require the Court to engage in a 14 freewheeling inquiry into the wisdom of immigration policy choices. See Sale v.
15 Haitian Ctrs. Council, 509 U.S. 155, 165–66 (1993) (noting that “the wisdom of the 16 policy choices made by Presidents Reagan, Bush, and Clinton is not a matter for our 17 consideration. We must decide only whether Executive Order No. 12807, 57 Fed.
18 Reg. 23133 (1992), which reflects and implements those choices, is consistent with 19 § 243(h) of the INA.”). When “Congress has expressed its intent regarding an aspect 20 of foreign affairs” through a legislative command and a court is asked to “evaluate 21 the Government’s compliance” with that command, the court “is ‘not being asked to 22 supplant a foreign policy decision of the political branches with the courts’ own 23 unmoored determination of what United States policy . . . should be.’” Ctr. for Bio.
24 Diversity v. Mattis, 868 F.3d 803, 823 (9th Cir. 2017) (quoting Zivotofsky, 566 U.S.
25 at 196). “Instead, a court must engage in the ‘familiar judicial exercise’ of reading 26 and applying a statute, conscious of the purpose expressed by Congress.” Id.
27 (quoting Zivotofsky, 566 U.S. at 196). In this case, resolution of Plaintiffs’ claims 28 turns on whether Defendants’ alleged conduct complies with or violates the relevant

1 INA provisions and implementing regulation. It is well within this Court’s Article 2 III province and duty to resolve these claims.

4 The Court acknowledges that there are some allegations that touch on alleged 5 coordination with Mexican government officials.<sup>5</sup> (SAC ¶¶ 3, 7, 50–60.) The 6 coordination, however, is merely an outgrowth of the alleged underlying conduct by 7 U.S. officials. Based on the statutory claims in this case, review of such conduct 8 does not present a nonjusticiable political question. Accordingly, the Court denies 9 Defendants’ present motion to dismiss based on the political question doctrine.
10 Defendants may reassert their political question doctrine challenge “[i]f it becomes 11 clear at a later stage that resolving any of the plaintiffs’ claims requires” resolution 12 of an asserted political question over which this Court might lack subject matter 13 jurisdiction. Al-Tamimi v. Adelson, 916 F.3d 1, 14 (D.C. Cir. 2019).

16 <sup>5</sup> As Defendants point out (ECF No. 192-1 at 26 n.8), there are also allegations 17 that concern alleged (mis)conduct by Mexican government officials. (SAC ¶¶ 29– 18 31, 35, 44–45, 52–54, 74–75, 83, 96–97, 110, 156–59, 163, 166, 175–76, 197, 199– 19 200.) Defendants argue that the act of state doctrine bars the issuance of declaratory 20 or injunctive relief relating to these allegations. (ECF No. 192-1 at 26 n.8.) The 21 Court does not agree. The act of state doctrine “bars a suit where ‘(1) there is an 22 official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory; and (2) the 23 relief sought or the defense interposed [in the action would require] a court in the 24 United States to declare invalid the [foreign sovereign’s] official act.’” Sea Breeze 25 Salt, Inc. v. Mitsubishi Corp., 899 F.3d 1064, 1069 (9th Cir. 2018) (quoting Credit 26 Suisse v. U.S. Dist. Court, 130 F.3d 1342, 1346 (9th Cir. 1997)). The act of state 27 doctrine does not bar the claims in this case because the Court is not asked to declare 28 that any official acts of the Mexican government are unlawful. Instead, pursuant to U.S. law, Plaintiffs challenge the legality of conduct by U.S. officials. Although these officials have allegedly instructed Mexican officials to take certain conduct in furtherance of the challenged Turnback Policy, the Court can assess the legality of the U.S. officials’ alleged conduct and order any corresponding relief pursuant to the statutory provisions at issue in this case without contravening the act of state doctrine.

1 II. Administrative Procedure Act Claims

2 The bulk of Defendants’ motion to dismiss concerns the Plaintiffs’ APA
3 claims. (ECF No. 192-1 at 6–18, 28–31; ECF No. 238 at 2–12.) Defendants’ 4 multipronged challenge to Plaintiffs’ APA claims consists of several arguments: (A) 5 Organizational Plaintiff Al Otro Lado cannot state APA claims based on the INA
6 provisions at issue as a “non-profit legal services organization,” (B) (1) the repleaded 7 Section 706(1) claims of Plaintiffs Abigail, Beatrice, and Carolina Doe fail because 8 they allegedly withdrew their applications for admission and (2) the Section 706(1) 9 claims of all New Individual Plaintiffs fail because the relevant INA provisions and 10 implementing regulation underlying their claims for relief “do not apply to 11 individuals in Mexico,” and (C) Plaintiffs’ Section 706(2) APA claims fail because 12 (1) Plaintiffs do not identify final agency action, (2) Plaintiffs challenge 13 discretionary conduct over which the APA forecloses judicial review, and (3) 14 Plaintiffs have not plausibly alleged an unlawful agency action. The Court considers 15 Defendants’ arguments in turn and rejects each of them.

17 A. Al Otro Lado’s APA Claims

18 For a second time, Defendants challenge Al Otro Lado’s ability to assert APA 19 claims premised on violations of the INA provisions and regulations at issue. (ECF 20 No. 192-1 at 28; ECF No. 238 at 20.) Defendants contend that Al Otro Lado’s APA 21 claims must be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim because 22 whereas the statutory and regulatory provisions pertain exclusively to aliens or 23 refugees, Al Otro Lado is merely a “non-profit legal services organization[.]” (ECF 24 No. 192-1 at 28; ECF No. 238 at 20.) Defendants’ argument simply reconfigures 25 Defendants’ prior argument that Al Otro Lado falls outside the zone of interests of 26 the relevant INA provisions. The Court squarely rejected Defendants’ argument in 27 the prior dismissal order. See Al Otro Lado, 327 F. Supp. 3d at 1298–1302.
28 Defendants identify no basis for the Court to depart from its prior decision.

1           However, in the time since the Court’s prior dismissal order, the Ninth Circuit
2 has issued a decision that strengthens the Court’s prior rejection of Defendants’ 3 challenge to Al Otro Lado’s APA claims in this case. Specifically, in East Bay
4 Sanctuary Covenant v. Trump, 909 F.3d 1219 (9th Cir. 2018), the government 5 argued that various organizations, including Organizational Plaintiff Al Otro Lado 6 who is also a plaintiff in that case, fell outside the zone of interests of certain INA 7 provisions, including 8 U.S.C. § 1158, as “legal services organizations” and 8 therefore could not challenge a rule promulgated by the Department of Justice and 9 the Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”), coinciding with a presidential 10 proclamation, which together purported to make aliens who entered the United States 11 at a place other than at a POE ineligible to apply for asylum in the United States. Id.
12 at 1230–31, 1236–38. The Ninth Circuit rejected the government’s zone of interest 13 argument, reasoning that “the Organizations’ interest in aiding immigrants seeking 14 asylum is consistent with the INA’s purpose to ‘establish[] . . . [the] statutory 15 procedure for granting asylum to refugees.” Id. at 1245 (quoting INS v. Cardoza- 16 Fonseca, 480 U.S. 421, 427 (1987)). The Court noted that “[w]ithin the asylum 17 statute, Congress took steps to ensure that pro bono legal services of the type that the 18 Organizations provide are available to asylum seekers.” Id. (citing 8 U.S.C. § 19 1158(d)(4)(A)–(B)). The Ninth Circuit also determined that the INA, taken as a 20 whole, otherwise supports the inference that Congress intended eligibility for 21 organizations like the ones in East Bay Sanctuary Covenant to bring suit. Id.
22 (identifying various INA provisions expressly referring to nongovernmental 23 organizations as giving such organizations “a role in helping immigrants navigate 24 the immigration process”). The Ninth Circuit’s reasoning in East Bay Sanctuary
25 Covenant is equally applicable to this case and reinforces the Court’s prior rejection 26 of Defendants’ challenge to Al Otro Lado’s APA claims.<sup>6</sup>

28           <sup>6</sup> In the time since both the Court’s ruling and East Bay Sanctuary Covenant,

1           B.     Section 706(1) APA Claims

2           The Court has previously discussed the principles governing Section 706(1) 3 APA claims. Under Section 706(1), a court “shall . . . compel agency action 4 unlawfully withheld or unreasonably delayed.” 5 U.S.C. § 706(1). A Section 706(1) 5 claim “can only proceed where a plaintiff asserts that an agency failed to take a 6 discrete agency action that it is required to take.” Norton v. S. Utah Wilderness
7 Alliance, 542 U.S. 55, 64 (2004) [hereinafter “SUWA”].); Hells Canyon 8 Preservation Council v. U.S. Forest Serv., 593 F.3d 923, 932 (9th Cir. 2010). The 9 “limitation to required agency action rules out judicial direction of even discrete 10 agency action that is not demanded by law.” SUWA, 542 U.S. at 65. Because of this 11 limitation, courts “have no authority to compel agency action merely because the 12 agency is not doing something we may think it should do.” Zixiang Li v Kerry, 710 13 F.3d 995, 1004 (9th Cir. 2013).

16           one out-of-circuit district court has described this Court’s prior zone of interests 17 analysis as a “limited circumstance[.]” for “organizations advocating for clients[.]” 18 De Dandrade v. United States Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 367 F. Supp. 3d 174, 189
19 (S.D.N.Y. 2019) (“In the limited circumstances in which district courts determined 20 organizations advocating for clients fell within the INA’s zone of interest, the 21 provisions of the INA at issue did not concern naturalization.”). The De Dandrade
22 court in part misreads this Court’s prior analysis, which did not turn on whether Al 23 Otro Lado has clients that fall within the zone of interests of the relevant INA
24 provisions. The Court identified this as a potentially separate basis for Al Otro Lado 25 to assert APA claims, but on which Al Otro Lado did not rely. Al Otro Lado, 327 F.
26 Supp. 3d at 1301 n.7. In any event, as East Bay Sanctuary Covenant confirms, it is 27 not necessary for an organization to premise its APA claims for the underlying INA 28 provisions at issue in this case on the ground that the organization is representing specific clients seeking asylum. See E. Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 909 F.3d at 1244– 45. Indeed, in East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, the Ninth Circuit expressly found that the organizations lacked third-party standing to assert claims on behalf of asylum seeker clients, yet concluded that the organizations possessed both Article III standing and fell within the INA’s zone of interests in their capacity as legal organizations that assist asylum seekers. Compare id. with id. at 1240–41.

1 Plaintiffs assert claims under Section 706(1) claims based on 8 U.S.C. §
2 1225(a)(3), § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii), 1225(b)(2)(A), and 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4). (SAC 3 ¶¶ 256–69). In broad terms, Section 1225(a)(3) imposes a mandatory duty for 4 immigration officers to inspect “[a]ll aliens . . . who are applicants for admission or 5 otherwise seeking admission . . . to . . . the United States[.]” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3).
6 Section 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii) imposes on an immigration officer a duty to refer an alien 7 who indicates either an intention to apply for asylum under section 1158 or a fear of 8 persecution for an asylum interview under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B) with an asylum 9 officer. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii). In turn, 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4) imposes an 10 analogous regulatory duty on the inspecting officer. For all other aliens, Section 11 1225(b)(2)(A) imposes on an immigration officer a duty to detain the alien for 12 general removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A).

14 Defendants raise two dismissal arguments that together concern the Section 15 706(1) claims of ten Individual Plaintiffs. Defendants first move to dismiss the 16 repleaded Section 706(1) claims of Original Individual Plaintiffs Abigail, Beatrice 17 and Carolina Doe because these Plaintiffs allegedly withdrew their applications for 18 admission. (ECF No. 192-1 at 5.) Second, Defendants argue that all New Individual 19 Plaintiffs fail to state Section 706(1) claims because the statutory and regulatory 20 provisions at issue “do not apply to individuals located in Mexico.” (Id. at 6–11.)
21 The Court considers each argument in turn.

22 23 1. Repleaded Section 706(1) Claims of Certain Plaintiffs

24 Plaintiffs Abigail Doe, Beatrice Doe, and Carolina Doe once more each allege 25 that, on one of the occasions they sought asylum at a POE, CBP officials coerced 26 them into signing documents which stated that they lacked a fear of persecution and 27 were withdrawing their applications for admission. (SAC ¶¶ 24–26, 122–23, 129– 28 30, 136.) Carolina further alleges that CBP officers coerced her into recanting her

1 fear on video. (Id. ¶¶ 26, 135.)

3 Based on their coercion allegations, Plaintiffs claimed in the original 4 complaint that “CBP officials failed to take actions mandated” by, inter alia, 8 5 C.F.R. § 235.4, the regulation which states that “[t]he alien’s decision to withdraw 6 his or her application for admission must be made voluntarily.” (ECF No. 1 ¶ 153.)
7 In the prior dismissal order, the Court dismissed Plaintiffs Abigail Doe, Beatrice 8 Doe, and Carolina Doe’s Section 706(1) claims insofar as the claims sought to 9 compel agency action under 8 C.F.R § 235.4, reasoning that “[t]he regulation does 10 not require CBP officers to determine whether a withdrawal was made voluntarily, 11 and it does not specify what CBP officers must do if a withdrawal was not.” Al Otro 12 Lado, 327 F. Supp. 3d at 1314. The Court stated that “[t]his determination does not 13 affect the Court’s conclusion that these Plaintiffs have otherwise stated Section 14 706(1) claims regarding their alleged denial of access to the asylum process in the 15 United States.” Id. at 1315. Plaintiffs Abigail Doe, Beatrice Doe, and Carolina Doe 16 thus understandably replead Section 706(1) claims based on the alleged failure of 17 immigration officers to inspect and refer them for asylum interviews or to otherwise 18 detain them for a removal proceeding. (SAC ¶¶ 256, 260.)

20 Notwithstanding the Court’s prior ruling expressly permitting Plaintiffs 21 Abigail Doe, Beatrice Doe, and Carolina Doe’s Section 706(1) claims to proceed
22 and the fact that no Plaintiff now alleges Section 706(1) claims based on 8 C.F.R. § 23 235.4, (see SAC ¶ 260), Defendants argue that these Plaintiffs’ Section 706(1) claims 24 must be dismissed because these Plaintiffs withdrew their applications for 25 admission. (ECF No. 192-1 at 29–30.) Citing 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(4) and 8 C.F.R. § 26 235.4—the statutory and regulatory provisions that authorize an alien to voluntarily 27 withdraw an application for admission and “depart immediately from the United 28 States”—Defendants argue that there is no continuing duty to inspect, refer, or detain

1 an alien who has withdrawn her application. (ECF No. 192-1 at 30.)

3 Defendants' dismissal argument mistakes the Court's prior conclusion 4 regarding a judicial inability to compel relief under 8 C.F.R. § 235.4 with an inability 5 of the Court to otherwise compel discrete "agency action unlawfully withheld." 5 6 U.S.C. § 706(1). As should have been clear from the Court's prior order, the inability 7 to compel Section 706(1) relief under 8 C.F.R. § 235.4 does not preclude relief under 8 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3), 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii), and 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4) in 9 this case. The parties agree that the mandatory duties to inspect all aliens and refer 10 certain aliens seeking asylum are discrete actions for which this Court can compel 11 Section 706(1) relief under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3), 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii), and 12 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4). In view of the parties' agreement regarding these duties, the 13 Court does not understand Defendants' present dismissal argument.

15 Under the provisions that form the basis of the repleaded Section 706(1) 16 claims, an immigration officer must inspect an alien applying for admission and if 17 the alien is inadmissible for making misrepresentations or lacking proper 18 documentation and states an intent to seek or apply for asylum, the officer must refer 19 the alien for a credible fear interview. As even Defendants do not dispute, Plaintiffs 20 Abigail Doe, Beatrice Doe, and Carolina Doe's allegations plausibly show that CPB 21 officers failed to take the discrete actions an immigration officer must take during 22 the admission process for aliens like these Plaintiffs, who allege that they asserted 23 an intent to apply for asylum and a fear of persecution. (SAC ¶¶ 24–26, 122–23, 24 129–30, 134–36.) All parties also agree that 8 C.F.R. § 235.4 requires that an alien 25 voluntarily withdraw an application. Taking these Plaintiffs' factual allegations of 26 coercion as true, these Plaintiffs did not voluntarily withdraw their applications for 27 admission. Thus, the mandatory duties to inspect and refer or detain were plausibly 28 "unlawfully withheld" such that these Plaintiffs may seek Section 706(1) relief.

1 Accordingly, the Court denies Defendants’ latest attempt to dismiss Plaintiff Abigail
2 Doe, Beatrice Doe, and Carolina Doe’s Section 706(1) claims.<sup>7</sup>

3 4 2. New Individual Plaintiffs’ Section 706(1) Claims

5 As noted, all Plaintiffs’ Section 706(1) claims are premised on alleged failures
6 of CBP officers to take actions mandated by 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3), 8 U.S.C. §
7 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii), 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2), and 8 C.F.R. § 253.3(b)(4). (SAC ¶ 260.)
8 Two interlocking arguments are central to Defendants’ dismissal challenge to the 9 New Individual Plaintiffs’ Section 706(1) claims. First, Defendants contend that the 10 text of the underlying statutory and regulatory provisions “do not apply to 11 individuals in Mexico.” (ECF No. 192-1 at 6–11; ECF No. 238 at 1–7.) Second, 12 Defendants contend that, unlike the Original Individual Plaintiffs’ allegations, the 13 New Individuals Plaintiffs’ allegations show that these latter Plaintiffs were in 14 Mexico when they were allegedly turned away. (ECF No. 192-1 at 2 & n.2, 6–11; 15 ECF No. 238 at 1–7.) The Court finds it prudent to outline the SAC’s allegations 16 and then to address whether the allegations are sufficient to state claims for Section 17 706(1) relief under a proper construction of the relevant INA statutory and regulatory 18 provisions.

19 20 21
22 <sup>7</sup> In opposition to Defendants’ motion to dismiss the SAC, Plaintiffs state in a 23 footnote that they “respectfully disagree with and preserve for appeal the Court’s 24 conclusion that it cannot compel relief under Section 706(1) based on Defendants’ 25 alleged violation of 8 C.F.R. § 235.4[.]” (ECF No. 210 at 34 n.30.) The Court does 26 not understand how Plaintiffs have preserved an issue for appeal (1) which they 27 chose not to replead in their Section 706(1) claims and (2) for which Plaintiffs offer 28 no argument based on an application of the legal standards that govern a Section 706(1) claim to the text of 8 C.F.R. § 235.4. In any event, to the extent Plaintiffs’ assertion is animated by a concern that the Court would dismiss the repleaded Section 706(1) claims on the grounds Defendants raise, this Order moots that concern.

a. New Individual Plaintiffs’ Factual Allegations

As a threshold matter, Plaintiffs dispute whether the Court can even resolve Defendants’ challenge to the New Individual Plaintiffs’ Section 706(1) claims at this juncture. (ECF No. 210 at 4–5.) Plaintiffs contend that Defendants’ argument calls for the Court to improperly find facts at the pleading stage, “specifically, that the new Individual Plaintiffs were standing in Mexico when they confronted CBP officers.” (ECF No. 210 at 4.) According to Plaintiffs, the SAC “does not actually state that any Plaintiffs were in Mexico territory when CBP turned them back,” and thus the Court must “assume that all Individual Plaintiffs were on U.S. soil when Defendants turned them back.” (Id. at 4–5.) This argument is echoed by Amici Immigration law Professors. (ECF No. 221-1 at 4–5.)

Implicit in Plaintiffs’ argument is the notion that the Court should assume facts essential to their ability to state Section 706(1) claims to compel agency action pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3), § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii), 1225(b)(2)(A), and 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4). The Court cannot do this. “Dismissal is warranted under Rule 12(b)(6) where the complaint lacks a cognizable theory or where the complaint presents a cognizable legal theory yet fails to plead essential facts under that theory.” C.B. v. Sonora Sch. Dist., 691 F. Supp. 2d 1123, 1128 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (citing Robertson v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 749 F.2d 530, 534 (9th Cir. 1984)) (emphasis added). And this Court has recognized, “[d]espite the deference the Court must pay to the plaintiff’s allegations, it is not proper for the Court to assume that the [plaintiff] can prove facts that [he or she] has not alleged.” Tinoco v. San Diego Gas & Elec. Co., 327 F.R.D. 651, 657 (S.D. Cal. 2018) (quoting Associated Gen. Contractors of Cal, Inc. v. Cal. State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 526(1983)) (alterations in original). Tellingly, both sides expressly rely on the SAC’s allegations to argue whether the relevant INA provisions embrace the New Individual Plaintiffs. (ECF No. 192-1 at 7, 8, 9, 11; ECF No. 210 at 4.) Thus, the 1 Court rejects Plaintiffs’ threshold dispute.

3 The Court turns to a key concession that undergirds Defendants’ argument.
4 Defendants concede that a POE is within the U.S. (See ECF No. 192-1 at 11 (“[A]s 5 the regulation says, an ‘arriving alien’ is an ‘applicant for admission’ at a port of 6 entry, all of which are located within the territorial United States.” (quoting 8 C.F.R.
7 §§ 1.2, 235.3(b)(4), 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1)) (emphasis added).) Defendants further 8 argue that a POE is not a “geographic area,” but instead a discrete facility. (ECF No.
9 238 at 5–6.) Defendants ground this argument in a Ninth Circuit decision regarding 10 a conviction for illegal entry under 8 U.S.C. § 1325—a statutory provision that 11 criminalizes an alien’s entry into the United States at any time or place other than as 12 designed by immigration officers—for entry at a place other than a POE. See United 13 States v. Aldana, 878 F.3d 877, 880–82 (9th Cir. 2017) (“[T]here is no indication 14 that DHS intended to change the meaning of ‘port of entry’ [in 8 C.F.R. § 235.1(a)] 15 to refer to geographical areas, as opposed to specific facilities where an alien could 16 apply for entry.”) (upholding convictions under Section 1325(a)(1) for unlawful 17 entry in the United States based in part on 8 C.F.R. § 235.1(a)).

18 19 Under Defendants’ own view, any New Individual Plaintiff who has 20 sufficiently alleged that he or she was “at a POE” has stated Section 706(1) claims 21 for the various INA provisions and implementing regulation that form the basis of 22 Plaintiffs’ claims. Defendants’ dismissal argument should therefore fail on its own 23 terms for New Individual Plaintiffs Victoria Doe, Bianca Doe, Emiliana Doe, and 24 César Doe. These four New Individual Plaintiffs offer allegations that, on one or 25 more occasion, they were “at a POE” and requested asylum, but CBP officers 26 refused. (SAC ¶¶ 32–35, 181, 185, 187, 193, 199.) As Plaintiffs observe, (ECF No.
27 210 at 7), the preposition “at” is a “function word” used “to indicate presence or 28 occurrence in, on, or near.” See Merriam-Webster Dictionary,

1 <https://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/at> (last accessed May 2, 2019).
2 Although Defendants would like these New Individual Plaintiffs to plead additional 3 factual allegations, the word “at” can plausibly embrace the inference that these New 4 Individual Plaintiffs are not subject to Defendants’ challenge.<sup>8</sup>

6 The remaining four New Individual Plaintiffs, however, offer allegations that 7 defeat such an inference. New Individual Plaintiffs Roberto Doe, Maria Doe, and 8 Juan and Úrsula Doe allege that they “sought access to the asylum process by 9 presenting” themselves at the Hidalgo, Texas POE and Laredo, Texas POE and 10 “encountered CBP officials in the middle of the bridge” between Mexico and the 11 U.S. POE and “told them” they “wanted to seek asylum in the United States.” (SAC 12 ¶¶ 29–31, 154–55, 162, 174.) The CBP officials, however, allegedly denied Roberto 13 Doe access “by telling him the POE was full and that he could not enter,” told Maria 14 Doe to wait on the Mexican side of the border where she was told “U.S. officials 15 would not let her and her children cross the bridge,” and told Juan and Úrsula Doe 16 that “the POE was closed and that they could not enter.” (Id. ¶¶ 155, 162, 174.)
17 These allegations squarely call on the Court to address Defendants’ arguments 18 regarding the proper construction of the statutory and regulatory provisions in this 19 case and to apply that construction to the factual allegations.

20 21 b. Scope of the Relevant Provisions

22 The starting point of statutory interpretation is the statute’s language.
23 Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth, 471 U.S. 681, 685 (1985). “[I]f the statutory 24 language is plain,” a court “enforce[s] it according to its terms.” King v. Burwell,

26 <sup>8</sup> Even if the Court did not draw the inference that New Individual Plaintiffs 27 Victoria Doe, Bianca Doe, Emiliana Doe, and César Doe were sufficiently “at a 28 POE” for the purposes of Defendants’ present motion, the Court’s analysis regarding the scope of the statutory and regulatory provision similarly applies to their allegations and Section 706(1) claims.

1 135 S. Ct. 2480, 2489 (2015) (citing Hardt v. Reliance Standard Life Ins. Co., 560 2 U.S. 242, 251 (2010)). A court interprets a statute “to give effect, if possible, to 3 every clause and word of a statute.” Duncan v. Walker, 533 U.S. 167, 174 (2001)
4 (citation omitted). This process of statutory interpretation proceeds “with reference 5 to the statutory context, structure, history, and purpose, ‘as well as overall common 6 sense.’” Abramski v. United States, 573 U.S. 169, 179 (2014) (quoting Maracich v.
7 Spears, 570 U.S. 48, 76 (2013)). Two statutory provisions are relevant to 8 Defendants’ motion to dismiss: 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1)’s general provision for asylum 9 and 8 U.S.C. § 1225’s articulation of certain immigration officer duties. The Court 10 considers the relevant statutory text in light of these principles.

13 Although Plaintiffs do not premise their Section 706(1) claims to compel 14 agency action on 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1), both sides anchor their statutory analysis in 15 this provision. Under Section 1158(a)(1)’s plain language, two classes of aliens may 16 apply for asylum: (1) any alien “who is physically present in the United States” and 17 (2) any alien “who arrives in the United States.” Applying the rule against 18 surplusage, the Court must presume that the phrases “mean different things.”
19 Duncan, 533 U.S. at 174.<sup>9</sup> The parties’ dispute turns on whether the New Individual 20

21 <sup>9</sup> The Court recognizes that the rule against surplusage “is not absolute.” 22 Lamie v. U.S. Tr., 540 U.S. 526, 536 (2004). A court need not apply the rule when 23 its application would be “at the expense of [the statute’s] more natural reading, the 24 structure of the [statutory provision], and the structure of the Act.” Tima v. AG, 25 United States, 903 F.3d 272, 278 (3d Cir. 2018). Defendants appear to argue against 26 application of the rule and insist that Section 1158(a)(1)’s phrases are “not 27 surplusage” but together “ensure that any alien within the United States may apply 28 for asylum[.]” (ECF No. 238 at 4.) For reasons the will become clear, the Court does not agree with Defendants’ arguments regarding the full scope of the provisions. And the Court cannot find that application of the rule against surplusage contravenes Section 1158(a)(1)’s natural reading as identifying two different classes of aliens who may apply for asylum, one of which includes aliens who are not

1 Plaintiffs fall within the second class of aliens.

3 Defendants argue that any Plaintiffs on Mexican soil cannot qualify as an alien 4 who was “arriving in the United States.” Defendants’ opening brief largely does not 5 offer meaningful analysis regarding Section 1158(a)(1), except to contend that a 6 plain language reading of the statute shows that it does not apply to the New 7 Individual Plaintiffs. (ECF No. 192-1 at 7–8.) In the face of Plaintiffs’ statutory 8 analysis, however, Defendants advance three arguments. First, Defendants contend 9 that “the use of the present simple tense creates a nexus between the alien’s ability 10 to apply for asylum and the alien’s current physical presence (or arrival) in the 11 United States.” (ECF No. 238 at 2.) Defendants observe that the phrase “alien who 12 arrives in” is still linked with the geographic location of the United States. Second, 13 Defendants argue that the presumption against extraterritorial application of federal 14 statutes forecloses application of Section 1158 to conduct that occurs outside the 15 United States. (Id. at 3.) Third, Defendants argue that Congress has enacted a 16 separate scheme to deal with refugee claims for persons outside the United States.
17 (Id. at 3–4.) The Court rejects each of Defendants’ arguments and, in doing so, the 18 Court concludes that Congress included aliens in the process of arriving in the United 19 States in Section 1158(a)(1)’s general authorization to apply for asylum.

21 (a) The Statute’s Present Tense (Con)Text

22 Defendants argue that the statute’s use of the phrase “alien who arrives in” is 23 linked with a geographic location because “use of the present simple tense creates a 24 nexus between the alien’s ability to apply for asylum and the alien’s current physical 25 presence (or arrival) in the United States.” (ECF No. 238 at 2.) Although Plaintiffs 26 assert that “arrives in” “must mean something different than geographic presence in physically in the United States but are in the process of doing so.

28 _____

1 the United States[.]” (ECF No. 210 at 8), Plaintiffs do not so much dispute that 2 Section 1158(a)(1)’s use of “arrives in” has a geographic focus. Rather, Plaintiffs’ 3 fundamental contention is that the statute’s use of the present tense embraces an alien 4 who is in the process of arriving in the United States. (Id. at 7.) According to 5 Plaintiffs, the “natural meaning” of “arrives in,” as used in the statute, encompasses 6 “someone who is in the process of ‘arriv[ing] in’ the United States[.]” (Id.) Based 7 on this reading, Plaintiffs argue that “because all Individual Plaintiffs were arriving 8 in the United States, they are covered by” this provision. (Id.) The Court agrees.

10 “Congress’ use of a verb tense is significant in construing statutes.” United 11 States v. Wilson, 503 U.S. 329, 333 (1992) (collecting statutes). Although neither 12 side raises this point, it bears noting that Congress has enacted the Dictionary Act to 13 guide interpretation of congressional statutes. Pursuant to the Act, “[i]n determining 14 the meaning of any Act of Congress, unless the context indicates otherwise—words 15 used in the present tense include the future as well as the present.” 1 U.S.C. § 1.
16 This provision of the Dictionary Act has been applied to the INA. See Carrillo de 17 Palacios v. Holder, 651 F.3d 969, 976 (9th Cir. 2011) (citing 1 U.S.C. § 1). When 18 accounting for the rule against surplusage, application of the Dictionary Act readily 19 leads to the conclusion that Section 1158(a)(1)’s use of the present tense of “arrives” 20 plainly covers an alien who may not yet be in the United States, but who is in the 21 process of arriving in the United States through a POE.

23 This reading is buttressed by statutory provisions that Section 1158(a)(1) 24 expressly incorporates. Section 1158(a)(1) references the Section 1225 procedure 25 for aliens seeking asylum at the border. 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1). In relevant part, 26 Section 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii) requires an immigration officer to refer an inadmissible 27 alien “who is arriving in the United States” and who expresses a fear of persecution 28 or “an intention to apply for asylum” for an interview with an asylum officer. 8

1 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii) (emphasis added). The use of the present progressive, 2 like use of the present participle, denotes an ongoing process. See United States v.
3 Balint, 201 F.3d 928, 933 (7th Cir. 2000) [U]se of the present progressive tense, 4 formed by pairing a form of the verb ‘to be’ and the present participle, or ‘-ing’ form 5 of an action verb, generally indicates continuing action.”); Laube v. Allen, 506 F.
6 Supp. 2d 969, 980 (M.D. Ala. 2007) (observing that a statute’s use of the present 7 participle “denotes action that is continuing or progressing”); cf. Khakhn v. Holder, 8 371 Fed. App’x 933, 937 (10th Cir. 2010) (finding use of the present participle 9 phrase “applying for adjustment” in section 1104(g) of the LIFE Act as 10 “unambiguous” that an alien who “is no longer applying for adjustment of status 11 under the LIFE Act” cannot prevent reinstatement of a prior deportation order).
12 Section 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii) therefore reinforces the conclusion that Congress intended 13 to authorize aliens in the process of arriving into the United States to apply for 14 asylum under Section 1158(a)(1). See E. Bay Sanctuary Covenant v. Trump, 349 F.
15 Supp. 3d 838, 844 (N.D. Cal. 2018) (observing that “[a]sylum is a protection granted 16 to foreign nationals already in the United States or at the border who meet the 17 international law definition of a ‘refugee.’” (emphasis added)).

19 Although Defendants focus on the “geographic nexus” that Section 1158(a)(1) 20 creates with the United States, they ignore its use of the present tense. In fact, 21 Defendants’ opening briefing expressly rewrites the statutory provision into the past 22 tense to seek dismissal of the New Individual Plaintiffs’ claims: “[n]one of the 23 Extraterritorial Plaintiffs alleges he or she was ‘physically present in’ the United 24 States or had ‘arrive[d] in’ the United States when subjected to Defendants’ alleged 25 conduct.” (ECF No. 192-1 at 8 (brackets in original and emphasis added).) In reply, 26 Defendants similarly argue for a past tense revision. (ECF No. 238 at 2 (purporting 27 to argue about the meaning of the statute’s “present simple tense” yet citing Matter
28 of F-P-R, 24 I. & N. Dec. 681, 683 (BIA 2008) for the proposition that “‘last arrival

1 in’ at 8 C.F.R. § 1208.4(a)(2)(ii) . . . mean[s] the alien’s most recent coming or 2 crossing into the United States after having traveled from somewhere outside of the 3 country.” (emphasis added).) Defendants’ argument must fail because it invites the 4 Court to do what it cannot: “[w]e are not at liberty to rewrite the words chosen by 5 Congress.” United States v. Vargas-Amaya, 389 F.3d 901, 906 (9th Cir. 2004).

7       Were the statute’s text not enough, as Amici Immigration Law Professors 8 observe, there is relevant legislative history on Congress’s intent in adopting the term 9 “arriving alien,” as reflected in a statement by Representative Lamar Smith, 10 Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee’s Subcommittee on Immigration and 11 Claims. (ECF No. 221-1 at 11.) In particular, Representative Smith observed that 12 the term “was selected specifically by Congress in order to provide a flexible concept 13 that would include all aliens who are in the process of physical entry past our 14 borders[.]. . . . ‘Arrival’ in this context should not be considered ephemeral or 15 instantaneous but, consistent with common usage, as a process. An alien 16 apprehended at any stage of this process, whether attempting to enter, at the point of 17 entry, or just having made entry, should be considered an ‘arriving alien’ for the 18 various purposes in which that term is used in the newly revised provisions of the 19 INA.” Implementation of Title III of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant 20 Responsibility Act of 1996: Hearing Before the Subcomm. on Immigration and 21 Claims of the H. Comm. on the Judiciary, 105th Cong. 17–18 (1997). Despite 22 Defendants’ attempt to dismiss this legislative history, (ECF No. 238 at 6), it 23 confirms the propriety of the Court’s conclusion that the statute’s use of the present 24 tense encompasses aliens in the process of arriving. See Daniel v. Nat’l Park Serv., 25 891 F.3d 762, (9th Cir. 2018) (“[T]he legislative history ‘confirms what we have 26 concluded from the text alone.’” (quoting Mohamad v. Palestinian Auth., 566 U.S.
27 449, 460 (2012))).

28

1 (b) Presumption Against Extraterritoriality

2 Faced with the statute’s text, Defendants turn to the statutory canon of the 3 presumption against extraterritoriality to argue that “the right codified at section 4 1158(a)(1)” simply cannot extend “to persons outside the United States borders” 5 because this would be “in direct contravention of Supreme Court precedent and in 6 violation of the presumption against extraterritoriality.” (ECF No. 238 at 3 (citing 7 Sale, 509 U.S. at 173–74; E.E.O.C. v. Arabian Am. Oil Co., 499 U.S. 244, 248 (1991)
8 (“It is a longstanding principal of American law that legislation of Congress, unless 9 a contrary intent appears, is meant to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of 10 the United States.” (internal quotation marks omitted)).) The Court does not find 11 Defendants’ argument persuasive.

13 The presumption against extraterritoriality is what its name suggests—a 14 presumption. Application of the presumption is a two-step process, which may 15 reveal that Congress has rebutted the presumption for an entire statutory provision 16 or that the presumption is displaced in the context of a particular case’s facts. Under 17 the first step, a court considers “whether the presumption against extraterritoriality 18 has been rebutted—that is, whether the statute gives a clear, affirmative indication 19 that it applies extraterritorially.” RJR Nabisco, Inc. v. European Cmty., 136 S. Ct.
20 2090, 2101 (2016). Second, if the statute does not clearly indicate an intent that it 21 applies extraterritorially, the court must consider “whether the case involves a 22 domestic application of the statute . . . by looking to the statute’s ‘focus.’” Id. at 23 2101. “If the conduct relevant to the statute’s focus occurred in the United States, 24 then the case involves a permissible domestic application even if other conduct 25 occurred abroad; but if the conduct relevant to the focus occurred in a foreign 26 country, then the case involves an impermissible extraterritorial application 27 regardless of any other conduct that occurred in U.S. territory.” Id.
28

1 Defendants fail to actually apply the framework to Section 1158. The Court 2 will not undertake the task of doing Defendants’ work for them, particularly when 3 Defendants effectively seek to rely on the presumption as a bar to application of 4 Section 1158 to the New Individual Plaintiffs. This is not how the presumption 5 works.

7 In any event, the Court finds that the presumption is rebutted in this case.
8 First, as Plaintiffs contend (ECF No. 210 at 8–9), “[i]mmigration statutes, by their 9 very nature, pertain to activity at or near international borders. It is natural to expect 10 that Congress intends for laws that regulate conduct that occurs near international 11 borders to apply to some activity that takes place on the foreign side of those 12 borders.” United States v. Villanueva, 408 F.3d 193, 199 (5th Cir. 2005). A reading 13 of Section 1158(a)(1), when placed into context, shows that Congress intended the 14 statute to apply to asylum seekers in the process of arriving. The Court concludes 15 that the statute’s language sufficiently displaces the presumption. See RJR Nabisco, 16 Inc., 136 S. Ct. at 2102 (observing that “[w]hile the presumption can be overcome 17 only by a clear indication of extraterritorial effect, an express statement of 18 extraterritoriality is not essential. ‘Assuredly context can be consulted as well.’” 19 (quoting Morrison v. Nat’l Australian Bank Ltd., 561 U.S. 247, 265 (2010))). Even 20 if the Court proceeded to the second step of the extraterritoriality analysis, the factual 21 allegations of this case concern the conduct of U.S. officials acting from within the 22 United States or from areas over which the U.S. exercises sovereignty, whether the 23 Court looks at the alleged Turnback Policy or the alleged acts of individual CBP 24 officers standing on the U.S. side of the international bridge between Mexico and 25 the United States. As the Court has discussed, Section 1158(a)(1) incorporates 26 Section 1225, which in turns places a focus on immigration officers who process 27 arriving aliens. Thus, even if the New Individual Plaintiffs had not crossed into the 28 United States when they were attempting admission and expressed to CBP officers

1 an intent to seek asylum in the United States, they have alleged conduct occurring in 2 the United States that is a focus of the relevant statutory provisions when viewed in 3 context. Thus, this case involves a permissible territorial application of Section 4 1158.

6 (c) 8 U.S.C. § 1157(c) Refugee Admission Process

7 Finally, for the first time in reply, Defendants point to 8 U.S.C. § 1157(c) to 8 argue that this Court should not read Section 1158(a)(1) to encompass aliens who 9 are not yet in the United States. (ECF No. 238 at 3–4, 16.) According to Defendants, 10 under Section 1157(c), “a process already exists for accepting applications for 11 refugee status from persons outside the United States.” (ECF No. 238 at 3–4, 16.) 12 Defendants argue that “to adopt Plaintiffs’ interpretation of Section 1158 would 13 render section 1157 redundant.” (Id. at 4.) The Court does not share Defendants’ 14 view.

16 Even a cursory review of Section 1157 shows that the statute establishes a 17 fundamentally different and separate scheme for admission of refugees into the 18 United States in the case of “humanitarian concerns” or “national interest.” 8 U.S.C.
19 § 1157(a)(1). The number of admissions is limited to “such number as the President 20 determines, before the beginning of the fiscal year and after appropriate consultation, 21 is justified by humanitarian concerns or is otherwise in the national interest.” 8 22 U.S.C. § 1157(a)(2). Section 1157(c) permits the Attorney General, subject to the 23 numerical limitation, to “admit any refugee who is not firmly resettled in any foreign 24 country, is determined to be of special humanitarian concern to the United States, 25 and is admissible. . . as an immigrant.” 8 U.S.C. § 1157(c)(1). Notably, Section 26 1157 does not refer to the asylum procedures set forth in Section 1158(a)(1), nor 27 does Section 1157 concern Section 1225’s focus on inspection of arriving aliens.
28 These textual differences blunt the force of Defendants’ argument that reading

1 Section 1158(a)(1) in the manner the Court has would improperly render Section 2 1157 redundant, particularly in this case. No New Individual Plaintiff seeks relief 3 under Section 1157. In contrast, their allegations plausibly show that they were 4 arriving aliens and thus may avail themselves of the procedural protections available
5 under Sections 1158 and 1225. Accordingly, the Court rejects Defendants’ Section 6 1157(c) argument.

8 * * *

9 In sum, the Court concludes that Section 1158(a)(1)’s plain language, properly 10 construed, embraces any New Individual Plaintiffs whose allegations show that they 11 were in the process of arriving in the United States at the time of the challenged 12 conduct. With this construction in mind, the Court turns to the statutory provisions 13 pursuant to which the New Individual Plaintiffs seek to compel Section 706(1) relief.

15 (2) 8 U.S.C. § 1225

16 The core of the New Individual Plaintiffs’ Section 706(1) APA claims lies in 17 certain mandatory duties that 8 U.S.C. § 1225 imposes on an immigration officer.
18 As a threshold matter, Plaintiffs’ opposition to Defendants’ motion to dismiss is 19 silent on dismissal of the New Individual Plaintiffs’ Section 706(1) claims insofar as 20 the claims are premised on 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), a provision that requires 21 detention of aliens not otherwise covered under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) and who have 22 not shown that they are entitled to admission clearly and beyond a doubt. (Compare 23 ECF No. 192-1 at 9–10 with ECF No. 210 at 5–9.) Thus, the Court construes
24 Defendants’ motion to dismiss as unopposed insofar as Defendants seek dismissal 25 of Plaintiffs’ Section 706(1) claims. The Court limits its analysis to the statutory 26 and regulatory duties to inspect and refer asylum seekers under 8 U.S.C. § 27 1225(a)(3), 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii), and 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4). Many of the 28 previously articulated statutory construction principles applied to Section 1158(a)(1)

1 carry over and lead the Court to a similar interpretation of these provisions.

(a) Statutory Duty to Inspect

4 Section 1225 establishes that “[a]ll aliens . . . who are applicants for admission
5 or otherwise seeking admission or readmission to or transit through the United States 6 shall be inspected by immigration officers.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3) (emphasis 7 added). Section 1225(a)(3) provides a stronger textual argument that the duty to 8 inspect applies to aliens who may not yet be in the territorial United States. Referring 9 to the statute, albeit in passing, the Ninth Circuit has observed that “[a]ll applicants 10 for admission, whether they are at the border or already physically present inside the 11 country, must ‘be inspected by immigration officers’ who will determine their 12 admissibility.” Ortega-Cervantes v. Gonzales, 501 F.3d 1111, 1118 (9th Cir. 2007)
13 (quoting 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3)). This interpretation makes sense because Section 14 1225(a)(3)’s duty to inspect reaches beyond “applicants for admission” to 15 encompass aliens who are “otherwise seeking admission.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3).

17 Defendants fail to explain how, as a textual matter, Section 1225(a)(3)’s use 18 of the phrase “otherwise seeking admission . . . to . . . the United States” does not 19 include aliens who may be located outside the United States, but who are in the 20 process of seeking admission to the United States. Instead, Defendants contend that 21 the New Individual Plaintiffs were not seeking admission “in the manner prescribed 22 by statute and regulation.” (ECF No. 192-1 at 8 (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1), 8 23 C.F.R. § 235.1(a).) Defendants point to a regulation, which provides that 24 “[a]pplication to lawfully enter the United States shall be made in person to an 25 immigration officer at a U.S. port-of-entry when the port is open for inspection, or 26 as otherwise designated in this section.” 8 C.F.R. § 235.1(a). All New Individual 27 Plaintiffs, however, allege that they sought admission to the United States by 28 presenting him or herself to a CBP officer at a U.S. POE. (SAC ¶¶ 29–35, 154–56, 1 162, 165–67, 174–75, 181, 185, 187–88, 193, 199.) Plaintiffs do not allege that the 2 POE was not open, but rather that CBP officers told them that the POE purportedly

3 did not have “capacity” to accept applications from asylum seekers. (Id. ¶¶ 83, 85– 4 86, 93–94, 95–97, 98–102, 103–05, 153–202.) These allegations plausibly show
5 that these Plaintiffs were seeking admission into the United States. Defendants’ 6 challenge to any Section 706(1) claims premised on the duty to inspect therefore 7 fails.

9 (b) Statutory and Regulatory Duties to Refer

10 Section 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii) provides that:

11 If an immigration officer determines that an alien (other than an 12 alien described in subparagraph (F)) who is arriving in the United 13 States or is described in clause (iii) is inadmissible under section 14 1182(a)(6)(C) or 1182(a)(7) of this title and the alien indicates 15 either an intention to apply for asylum under section 1158 of this 16 title or a fear of persecution, the officer shall refer the alien for an 17 interview by an asylum officer under subparagraph (B).

18 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii) (emphasis added).

19 Unlike Section 1225(a)(1), Section 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii) uses the present progressive 20 phrase “to be arriving.” This phrase plainly encompasses aliens who are in the 21 process of arriving in the United States. As the Court has discussed, Defendants’ 22 challenge to the New Individual Plaintiffs’ Section 706(1) claims largely turns on 23 rewriting the statute into the past tense. Properly applying the statute’s use of the 24 phrase alien “who is arriving in the United States” to the allegations of the New 25 Individual Plaintiffs blunts Defendants’ argument. This is equally true for the four 26 New Individual Plaintiffs who allege that they were crossing the international bridge 27 to the physical POE and were stopped midway on the bridge, yet who told the CBP 28 officers that they wanted to seek asylum in the United States.

The plain language of DHS’s own implementing regulations sweeps more

1 broadly. 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4) imposes an analogous regulatory duty on the 2 inspecting officer not to proceed further with removal of an alien subject to the 3 expedited removal provisions if the alien indicates an intention to apply for asylum, 4 expresses a fear of persecution or torture, or expresses a fear of return to his or her 5 country. 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4). Two additional regulations directly bear on the 6 scope of 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4). By regulation, the expedited removal provisions of 7 the INA apply to “arriving aliens, as defined in 8 C.F.R. 1.2.” 8 C.F.R. § 8 235.3(b)(1)(i). 8 C.F.R. § 1.2 in turn defines “arriving alien” to mean, in relevant 9 part, “an applicant for admission coming or attempting to come into the United States 10 at a port-of-entry[.]” 8 C.F.R. § 1.2 (emphasis added). “A regulation should be 11 construed to give effect to the natural and plain meaning of its words.” Bayview 12 Hunters Point Cmty. Advocates v. Metro. Transp. Comm’n, 366 F.3d 692, 698 (9th 13 Cir. 2004) (quoting Crown Pacific v. Occupational Safety & Health Review
14 Comm’n, 197 F.3d 1036, 1038 (9th Cir. 1999)). Here, by including aliens 15 “attempting to come into the United States at a [POE],” the regulation is broader 16 than 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1)’s definition of “applicant for admission.” And these 17 regulations indicate that DHS—contrary to Defendants’ current position in this 18 litigation—interprets the statutory obligations under Section 1225 to apply to aliens 19 who have not yet come into the United States, but who are “attempting to” do so.
20 As the Court has already determined, the New Individual Plaintiffs were in the 21 process of seeking admission into the United States or otherwise attempting to do 22 so. Their allegations plainly show that they expressed an intent to seek asylum in 23 the United States to a CBP officer. Thus, the Court concludes that the New 24 Individual Plaintiffs have stated a claim for relief under the mandatory duties 25 reflected in 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii) and 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4).

26 27 C. Plaintiffs’ Section 706(2) APA Claims

28 Under Section 706(2) of the APA, a reviewing court must “hold unlawful and

1 set aside agency action, findings, and conclusions found to be . . . arbitrary, 2 capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law; contrary 3 to constitutional right, power, privilege, or immunity; in excess of statutory 4 jurisdiction, authority, or limitations, or short of statutory right; [or] without 5 observance of procedure required by law.” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A)–(D).

7 Plaintiffs assert Section 706(2) APA claims based on three sets of allegations.
8 (SAC ¶¶ 270–82.) First, Plaintiffs challenge the alleged Turnback Policy and 9 “sanctioning of CBP’s unlawful widespread pattern or practice of denying and 10 unreasonably delaying asylum seekers’ access to the asylum process” under Section 11 706(2)(C) and 706(2)(D). (Id. ¶¶ 272, 274.) Plaintiff allege that the Turnback Policy 12 is a final agency action under 5 U.S.C. § 704. (Id. ¶ 274.) Second, Plaintiffs 13 challenge the alleged turnbacks of Individual Plaintiffs and class members “at POEs 14 or along the U.S.-Mexico border without following the procedures mandated by the 15 INA and its implementing regulations” as unlawful conduct by CBP officials. (Id. ¶ 16 273.) Plaintiffs allege that each instance when Defendants directly or constructively 17 deny Class Plaintiffs or purported class members access to the asylum process 18 constitutes a final agency action under 5 U.S.C. § 704. (Id. ¶ 275.) Third, like the 19 original complaint, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants have a pattern and practice of 20 unlawfully turning back asylum seekers at POEs.

22 Defendants raise three arguments for dismissal of Plaintiffs’ Section 706(2) 23 claims. First, Defendants argue that Plaintiffs fail to identify final agency action to 24 state APA claims for either the alleged Turnback Policy, the alleged widespread 25 pattern or practice of denying access to the asylum process, or any individual 26 turnbacks. Second, Defendants challenge the Section 706(2) claims of New 27 Individual Plaintiffs allegedly in Mexico at the time of their injuries. Defendants 28 argue that “metering is lawful” based on the Executive’s “inherent power” to control

1 the Nation’s foreign affairs and two statutory provisions that Defendants contend
2 “authorize CBP officers to keep the [POEs] from being overwhelmed by an unsafe 3 number of pedestrians at a given time.” (ECF No. 192-1 at 9–12 (relying on 8 U.S.C.
4 § 1103(a)(3) and 6 U.S.C. § 202(2), (8).) Tucked into Defendants’ “metering is 5 lawful” argument is Defendants’ third argument that the asserted breadth of 6 Defendants’ authority under the same two statutory provisions makes Defendants’ 7 conduct unreviewable under the APA. The Court addresses the arguments and 8 rejects them all.

10 1. Final Agency Action

11 The APA limits judicial review to agency action in the form of “the whole or 12 part of an agency rule, order, license, sanction, relief, or the equivalent or denial 13 thereof, or failure to act.” 5 U.S.C. § 551(13). An agency action must be 14 “reviewable by statute” or be a “final agency action for which there is no other 15 adequate remedy[.]” 5 U.S.C. § 704; Navajo Nation v. Dep’t of the Interior, 876 16 F.3d 1144, 1171 (9th Cir. 2017).

18 Two conditions must be satisfied for an agency action to be final: (1) “the 19 action must mark the consummation of the agency’s decisionmaking process—it 20 must not be of a merely tentative or interlocutory nature” and (2) “the action must 21 be one by which rights or obligations have been determined, or from which legal 22 consequences will flow.” United States Army Corps of Engineers v. Hawkes Co., 23 136 S. Ct. 1807, 1813 (2016) (quoting Bennett v. Spear, 520 U.S. 154, 177–78 24 (1997)). “In determining whether an agency’s action is final, we look to whether [a] 25 the action amounts to a definitive statement of the agency’s position or [b] has a 26 direct and immediate effect on the day-to-day operations of the subject party, or [c] 27 if immediate compliance with the terms is expected.” Or. Nat. Desert Ass’n v.
28 United States Forest Serv., 465 F.3d 977, 982 (9th Cir. 2006) (internal quotations

1 and citations omitted). The focus is “on the practical and legal effects of the agency 2 action.” Id.

4 “[A]gency action . . . need not be in writing to be final and judicially 5 reviewable” pursuant to the APA. Al Otro Lado, Inc., 327 F. Supp. 3d at 1319
6 (quoting R.I.L.-R v. Johnson, 80 F. Supp. 3d 164, 184 (D.D.C. 2015)). An unwritten 7 policy can still satisfy the APA’s pragmatic final agency action requirement. See 8 Venetian Casino Resort LLC v. EEOC, 530 F.3d 925, 929 (D.C. Cir. 2008) 9 (reviewing challenge to an agency’s “decision . . . to adopt [an unwritten] policy of 10 disclosing confidential information without notice” because such a policy was 11 “surely a consummation of the agency’s decisionmaking process” that impacted the 12 plaintiff’s rights); R.I.L.-R, 80 F. Supp. 3d at 174–176 (determining that plaintiffs 13 had shown a reviewable unwritten “DHS policy direct[ing] ICE officers to consider 14 deterrence of mass migration as a factor in their custody determinations” as 15 underlying the plaintiffs’ detention). “[A] contrary rule ‘would allow an agency to 16 shield its decisions from judicial review simply by refusing to put those decisions in 17 writing.’” R.I.L.-R, 80 F. Supp. 3d at 184 (quoting Grand Canyon Tr. v. Pub. Serv.
18 Co. of N.M., 283 F. Supp. 2d 1249, 1252 (D.N.M. 2003)); see also Aracely, R. v.
19 Nielsen, 319 F. Supp. 3d 110, 138 (D.D.C. 2018) (“Despite Defendants’ assertions 20 to the contrary, agency action need not be in writing to be judicially reviewable as a 21 final action.”).

23 There are, of course, limitations on whether challenged agency action is 24 properly characterized as a policy, even if the policy is alleged to be unwritten. A 25 plaintiff may not simply attach a policy label to disparate agency practices or 26 conduct. See Lujan v. Nat’l Wildlife Fed’n, 497 U.S. 870, 890 (1990); Bark v. U.S.
27 Forest Serv., 37 F. Supp. 3d 41, 50 (D.D.C. 2014) (concluding that although the 28 plaintiffs “have attached a [policy] label to their own amorphous description of the

1 [agency's] practices,” “a final agency action requires more.”); Lightfoot v. District
2 of Columbia, 273 F.R.D. 314, 326 (D.D.C. 2011) (“The question is not whether a 3 constellation of disparate but equally suspect practices may be distilled from the 4 varying experiences of the class; rather, Plaintiffs must first identify the ‘policy or 5 custom’ they contend violates [the law] and then establish that the ‘policy or custom’ 6 is common to the class.”).

8 The parties dispute whether Plaintiffs have shown the existence of final 9 agency action for their Section 706(2) claims. Insofar as Plaintiffs seek to state 10 Section 706(2) claims for individual turnbacks, the Court has already advised 11 Plaintiffs that individual turnbacks—which fundamentally concern alleged failures 12 by CBP officers to discharge certain mandatory statutory duties—are appropriately 13 considered under Section 706(1). See Al Otro Lado, Inc., 327 F. Supp. 3d at 1309 14 (citing Rosario v. United States Citizenship, No. C15-0813JLR, 2017 WL 3034447, 15 at *7 n.6 (W.D. Wash. July 18, 2017); Leigh v. Salazar, No. 3:13-cv-00006-MMD-16 VPC, 2014 WL 4700016, at *4 (D. Nev. Sept. 22, 2014) (construing a Section 706(2) 17 claim regarding an agency's alleged failure to act as in fact a Section 706(1) claim)).
18 This admonition applies equally to individual turnbacks that allegedly occurred 19 because of the Turnback Policy. Thus, the Court limits its present analysis to 20 whether the Turnback Policy and the alleged pattern or practice of illegal tactics by 21 CBP officers constitute final agency action sufficient for Plaintiffs to state an APA 22 claim.

23 24 a. Alleged Turnback Policy

25 In the wake of the Court’s dismissal of Plaintiffs’ previous Section 706(2)
26 claims, Plaintiffs have revised their factual allegations and their Section 706(2) 27 policy claim. Plaintiffs disavow a policy of categorical denials of access to the 28 asylum system. (ECF No. 210 at 10–11.) Instead, Plaintiffs contend that

1 “Defendants, high-level agency officials, have adopted a policy mandating that CBP 2 officers at POEs drastically restrict the flow of asylum seekers at POEs along the 3 U.S.-Mexico border by turning them back to Mexico when they present themselves 4 for inspection, based on the false claims of ‘capacity constraints.’” (Id.) Plaintiffs 5 have sufficiently alleged the existence of such a policy that constitutes a final agency 6 action.

8 Plaintiffs allege that the Turnback Policy originated in 2016, was formalized 9 in 2018 as a culmination of the agency’s decision-making process, and is being 10 actively implemented along the border. (SAC ¶¶ 48–83 (explaining the initiation 11 and development of the Turnback Policy, based on publicly available materials and 12 limited discovery from CBP).) Plaintiffs point to various instances of U.S.
13 government officials’ acknowledgement of a policy concerning the ability of 14 noncitizens to access asylum when they present themselves at the U.S-Mexico 15 border. The SAC cites a DHS Office of Inspector General report indicating that 16 DHS has embraced a policy to limit access to the asylum process. (SAC ¶¶ 70–71.)
17 The SAC identifies statements from President Trump, former U.S. Attorney General 18 Jeff Sessions, then-DHS Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen, then-Commissioner 19 McAleenan, and other CBP employees, all of which are plausibly read to show the 20 existence of the alleged Turnback Policy. (SAC ¶¶ 60–66, 68–69, 71, 75.) The SAC 21 otherwise contains extensive allegations of alleged turnbacks of asylum seekers by 22 CBP officers at POEs along U.S.-Mexico border based on assertions of lack of 23 capacity, all of which plausibly point to the existence of an unwritten policy. (See 24 SAC ¶¶ 49, 75, 77–78, 83–201.)

26 Defendants’ arguments that Plaintiffs fail to establish a final agency action 27 miss the mark. For one, despite arguing that Plaintiffs have simply attached a 28 “policy” label to Defendants’ alleged conduct, Defendants’ briefing leaves the

1 distinct impression that Defendants concede the existence of a policy from which 2 Plaintiffs’ alleged injuries flow. Whereas Plaintiffs refer to this policy as the 3 “Turnback Policy,” Defendants refer to the challenged conduct as one of “metering.”
4 (ECF No. 192-1 at 11–15; ECF No. 238 at 9–12.) Second, Defendants recycle an 5 argument that they raised in their first motion to dismiss Plaintiffs’ Section 706(2) 6 claims. Defendants argue once more that Plaintiffs have not plausibly alleged a 7 policy of categorical denials of asylum at POEs along the U.S-Mexico border. (ECF 8 No. 192-1 at 16, 30.) The Court previously dismissed Plaintiffs’ Section 706(2) 9 claims on this basis. But, as Plaintiffs expressly argue in opposition (ECF No. 210 10 at 10–11), they do not claim that the Turnback Policy is a policy to categorically 11 deny asylum seekers entry into the United States. Instead, Plaintiffs allege this is a 12 policy aimed at deterring or limiting asylum seekers from seeking asylum in the 13 United States. Defendants’ argument therefore lacks force based on the current 14 pleadings. Third, Defendants challenge Plaintiffs’ reliance on statements by U.S.
15 government officials as premised on a “limited selection of Defendants’ own 16 statements and communications[.]” (ECF No. 192-1 at 16–17.) Defendants’ 17 argument is ostensibly based on the notion that there are other statements by U.S.
18 government officials that would defeat or undermine Plaintiffs’ claims regarding the 19 Turnback Policy. Such a merits challenge is inappropriate at this stage.
20 Accordingly, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have adequately identified a final 21 agency action in the form of the Turnback Policy.

22
23 b. Alleged Pattern and Practice

24 Defendants move to dismiss Plaintiffs’ Section 706(2) claims insofar as the 25 claims concern the allegations that Defendants have “sanctioned” a practice and 26 pattern of denying access to the asylum procedure in the United States. Defendants 27 contend that “alleged misrepresentations, threats, intimidation, verbal and physical 28 abuse, coercion, ‘unreasonable delays,’ and racially discriminatory denial of access”

1 are not final agency action because they “are not plausibly attributable to a DHS or 2 CBP Policy.” (ECF No. 238 at 8.) In previously dismissing Plaintiffs’ Section 3 706(2) claims, the Court observed that allegations regarding this conduct could not 4 state a Section 706(2) claim because Plaintiffs failed to connect the conduct to any 5 “unwritten policy” of Defendants. Al Otro Lado, 327 F. Supp. 3d at 1319. The 6 Court, however, does not find that this previous conclusion controls here. Plaintiffs 7 expressly allege that the pattern and practice of unlawful tactics and the Turnback 8 Policy “are designed” together to serve the Trump Administration’s “broader goal” 9 of deterring asylum seekers from accessing the asylum process and the allegations 10 show both co-existing. (SAC ¶¶2, 4, 48, 51–60, 84–106.) Plaintiffs’ allegations 11 regarding a “sanctioned” pattern and practice of CBP officers using certain tactics to 12 deny access to the asylum process dovetail with Plaintiffs’ allegations that the 13 Turnback Policy is based on false assertions of lack of capacity. Accordingly, the 14 Court finds that Plaintiffs’ allegations of an alleged pattern and practice are directly 15 linked with the alleged Turnback Policy such that it is not proper to dismiss 16 Plaintiffs’ Section 706(2) claims as to the alleged pattern and practice.

17 18 2. Asserted Unreviewable Agency Discretion

19 Defendants point to 8 U.S.C. § 1103(a)(1) and 6 U.S.C. § 202 as “especially 20 authoriz[ing] CBP officers to keep the ports from being overwhelmed by an unsafe 21 number of pedestrians at a given time,” thus requiring dismissal of Plaintiffs’ Section 22 706(2) claims. (ECF No. 192-1 at 13–14.) Defendants argue that the New Individual 23 Plaintiffs “make no attempt . . . to square the breadth of Defendants’ authority to 24 meter under these statutes with the APA’s prohibition on judicial review of agency 25 action ‘committed to agency discretion by law.’” (ECF No. 192-1 at 14 (quoting 5 26 U.S.C. § 701(a)(2)).) Because the APA precludes review of “agency action . . .
27 committed to agency discretion by law,” 5 U.S.C. § 701(a)(2), the Court must 28 consider this argument before addressing the merits of Plaintiffs’ claim that the 1 alleged Turnback Policy is unlawful.

3 Section 1103 establishes the powers and duties of the Secretary of Homeland 4 Security. As a general matter, “[t]he Secretary of Homeland Security shall be 5 charged with the administration and enforcement of this chapter and all other laws 6 relating to the immigration and naturalization of aliens[.]” 8 U.S.C. § 1103(a)(1).
7 Defendants point to Section 1103(a)(3) in particular, which provides that the 8 Secretary “shall establish such regulations; prescribe such forms of bond, reports, 9 entries, and other papers; issue such instructions; and perform such other acts as he 10 deems necessary for carrying out his authority under the provisions of this chapter.” 11 8 U.S.C. § 1103(a)(3) (emphasis added). 6 U.S.C. § 202 in turn provides, in relevant 12 part, that “[t]he Secretary shall be responsible for” “[s]ecuring the borders, territorial 13 waters, ports, terminals, waterways, and air, land, and sea transportation systems of 14 the United States, including managing and coordinating those functions transferred 15 to the Department [of Homeland Security] at ports of entry.” 6 U.S.C. § 202(2). “In 16 carrying out” this responsibility, the Secretary is responsible for “ensuring the 17 speedy, orderly, and efficient flow of lawful traffic and commerce.” 6 U.S.C. § 18 202(8). According to Defendants, Section 1103(a) and 202 are so broad, that they 19 do not offer any standard against which the challenged conduct may be evaluated 20 under the APA. (ECF No. 192-1 at 14–15.)

22 “[A]t the outset, there is reason to be skeptical of [Defendants’] position[.]” 23 Weyerhaeuser Co. v. United States Fish & Wildlife Serv., 139 S. Ct. 361, 370 (2018) 24 (Roberts, C.J.). There exists a “strong presumption that Congress intends judicial 25 review of administrative action.” Bowen v. Mich. Acad. of Family Physicians, 476
26 U.S. 667, 670 (1986); Mach Mining, LLC v. EEOC, 135 S. Ct. 1645, 1652–53 (2015)
27 (“[L]egal lapses and violations occur, and especially so when they have no 28 consequence. That is why this Court has so long applied a strong presumption

1 favoring judicial review of administrative action.”). “The presumption may be 2 rebutted only if the relevant statute precludes review, 5 U.S.C. § 701(a)(1), or if the 3 action is ‘committed to agency discretion by law,’ § 701(a)(2).” Weyerhaeuser Co., 4 139 S. Ct. at 370. The exception in Section 701(a)(2) is read “quite narrowly, 5 restricting to ‘those rare circumstances where the relevant statute is drawn so that a 6 court would have no meaningful standard against which to judge the agency’s 7 exercise of discretion.” Id. (quoting Lincoln v. Vigil, 508 U.S. 182, 191 (1993)); 8 see also Regents of the Univ. of Cal. v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 908 F.3d 476, 9 494 (9th Cir. 2018) (noting only “rare” agency actions fit this “narrow” committed-10 to-agency-discretion exception to judicial reviewability). Defendants have failed to 11 show that judicial review is precluded under the relevant statutes.

13 Sections 1158 and 1225 cannot be nullified by general statutory provisions 14 regarding the Secretary’s authority unless Congress clearly intended so. See BNSF
15 Ry. Co. v. Cal. Dep’t of Tax & Fee Admin., 904 F.3d 755, 766 (9th Cir. 2018) 16 (“[W]here there is no clear intention otherwise, a specific statute will not be 17 controlled or nullified by a general one, regardless of the priority of enactment.” 18 (quoting Crawford Fitting Co. v. J.T. Gibbons, Inc., 482 U.S. 437, 445 (1987))).
19 Congress has already determined how immigration officers are to “manage the flow” 20 of arriving aliens who express to an immigration officer an intention to apply for 21 asylum or a fear of persecution. Section 1225 imposes mandatory obligations to 22 inspect all aliens who are applicants for admission or otherwise seeking admission 23 and further imposes certain screening duties for asylum seekers. Notably, 8 U.S.C.
24 § 1103(a)(1) expressly charges the Secretary with the enforcement of “all other laws 25 relating to the immigration,” which certainly includes the provisions at issue in this 26 case.

28 In the face of these specific statutes, Defendants endeavor to argue that any

1 constraints on their authority under 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1) and 8 U.S.C. § 1225 are 2 not at issue in this case and thus these statutory provisions do not bear on the 3 Secretary’s asserted exercise of discretionary authority under 8 U.S.C. § 1103(a)(3) 4 and 6 U.S.C. § 202(2). Defendants first contend that because the New Individual 5 Plaintiffs were not in the United States at the time of their alleged injuries, Plaintiffs’ 6 argument that “Sections 1158 and 1225 limit the scope of the Secretary’s authority 7 under 8 U.S.C. § 1103(a)(3) and 6 U.S.C. § 202” “has no force.” (ECF No. 238 at 8 9.) Insofar as Defendants raise this argument against the Turnback Policy, this 9 argument fails because, at a minimum, Plaintiff Al Otro Lado—a domestic 10 Plaintiff—joins the Individual Plaintiffs in challenging Defendants’ conduct. The 11 argument otherwise fails because the Court has rejected Defendants’ underlying 12 premise regarding the scope of Sections 1158 and 1225 in relation to the New 13 Individual Plaintiffs.

14
15 Defendants further argue that the interpretative canon that specific statutes 16 limit general statutes “does not apply here, because the processes mandated by 17 Section 1225 do not implicate the authority conferred by Sections 1103(a)(3) and 18 202.” (ECF No. 238 at 10.) This argument makes no sense. There is no logical way 19 to treat the Secretary’s asserted authority and charge to secure the border as mutually 20 exclusive from the procedures Section 1225 mandates. Section 202(2) expressly 21 refers to “ports.” 6 U.S.C. § 202(2). Both Sections 1185(a)(1) and 1225 refer to 22 aliens who arrive in the United States, including at a “port of arrival.” Defendants 23 elsewhere argue that applications for admission must be made at ports of entry. 8 24 C.F.R. § 235.1(a) (“[a]pplication to lawfully enter the United States shall be made 25 in person to a U.S. immigration officer at a U.S. port-of-entry.”); (ECF No. 192-1 at 26 9 (citing 8 C.F.R. § 235.1(a)). Thus, the relevant INA provisions governing the 27 duties of immigration officers with respect to aliens who seek admission at POEs 28 plainly bear on how the Secretary may exercise whatever authority the Secretary has

1 to manage POEs. Defendants conspicuously do not argue that these provisions do 2 not provide a means to assess the legality of Defendants' conduct.

4 Accordingly, the Court rejects Defendants' argument that Plaintiffs' Section 5 706(2) claims are unreviewable on the asserted basis of discretion committed to the 6 agency. Whatever authority the Secretary may possess pursuant to the general grants 7 of authority in Sections 1103(a)(1) and 202(2) over the "flow of traffic" across the 8 border, Congress's general allowance for the Secretary to "perform such other acts 9 as [she] deems necessary for carrying out" her authority to administer and enforce 10 the INA, 8 U.S.C. § 1103(a)(3), cannot entail the authority to rewrite specific 11 congressional mandates or to pretend that such mandates do not exist. "The power 12 of executing the laws . . . does not include a power to revise clear statutory terms 13 that turn out not to work in practice," and it is thus a "core administrative-law 14 principle that an agency may not rewrite clear statutory terms to suit its own sense 15 of how the statute should operate." Util. Air Regulatory Grp. v. EPA, 573 U.S. 302, 16 328 (2014).

17 18 3. The Unlawfulness of the Alleged Turnback Policy

19 The core of Plaintiffs' Section 706(2) claims is that the alleged Turnback 20 Policy is "in excess of statutory jurisdiction, authority, or limitations" and "without 21 observance of procedure required by law." (SAC ¶¶ 271–72 (citing 5 U.S.C. § 22 706(2)(C), (D)).) In particular, Plaintiffs claim that the alleged Turnback Policy 23 contravenes the congressionally-established procedure set forth in 8 U.S.C. § 24 1158(a)(1) and 8 U.S.C. § 1225.

26 Plaintiffs offer two principal theories why the alleged policy violates the 27 procedures that Congress established in these provisions. First, Plaintiffs contend 28 that Defendants' alleged conduct acting pursuant to the Turnback Policy is ultra

1 vires because it “ignore[s] the mandatory procedures to inspect and process asylum 2 seekers that Congress has put in place.” (ECF No. 210 at 17.) Second, Plaintiffs 3 contend that the alleged Turnback Policy is unlawful because it is “impermissibly 4 aimed at deterrence” and “based on false claims of lack of capacity.” (Id. at 20.)
5 Although Plaintiffs treat these theories as distinct bases to find the alleged Turnback 6 Policy unlawful, (id. at 16–22), the Court finds that they cannot be disentangled from 7 each other. Construing them together, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have 8 sufficiently alleged that the Turnback Policy is unlawful.<sup>10</sup>

10 As an initial matter, Defendants resist application of 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1) 11 and 8 U.S.C. § 1225 to assess the legality of the alleged Turnback Policy.
12 Defendants reiterate their argument that the challenged conduct is entirely lawful 13 under 8 U.S.C. § 1103(a)(3) and 6 U.S.C. § 202 because 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1) and 14 8 U.S.C. § 1225 have “no force as to the Extraterritorial Plaintiffs and the putative 15 class members they seek to represent” who, according to Defendants, “do not allege 16 that they were ever present in the United States.” (ECF No. 238 at 9.) These 17 arguments falter at this juncture for reasons the Court has already discussed. 8 18 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1) and 8 U.S.C. § 1225 qualify the authority set forth in 8 U.S.C.
19 § 1103(a)(3) and 6 U.S.C. § 202.

21 Next, relying on Sections 1103(a)(3) and 202(2), Defendants contend that 22 there are valid reasons why CBP officers cannot unwaveringly adhere to the 23 procedures set forth in 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1) and 8 U.S.C. § 1225. According to 24 Defendants, “port management is a complex task[.]” (ECF No. 192-1 at 13.)

26
27 <sup>10</sup> Because the Court concludes that these theories are together sufficient for 28 Plaintiffs to state Section 706(2) claims, the Court declines to address Plaintiffs’ alternative and third argument that the alleged Turnback Policy is unlawful because it unreasonably delays the processing of asylum seekers. (ECF No. 210 at 22–23.)

1 Defendants contend that “CBP necessarily could not ‘secure’ or ‘manage’ a port if, 2 in addition to its other mission responsibilities, any alien without appropriate travel 3 documents could cross the border whenever she chooses and immediately trigger 4 Defendants’ statutory duties to ‘inspect[],’ ‘refer,’ or ‘detain[]’ her under section 5 1225.” (Id. (emphasis in original).) Defendants argue the Sections 1103(a)(3) and 6 202(2) authorize CBP officers “to permit an alien without appropriate travel 7 documentation to cross the border only if the port has the capacity to safely and 8 humanely process her application for admission and hold her for further 9 proceedings,” (ECF No. 192-1 at 13 (emphasis added)), and “especially authorize 10 CBP officers to keep ports from being overwhelmed by an unsafe number of 11 pedestrians entering at any time,” (id.) Consistent with this view about their 12 authority over “port management,” Defendants urge the Court to conclude that the 13 alleged conduct does not occur ultra vires, exceed the scope of their authority, or 14 without observance of the procedure required by law. (ECF No. 192-1 at 13.)
15

16 The Court acknowledges that it is entirely possible that there may exist 17 potentially legitimate factors that prevent CBP officers from immediately
18 discharging the mandatory duties set forth in 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1) and 8 U.S.C. § 19 1225. Even Plaintiffs acknowledge as much. (ECF No. 210 at 21.) And the Court 20 acknowledges that federal agencies and the individuals who lead them can face co-21 existing obligations that Congress has chosen to place on the agency, obligations that 22 may at times be viewed as competing with each other and competing for the 23 resources an agency has.
24

25 The problem with Defendants’ reliance on Sections 1103(a)(3) and 202(2) is 26 that Plaintiffs allege that the asserted concerns over capacity are merely a pretext to 27 avoid discharging the duties set forth in 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1) and 8 U.S.C. § 1225
28 and deter asylum seekers from seeking asylum in the United States. Plaintiffs offer

1 numerous factual allegations on this point. (SAC ¶¶ 4–6, 48, 61, 66, 72–73, 76–78, 2 109, 111, 274.) And, contrary to Defendants’ suggestion regarding complex port 3 management, Plaintiffs contend that Defendants’ Turnback Policy “screen[s] out 4 asylum seekers from other applications for admission approaching POEs and send[s] 5 them back to an uncertain fate in Mexico[.]” (ECF No. 210 at 17.) In other words, 6 the purported exercise of authority under Sections 1103(a)(3) and 202(2) specifically 7 targets asylum seekers—not any other aliens who may be crossing into the United 8 States through POEs.

10 In the face of these allegations, Defendants challenge the sufficiency of 11 Plaintiffs’ deterrence allegations as a factual matter by largely relying on materials 12 outside of the pleadings. (ECF No. 192-1 at 15; ECF No. 238 at 10.) Indeed, in their 13 opening brief, Defendants argue that “[t]he record before the Court shows clearly 14 that the Secretary and her designees have deemed it necessary to manage the flow of 15 pedestrian traffic when port resources are strained.” (ECF No. 192-1 at 15 (citing 16 Exs. 1–6).) There is no “record” before the Court on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, but 17 rather the Court is limited to a review of the pleadings and any documents attached 18 to them. United States v. Ritchie, 342 F.3d 903, 907–09 (9th Cir. 2003). Defendants’ 19 reliance on non-pleadings materials underscores that Defendants’ arguments about 20 the truthfulness of Plaintiffs’ deterrence allegations are fundamentally merits 21 arguments that the Court cannot resolve at this stage.<sup>11</sup>

22
23 Assuming the truth of Plaintiffs’ deterrence allegations, the remaining issue is 24 whether an alleged motive to deter asylum seekers from seeking asylum in the 25 United States is unlawful. Plaintiffs argue that it is. Plaintiffs’ fundamental 26

27 <sup>11</sup> For this reason, the Court also rejects Defendants’ attempt to direct the 28 Court to factual assertions made in a declaration filed in a different case. (ECF No.
192-1 at 5, 13.)

1 contention is that “[t]he plain language and intent of the INA’s asylum provision 2 unambiguously preclude Defendants from adopting a policy or otherwise engaging 3 in a practice of denying individuals access to the U.S. asylum process at POEs, even 4 if Defendants prevent those asylum seekers from physically crossing the U.S.- 5 Mexico border.” (ECF No. 210 at 17.) On this issue, Defendants argue that Plaintiffs 6 offer nothing more than a “legal conclusion.” (ECF No. 238 at 11.) The Court, 7 however, finds nothing conclusory about Plaintiffs’ assertions of illegality.

9 Congress has enacted a scheme that mandates inspection of all aliens seeking 10 admission to the United States and mandates referral to an asylum officer of asylum 11 seekers who present themselves at a POE and indicate their intention to apply for 12 asylum or a fear of persecution. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3); 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i).
13 Although this statutory scheme treats asylum seekers differently, it does so only in 14 the sense that such aliens are to be promptly identified and their asylum claims are 15 to be appropriately considered. As Plaintiffs and Amici Immigration Law Professors 16 observe (ECF No. 210 at 19; ECF No. 221-1 at 5–6), the “uniform asylum policy” 17 driving the 1980 Refugee Act, an act which replaced the previous ad hoc refugee 18 and asylum system, was “[a] fundamental belief that the granting of asylum is 19 inherently a humanitarian act distinct from the normal operation and administration 20 of the immigration process.” Aliens and Nationality; Asylum and Withholding of 21 Deportation Procedures, 55 Fed. Reg. 30674-01, 30675 (July 27, 1990) (to be 22 codified at 8 CFR Parts 3, 103, 208, 236, 242, and 253) (emphasis added); see also 23 E. Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 909 F.3d at 1230 (observing that “[i]n 1980, Congress 24 codified our obligation to receive persons who are ‘unable or unwilling to return to’ 25 their home countries ‘because of persecution or a well-founded fear of persecution 26 on account of race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group, or 27 political opinion.’ (quoting 8 U.S.C. §§ 1101(a)(42), 1158(b)(1))). Congress’s intent 28 to prescribe a uniform asylum procedure remains reflected in the current asylum

1 procedure. 8 U.S.C. § 1158; 8 U.S.C. § 1225; see also E. Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 2 909 F.3d at 1230.

4 Turning back prospective asylum applicants pursuant to an alleged executive 5 policy that seeks to deter asylum seekers through false assertions of lack of capacity 6 is plausibly inconsistent with and violative of the scheme Congress enacted. This 7 conclusion follows from a comparison of Section 1157 and Section 1158. Although 8 Defendants have elsewhere pointed to Section 1157 as a purported limitation on the 9 extraterritorial scope of 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1), Defendants overlook a key distinction 10 between Sections 1157 and 1158 that cuts against the lawfulness of adopting a policy 11 to deter asylum seekers. Section 1157 expressly authorizes the President to set 12 numerical limits for aliens who may be admitted as refugees into the United States 13 on an annual basis. 8 U.S.C. § 1157(a)(2). Neither Section 1158(a)(1), nor Section 14 1225(b), however, establishes numerical limits on the total number of aliens who 15 may seek asylum pursuant to the asylum procedure these statutes establish. See 8 16 U.S.C. § 1158; 8 U.S.C. § 1225. Pretextual assertions of “lack of capacity” to turn 17 away asylum seekers who seek access to a POE and express an intent to apply for 18 asylum directly to a CBP officer suggest the existence of an unlawful de facto
19 numerical limit on the number of asylum applicants that finds no support in Section 20 1158 or Section 1225. The imposition of such a limit, through false assertions of 21 lack of capacity, surely violates the scheme Congress enacted, particularly when 22 contrasted with the separate scheme in Section 1157. See Util. Air Regulatory Grp., 23 573 U.S. at 327 (“The power of executing the laws necessarily includes both 24 authority and responsibility to resolve some questions left open by Congress that 25 arise during the law’s administration. But it does not include a power to revise clear 26 statutory terms that turn out not to work in practice.”).

27
28 Defendants nevertheless question that even if “any alleged metering is

1 ‘motivated by deterrence,’ such an aim would not be inappropriate.” (ECF No. 238
2 at 11–12 n.8.) Most curiously, Defendants support this assertion by citing “Aliens 3 Subject to a Bar on Entry Under Certain Presidential Proclamations; Procedures for 4 Protection Claims, 83 Fed. Reg. 55,934 (Nov. 9, 2018),” a rule for which the Ninth 5 Circuit upheld a preliminary injunction barring its enforcement. See E. Bay 6 Sanctuary Covenant v. Trump, 909 F.3d 1219, 1250 (9th Cir. 2018), stay denied by, 7 Trump v. E. Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 139 S. Ct. 782, 2018 WL 6713079 (U.S.
8 Supreme Court Dec. 21, 2018).

10 In East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, the Ninth Circuit affirmed a preliminary 11 injunction barring implementation of a Rule promulgated by the Secretary of DHS 12 and the Attorney General. The Rule provided that “[f]or applications filed after 13 November 9, 2018, an alien shall be ineligible for asylum if the alien is subject to a 14 presidential proclamation or other presidential order suspending or limiting the entry 15 of aliens along the southern border with Mexico that is issued pursuant to [§ 16 1182(f)].” 83 Fed. Reg. 55,952 (to be codified at 8 C.F.R. § 208.13(c)(3) (DHS) and 17 8 C.F.R. § 1208.13(c)(3) (DOJ)). The Rule coincided with a presidential 18 proclamation suspending the “entry of any alien into the United States across the 19 international boundary between the United States and Mexico,” but exempting from 20 that suspension “any alien who enters the United States at a port of entry and properly 21 presents for inspection.” Addressing Mass Migration Through the Southern Border
22 of the United States, 83 Fed. Reg. 57,661, 57,663 (Nov. 9, 2018).

24 In relevant part, the East Bay Sanctuary Covenant majority found the Rule 25 likely to be unlawful under Section 706(2)(A) because the Rule “is inconsistent with 26 § 1158(a)(1).” E. Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 909 F.3d at 1247. Although the majority 27 noted that “[r]ather than restricting who may apply for asylum, the rule of decision 28 facially conditions only who is eligible to receive asylum,” the majority found this

1 to be a distinction without a difference. Id. at 1247. The majority concluded that:
2 “the technical differences between applying for and eligibility for asylum are of no 3 consequence to a refugee when the bottom line—no possibility of asylum—is the 4 same.” Id. at 1247–48. The majority acknowledged that “[w]e are acutely aware of 5 the crisis in the enforcement of our immigration laws,” but concluded that “the 6 Attorney General may not abandon [a congressional] scheme because he thinks it is 7 not working well. . . . but continued inaction by Congress is not a sufficient basis 8 under our Constitution for the Executive to rewrite our immigration laws.” Id. at 9 1250–51.

11 The key lesson of East Bay Sanctuary Covenant is that the Executive cannot 12 “amend the INA”—specifically Section 1158—through executive action to establish 13 a procedure at variance with the scheme Congress chose. Id. at 1250. Much like the 14 challenged rule in East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, Defendants’ alleged Turnback 15 Policy directly concerns the statutory scheme for asylum seekers that Congress has 16 established. The Turnback Policy directly concerns the Section 1225(b)(1) aspect 17 of this procedure for aliens seeking admission to the United States. As Plaintiffs 18 persuasively argue, there is no room for deterrence under the scheme Congress has 19 enacted. An alleged policy that is premised on and implements such a motive 20 contravenes the clear purpose, intent, and text of the statutory scheme that enables 21 aliens arriving at POEs, including those in the process of doing so, to apply for 22 asylum. Accordingly, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have stated Section 706(2) 23 claims premised on the unlawfulness of the alleged Turnback Policy.

24 25 III. The New Individual Plaintiffs’ Fifth Amendment Due Process Claims

26 The Fifth Amendment’s Due Process Clause provides that “[n]o person shall 27 . . . be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law.” U.S. Const.
28 amend. V. The Individual Plaintiffs assert a protected Fifth Amendment due process

1 interest in the various provisions of the INA that allows aliens to seek asylum in the 2 United States. (SAC ¶¶ 225–26, 283–93.) Specifically, the Individual Plaintiffs 3 allege that they possess “the right to be processed at a POE and granted meaningful 4 access to the asylum process” under 8 U.S.C. §§ 1158(a)(1), 1225(a)(3), 5 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii), 1225(b)(1)(B), and 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4). Defendants’ motion 6 to dismiss presents two issues. First, the Court must revisit the propriety of judicial 7 review of Plaintiffs’ constitutional claims independently of the APA. Second, the 8 Court must turn to the merits of Defendants’ dismissal arguments, in which 9 Defendants contend that the New Individual Plaintiffs seek to impermissibly apply 10 the Constitution extraterritorially and, alternatively, the New Individual Plaintiffs 11 were not denied any process that these Plaintiffs claim was due. The Court addresses 12 each issue in turn.

13 14 A. Non-APA Judicial Review of Constitutional Claims

15 In its prior dismissal order, the Court determined that “[w]hile a right to seek 16 judicial review of agency action may be created by a separate statutory or 17 constitutional provision, once created it becomes subject to the judicial review 18 provisions of the APA unless explicitly excluded.” Al Otro Lado, 327 F. Supp. 3d 19 at 1316. The parties dispute what the Court’s prior ruling should mean for the INA
20 and Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause claims that Plaintiffs raise independently 21 of the APA. Plaintiffs request that, to the extent the Court believes it resolved the 22 issue of reviewability of these claims in its prior dismissal order, the Court should 23 revise its previous order pursuant to Rule 54(b) to clarify that Plaintiffs’ INA and 24 Fifth Amendment due process claims may be reviewed even if Plaintiffs cannot state 25 APA claims. (ECF No. 210 at 26.) Defendants argue that Plaintiffs “offer no reason 26 to depart from the correct application of the APA to this case” and expressly argue 27 that the Court “should also reject Plaintiffs’ request to adjudicate their freestanding 28 INA claims under the concept of ‘nonstatutory review’ instead of the APA.” (ECF

1 No. 238 at 18.)

3 As an initial matter, the Court clarifies that its prior statement regarding the 4 scope of judicial review flowed from the nature of the parties' prior dismissal 5 briefing. Defendants did not move to dismiss Plaintiffs' constitutional claims on the 6 merits, but rather limited their merits briefing to the sufficiency of Plaintiffs' APA 7 claims. Plaintiffs in turn presented arguments regarding their APA claims, yet in 8 doing so, relied on case law regarding liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Faced with 9 this briefing, the Court's prior dismissal analysis necessarily turned on the APA's 10 strictures.

12 The present motion to dismiss briefing alters the calculus. The parties have 13 briefed the merits of Plaintiffs' constitutional due process claims, implicitly 14 assuming that the Court can and should review those claims independently of the 15 APA's strictures. Although Defendants argue that Plaintiffs cannot raise 16 freestanding INA claims independently of the APA's strictures, Defendants 17 conspicuously do not make a similar argument with respect to Plaintiffs' Fifth 18 Amendment Due Process claims in their opening brief. (Compare ECF No. 192-1 19 at 18–22 (dismissal arguments regarding Plaintiffs' due process claims) and ECF 20 No. 238 at 15 with ECF No. 192-1 at 23 (arguing that “Extraterritorial Plaintiffs’ 21 INA claims must be evaluated under the APA, as the Court described, or not at 22 all.”).)<sup>12</sup>

25

26

27

28

---

<sup>12</sup> Defendants argue for the first time in their reply brief that even if the Plaintiffs state procedural due process claims, review of these claims must proceed under the APA. (ECF No. 238 at 15.) The apparent reason for this argument is the assumption that if Plaintiffs fail to state a claim in accordance with the APA's strictures (i.e., final agency action, identification of discrete agency action for Section 706(1) claims, etc.), then this Court cannot address the merits of Plaintiffs' constitutional claims. This argument underscores for the Court that non-APA review

1 Guided by more recent precedent, the Court finds it necessary to clarify the 2 propriety of judicial review independently of the APA’s strictures. The Court’s prior 3 dismissal order observed that, at times, courts have resolved only APA claims 4 concerning agency action, even when a plaintiff asserts constitutional claims 5 premised on statutory provisions that underlie the APA claims. See Graham v. Fed.
6 Emergency Mgmt. Agency, 149 F.3d 997, 1001 n.2 (9th Cir. 1998) (“declin[ing] to 7 address the plaintiffs’ Fifth Amendment claim and affirm[ing] the district court’s 8 denial of this claim” because “plaintiffs’ due process claim is premised on their 9 assertion that they ‘have a statutory entitlement to the [individual and family grant] 10 disaster assistance program”” and thus “they may obtain all the relief they request 11 under the provisions of the APA.”); Al Otro Lado, 327 F. Supp. 3d at 1316 (relying 12 on Graham).

14 Recently, the Ninth Circuit has made clear that although “the APA is the 15 general mechanism by which to challenge final agency action,” “this does not mean 16 that the APA forecloses other causes of action.” Sierra Club v. Trump, No. 19-17 16102, —F.3d—, 2019 WL 2865491, at *20 (9th Cir. July 3, 2019). And relying on 18 Navajo Nation v. Department of the Interior, 876 F.3d 1144 (9th Cir. 2017)—a case 19 that figured prominently in the Court’s prior determination that the APA waives the 20 United States’ sovereign immunity for any claims for nonmonetary relief, whether 21 asserted under the APA or not—Sierra Club instructs that Navajo Nation as well as 22 an earlier Ninth Circuit decision “clearly contemplate that claims challenging agency 23 actions—particularly constitutional claims—may exist wholly apart from the 24 APA.”” Sierra Club, —F.3d—, 2019 WL 2865491, at *20 (also relying on 25 Presbyterian Church v. United States, 870 F.2d 518 (9th Cir. 1989) for this 26 proposition). Thus, the Court concludes that review of the New Individual Plaintiffs’ of Plaintiffs’ constitutional claims is appropriate.

27
28

---

1 constitutional claims, independently of their APA claims, is appropriate.

3 B. The New Individual Plaintiffs State Due Process Claims

4 The New Individual Plaintiffs' claims, like those of the other Individual 5 Plaintiffs, are fundamentally procedural due process claims. "The requirements of 6 procedural due process apply to the deprivation of interests encompassed by [the 7 Due Process Clause's] protection of liberty and property." Bd. of Regents v. Roth, 8 408 U.S. 564, 569 (1972). "To assert a procedural due process claim under the Fifth 9 Amendment, [a plaintiff] must first establish a constitutionally protected interest."
10 Stanley v. Gonzales, 476 F.3d 653, 660 (9th Cir. 2007); Foss v. Nat'l Marine 11 Fisheries Serv., 161 F.3d 584, 588 (9th Cir. 1998) (noting that "[t]he threshold 12 question" in a procedural due process claim is whether the plaintiff has a 13 constitutionally protectible interest). "[T]he plaintiff must have more than a 14 unilateral expectation of it; instead, she must have a legitimate claim of entitlement." 15 Serra v. Lappin, 600 F.3d 1191, 1196 (9th Cir. 2010). If the plaintiff shows the 16 existence of a constitutionally protected interest, the plaintiff must further establish 17 "a denial of adequate procedural protections." Foss, 161 F.3d at 588.

19 Defendants do not contest that if any New Individual Plaintiff sufficiently 20 alleges that he or she was in the United States, such a New Individual Plaintiff may 21 assert a Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause claim against Defendants' alleged 22 conduct. Indeed, "[i]t is well established that aliens legally within the United States 23 may challenge the constitutionality of federal and state actions." Ibrahim v. Dep't 24 of Homeland Sec., 669 F.3d 983, 994 (9th Cir. 2012). Thus, to the extent any New 25 Individual Plaintiffs sufficiently plead that they were in the United States at the time 26 of their alleged injuries, Defendants' argument, by its own terms, does not apply.

27

28 With respect to the remaining New Individual Plaintiffs, Defendants raise two

1 arguments for why they fail to state Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause claims.
2 Defendants first argue that these New Individual Plaintiffs possess no protected 3 interests under the Due Process Clause in the INA statutory and regulatory 4 provisions in this case because “the Fifth Amendment does not apply to aliens 5 outside the United States[.]” (ECF No. 192-1 at 18.) Second, Defendants argue that 6 “[e]ven assuming arguendo that the Fifth Amendment applie[s] to [these] Plaintiffs 7 while they were outside the United States, they still fail to state a cognizable Fifth 8 Amendment claim.” (Id. at 21.)

10 1. The Fifth Amendment Applies

11 Defendants’ principal challenge to the New Individual Plaintiffs’ Fifth 12 Amendment Due Process Clause claims is that “the Fifth Amendment does not apply 13 to aliens outside the United States, particularly where they do not allege they have 14 any previous voluntary connection to the United States.” (ECF No. 192-1 at 18; 15 ECF No. 238 at 14–15.) Defendants’ challenge raises a threshold issue about the 16 proper scope and application of the Constitution.

18 As an initial matter, the Court rejects Defendants’ formalistic, territorial 19 argument that the Due Process “Clause’s reference to ‘person[s],’ while broad, does 20 not include non-resident aliens outside the United States.” (ECF No. 192-1 at 19 21 (citing Johnson v. Eisentrager, 339 U.S. 763, 770 (1950)).) Defendants’ reliance on 22 Eisentrager is understandable because there is language in the decision that places a 23 constitutional premium on territorial presence in the United States, suggesting that 24 such presence is the only basis for a noncitizen to receive constitutional protection 25 that a federal court in turn has the power to enforce. See Eisentrager, 339 U.S. at 26 771 (“[I]n extending constitutional protections beyond the citizenry, the Court has 27 been at pains to point out that it was the alien’s presence within its territorial 28 jurisdiction that gave the Judiciary power to act.”); id. at 777–78 (“[T]hese prisoners

1 at no relevant time were within any territory over which the United States is 2 sovereign, and the scenes of their offense, their capture, their trial and their 3 punishment were all beyond the territorial jurisdiction of any court of the United 4 States.”).

6 The Supreme Court, however, squarely rejected bright-line rules regarding the 7 extraterritorial application of the Constitution in Boumediene v. Bush, 553 U.S. 723 8 (2008). In Boumediene, the Supreme Court permitted alien plaintiffs who the U.S.
9 government had designated as enemy combatants and who were detained at the 10 United States Naval Station in Guantanamo, Cuba to seek habeas relief. In doing so, 11 the Supreme Court rejected the government’s proposed bright-line rule that the 12 plaintiffs were not entitled to seek habeas relief as aliens who had committed acts 13 outside the United States as a “formal, sovereignty-based test.” Id. at 764. The 14 Supreme Court stated that “questions of extraterritoriality turn on objective factors 15 and practical concerns, not formalism.” Id. at 764. To resolve such questions, the 16 Supreme Court directed the federal courts to examine the ““particular circumstances, 17 the practical necessities, and the possible alternatives which Congress had before it’ 18 and, in particular, whether judicial enforcement of the provision would be 19 ‘impracticable and anomalous.’” Id. at 762 (quoting Reid v. Covert, 354 U.S. 1, 74– 20 75 (1957) (Harlan, J., concurring)).

22 Defendants rely heavily on United States v. Verdugo-Urquidez, 494 U.S. 259 23 (1990), and Ibrahim v. Department of Homeland Security, 669 F.3d 983 (9th Cir.
24 2012), to argue that the New Individual Plaintiffs must nevertheless allege a “prior 25 significant voluntary connection” with the United States to receive protection under 26 the Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause. The Court briefly discusses these cases 27 and then explains why they do not foreclose the New Individual Plaintiffs’ claims.
28

1           In Verdugo-Urquidez, the Supreme Court addressed the question “whether the 2 Fourth Amendment applies to the search and seizure by United States agents of 3 property that is owned by a nonresident alien and located in a foreign country.” 494 4 U.S. at 261. The Court held that the “nonresident alien” plaintiff in that case had 5 “no previous significant voluntary connection with the United States” and therefore 6 had no right to assert a Fourth Amendment challenge to the searches and seizures of 7 his property by United States agents in Mexico. Id. at 271 (emphasis added). In 8 Ibrahim, the Ninth Circuit expressly relied on Verdugo-Urquidez to permit a 9 Malaysian citizen who was precluded from entering the U.S., who had previously 10 been in the U.S. for four years on a student visa and who alleged that she was 11 mistakenly placed on a No-Fly List and other terrorist watchlists, to raise Fourth and 12 Fifth Amendment claims against the federal government. The Ninth Circuit 13 expressly observed that “the border of the United States is not a clear line that 14 separates aliens who may bring constitutional challenges from those who may not.”
15 Ibrahim, 669 F.3d at 995 (collecting cases including Boumediene). The Ninth 16 Circuit held that, “[u]nder Boumediene and Verdugo, we hold that Ibrahim has 17 ‘significant voluntary connection’ with the United States. She voluntarily 18 established a connection to the United States during her four years at Stanford 19 University while she pursued her Ph.D. She voluntarily departed from the United 20 States to present the results of her research at a Stanford-sponsored conference. The 21 purpose of her trip was to further, not to sever, her connection to the United States, 22 and she intended her stay abroad to be brief.” Id. at 997. Defendants contend that 23 because the New Individual Plaintiffs lack a “previous voluntary significant 24 connection” with the United States, they have no protected due process interests.

26           The fundamental problem with Defendants’ reliance on the “previous 27 voluntary significant connection” test set forth in Verdugo-Urquidez and applied in 28 Ibrahim is that the test does not constitute a ceiling on the application of the 1 Constitution to aliens. Plaintiffs direct this Court to the Ninth Circuit’s recent 2 decision in Rodriguez v. Swartz, 899 F.3d 719 (9th Cir. 2018), a case in which the 3 panel majority relied on Boumediene to conclude that an alien located outside the 4 United States could press a Fourth Amendment claim against a U.S. border officer 5 who, standing on the U.S. side of the border, allegedly shot and killed a Mexican 6 teenager located on the Mexican side of the border. The Rodriguez majority 7 underscored that “[n]either citizenship nor voluntary submission to American law is 8 a prerequisite for constitutional rights[,]” rather, “citizenship is just one of several 9 non-dispositive factors to consider.” 899 F.3d at 729. The Rodriguez majority 10 determined that Verdugo-Urquidez’s “voluntary significant connection” test did not 11 apply in the circumstances of the case because “unlike the American agents in 12 Verdugo-Urquidez, who acted on Mexican soil, Swartz [the defendant U.S. border 13 officer] acted on American soil” and “[j]ust as Mexican law controls what people do 14 there, American law controls what people do here.” Id. at 731 (brackets added). The 15 Rodriguez majority underscored that “[t]he practical concerns in Verdugo-Urquidez 16 about regulating conduct on Mexican soil also do not apply here.” Id.

17
18 Defendants passingly refer to Boumediene only once in their opening brief 19 and do not acknowledge Rodriguez. (ECF No. 192-1 at 19–20 (observing that 20 Ibrahim cites Boumediene); id. at 18–22 (full argument regarding extraterritorial 21 application without reference to Rodriguez.) Faced with Plaintiffs’ opposition brief, 22 Defendants attempt to limit the scope and application of Boumediene in this case.
23 Defendants first contend that “Boumediene is the only case extending a 24 constitutional right to ‘noncitizens detained by our Government in territory over 25 which another country maintains de jure sovereignty.’” (ECF No. 238 at 13 (quoting 26 Boumediene, 533 U.S. at 770).) Defendants then argue that “this Court must follow” 27 “pre-Boumediene law holding that the Due Process Clause does not extend to aliens 28 without property or presence in the sovereign territory of the United States[.]” (Id.)

1 The Court rejects both of Defendants’ arguments. For one, Rodriguez alone
2 renders Defendants’ first argument factually erroneous. Defendants’ erroneous 3 argument appears to stem from Defendants’ attempt to dismiss Rodriguez as 4 irrelevant in a footnote. (ECF No. 238 at 14 n.9 (stating that “[i]f any Ninth Circuit
5 case applies here, it is Ibrahim, not Rodriguez.”).) The Court does not understand 6 Defendants’ dismissive argument. Rodriguez is as much binding precedent on this 7 Court as is Ibrahim. And Rodriguez, applying Boumediene, indicates that Verdugo- 8 Urquidez’s “previous voluntary significant connection” test—and, by extension, 9 Ibrahim’s application of that test—do not alone control the question of constitutional 10 protection for aliens, particularly when the challenged conduct concerns the conduct 11 of U.S. officers acting on U.S. soil. Rodriguez, 899 F.3d at 731. Second, and more 12 critically, Defendants’ attempt to limit Boumediene simply ignores Boumediene’s 13 analysis. Boumediene expressly rejected a reading of Eisentrager that would 14 establish a “formalistic, sovereignty-based test” and expressly narrowed 15 Eisentrager’s reach, observing that “the United States lacked both de jure 16 sovereignty and plenary control” over the area where the petitioner prisoners were 17 located and “[n]othing in Eisentrager says that de jure sovereignty is or has ever 18 been the only relevant consideration in determining the geographic reach of the 19 Constitution or of habeas corpus.” Boumediene, 553 U.S. at 763–64. Thus, both 20 Boumediene and Rodriguez apply here.

22 Appropriately relying on both Boumediene and Rodriguez, Plaintiffs 23 persuasively argue that there is nothing “‘impracticable [or] anomalous’ in applying 24 elementary due process protection at the U.S. border.” (ECF No. 210 at 25.) For 25 one, as an objective matter, the New Individual Plaintiffs’ allegations do not show 26 conduct occurring wholly in foreign territory. Defendants attempt to argue that 27 “[t]he United States does not have de jure or de facto sovereignty over Mexican 28 border towns[.]” (ECF No. 238 at 14.) Insofar as Plaintiffs’ constitutional claims

1 concern the Turnback Policy, allegedly formed by high-level federal officials, 2 Defendants’ argument falters on its own terms because surely such a policy was not 3 developed in Mexican border towns. (See SAC ¶ 287 (referring to Turnback Policy 4 as violation procedural due process rights); id. ¶¶ 50–60.) Insofar as the New 5 Individual Plaintiffs’ constitutional claims concern individual turnbacks, all New 6 Individual Plaintiffs offer allegations regarding conduct of CBP officers who 7 presumably were located on U.S. soil.

9 The allegations of the four New Individual Plaintiffs who were stopped in the 10 middle of the international bridge between Mexico and the United States and denied 11 access by the CBP officers on the U.S. side of the bridge also concerns conduct 12 occurring on territory subject to U.S. sovereign authority. (SAC ¶¶ 29–31, 154, 162, 13 173–74.) Defendants cite an 1886 U.S.-Mexico treaty, (ECF No. 238 at 14), which 14 expressly provides that “[i]f any international bridge have been or shall be built 15 across either of the rivers named, the point on such bridge exactly over the middle of 16 the main channel as herein determined shall be marked by a suitable monument, 17 which shall denote the dividing line for all the purposes of such bridge, 18 notwithstanding any change in the channel which may thereafter supervene.”
19 Convention Between the United States of America and the United States of Mexico 20 Touching the International Boundary Line Where It Follows the Bed of the Rio 21 Grande and the Rio Colorado, U.S.-Mex., arts. I, IV, Nov. 12, 1884, 24 Stat. 1011, 22 1886 WL 15138, at *2. New Individual Plaintiffs Roberto Doe, Maria Doe, and Juan 23 and Úrsula Doe allege that they “sought access to the asylum process by presenting 24 [themselves]” at the Hidalgo, Texas POE and Laredo, Texas POE and “encountered 25 CBP officials in the middle of the bridge” between Mexico and the U.S. POE and 26 “told them” they “wanted to seek asylum in the United States.” (SAC ¶¶ 29–31, 27 154–55, 162, 174.) Pursuant to the very treaty on which Defendants rely, these 28 allegations plausibly show conduct by CBP officers occurring on the U.S. side of the 1 international bridge subject to U.S. sovereignty.

3 Second, as Plaintiffs argue, “the practical necessities” also warrant application
4 of the Due Process Clause in this case. (ECF No. 210 at 25–26.) The New Individual 5 Plaintiffs’ claims concern alleged denials of procedural due process by U.S.
6 immigration officers upon whom Congress has placed certain statutory obligations, 7 all in furtherance of the asylum protections Congress has also chosen to extend to 8 certain “arriving aliens” that express an intent to apply for asylum or fear of 9 persecution. And their claims concern adoption of an alleged policy that aims to 10 impede access to the statutorily-mandated asylum procedure. The lesson of 11 Boumediene is that the political branches do not enjoy the prerogative to “switch the 12 Constitution on or off at will.” Boumediene, 533 U.S. at 765. Appropriately 13 applying Boumediene and Rodriguez, the Court rejects Defendants’ threshold 14 argument that none of the New Individual Plaintiffs can even avail themselves of the 15 Fifth Amendment in this case.

16 17 2. Plaintiffs Have Plausibly Alleged Denials of Procedural Due 18 Process

19 For the reasons set forth in the Court’s statutory analysis, the Court can swiftly 20 reject Defendants’ second dismissal argument. Defendants concede that “[w]here 21 plaintiffs premise their procedural due process challenge on having a protected 22 interest in a statutory entitlement, ‘the protections of the Due Process Clause . . .
23 extend only as far as the plaintiffs’ statutory rights.’” (ECF No. 192-1 at 21 (quoting 24 Graham v. Fed. Emergency Mgmt. Agency, 149 F.3d 997, 1001 & n.2 (9th Cir.
25 1998)).) This concession all but forecloses dismissal of the New Individual 26 Plaintiffs’ due process claims at this juncture. Congress has the power to prescribe 27 the terms and conditions upon which aliens may come to this country. Kleindienst 28 v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753, 766 (1972). “In the enforcement of [congressional]

1 policies, the Executive Branch of the Government must respect the procedural 2 safeguards of due process[.]” Id. at 767. Here, as the Court has discussed in its 3 construction of the relevant statutory provisions, Congress has plainly established 4 procedural protections for aliens like the New Individual Plaintiffs in this case, who 5 allege that they were in the process of arriving to the United States and expressed an 6 intent to seek asylum. The New Individual Plaintiffs have plausibly alleged that 7 immigration officers failed to discharge their mandatory duties under the relevant 8 provisions. Consequently, the Court concludes that the New Individual Plaintiffs 9 have stated procedural process claims and the Court denies Defendants’ motion to 10 dismiss these claims.

11 12 IV. ATS Claims

13 The ATS provides in full that “[t]he district courts shall have original 14 jurisdiction of any civil action by an alien for a tort only, committed in violation of 15 the law of nations or a treaty of the United States.” 28 U.S.C. § 1350. All Individual 16 Plaintiffs and Al Otro Lado seek to raise ATS claims for Defendants’ alleged 17 “violation of the non-refoulement doctrine.” (SAC ¶¶ 294–303.) Plaintiffs 18 specifically allege that:

19 CBP officials have systematically denied, or unreasonably 20 delayed, access to the asylum process by Class Plaintiffs, and the 21 asylum seekers they represent, in violation of customary 22 international law reflected in treaties which the United States has 23 ratified and implemented: namely, the specific, universal and 24 obligatory norm of non-refoulement, which has also achieved the 25 status of a jus cogens norm, and which forbids a country from returning or expelling an individual to a country where he or she has a well-founded fear of persecution and/or torture . . .

26 (SAC ¶ 295.) Plaintiffs contend that Defendants’ alleged violations have caused 27 them harm by forcing them to return to Mexico or other countries where they face 28 threats of further persecution. (Id. ¶ 296.) Al Otro Lado also raises ATS claims for

1 these alleged violations on the ground that its core mission is harmed through 2 resource diversion. (Id. ¶ 300.)

4 As a preliminary matter, Defendants argue that Plaintiffs’ “non-refoulement 5 claims are [not] actionable as presented” based on the Court’s prior ruling that 6 “Plaintiffs ‘may not’ seek judicial review of Defendants’ conduct ‘independently’ of 7 the APA’s judicial review framework.” (ECF No. 192-1 at 23.) Defendants misstate 8 the Court’s prior ruling, which did not speak to the Court’s jurisdiction over 9 Plaintiffs’ ATS claims. The ATS is a “strictly jurisdictional statute” in its own right 10 that “creates no new causes of action.” Sosa v. Alvarez-Machain, 542 U.S. 692, 713, 11 742 (2004); Tobar v. United States, 639 F.3d 1191, 1196 (9th Cir. 2011) (noting the 12 ATS “has been interpreted as a jurisdiction statute only”). Thus, independently of 13 the APA, the relevant issue is whether Plaintiffs can state claims under the ATS over 14 which the Court has jurisdiction.

15 16 A. No Jurisdiction Exists for Al Otro Lado’s ATS Claims

17 Insofar as Defendants move to dismiss ATS claims that Organizational 18 Plaintiff Al Otro Lado raises, (ECF No. 192-1 at 28 (citing SAC ¶¶ 294–303)), the 19 Court finds that such claims must be dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction 20 because “Al Otro Lado is corporation.” (ECF No. 238 at 20.) Although the fact that 21 Al Lado Lado is a corporation does not preclude Al Otro Lado’s assertion of APA 22 claims, its status as a corporation has jurisdictional consequences under the ATS.

23
24 Under its plain language, the ATS provides for federal jurisdiction only over 25 civil actions “by an alien.” 28 U.S.C. §1350. Thus, irrespective of the substantive 26 cause of action that underlies an asserted ATS claim, a federal court lacks 27 jurisdiction under the ATS over claims asserted by anyone or anything other than an 28 alien. See Serra v. Lappin, 600 F.3d 1191, 1198 (9th Cir. 2010) (“The ATS admits

1 no cause of action by non-aliens.”); Yousuf v. Samantar, 552 F.3d 371, 375 n.1 (4th
 2 Cir. 2009) (“To the extent that any of the claims under the ATS are being asserted 3 by plaintiffs who are American citizens, federal subject-matter jurisdiction may be 4 lacking.”); Kadic v. Karadzic, 70 F.3d 232, 238 (2d Cir. 1995) (same); Sikhs for 5 Justice Inc. v. Indian Nat’l Cong. Party, 17 F. Supp. 3d 334, 345 (S.D.N.Y. 2014) 6 (“[J]urisdiction is inapplicable because Plaintiff Sikhs is not an ‘alien’ under the 7 ATS[.]”); S.K. Innovation, Inc. v. Finpol, 854 F. Supp. 2d 99, 113 (D.D.C. 2012)
 8 (“[T]he American corporate Plaintiffs, as non-aliens, lack standing to bring claims 9 under the ATS”); Presbyterian Church of Sudan v. Talisman Energy, Inc., 453 F.
 10 Supp. 2d 633, 661 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) (concluding that an institutional plaintiff that is 11 a United States corporation “is not an alien and may not bring suit under the ATS.”), 12 aff’d, 582 F.3d 244 (2d Cir. 2009). Al Otro Lado is concededly not an alien.
 13 Accordingly, the Court grants Defendants’ motion to dismiss Organizational 14 Plaintiff Al Otro Lado’s ATS claims lack of jurisdiction.

15

16 B. The Individual Plaintiffs’ ATS Claims

17 Defendants initially moved to dismiss the ATS claims of only the New 18 Individual Plaintiffs and Al Otro Lado. (ECF No. 192-1 at 22–25.) In reply, 19 Defendants extend the scope of their motion to dismiss Plaintiffs’ ATS claims to 20 encompass the Original Individual Plaintiffs as well. (ECF No. 238 at 16–18.) To 21 resolve Defendants’ present motion, the Court will not venture beyond Defendants’ 22 actual arguments. Reviewing these arguments, the Court finds that Defendants have 23 failed to show that the ATS claims must be dismissed at this juncture.

24

25 1. The Asserted Law of Nations Norm

26 Defendants first argue that (1) the ATS “has no bearing in this case” because 27 Plaintiffs “have not brought a civil action for a tort[.]” (ECF No. 192-1 at 25, ECF 28 No. 238 at 16–17.) Defendants point to the ATS’s use of the word “tort” and argue

1 that Plaintiffs have no ATS claim here because they have not sued for a “tort.” (ECF 2 No. 192-1 at 25, ECF No. 238 at 16–17.) Defendants’ argument misconstrues the 3 ATS.

5 By its terms, the ATS “enable[s] federal courts to hear claims in a very limited 6 category defined by the law of nations and recognized at common law.” Sosa, 542
7 U.S. at 712. For this reason, it should not be disputed that “[t]he ATS ‘grants 8 jurisdiction over two types of claims: those for violations of a treaty of the United 9 States, and those for violations of the law of nations.’” Aragon v. Ku, 277 F. Supp.
10 3d 1055, 1064 (D. Minn. 2017) (quoting 14A Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R.
11 Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 3661.2 (4th ed., Apr. 2017 Update)); see 12 also Al-Tamimi v. Adelson, 916 F.3d 1, 11 (D.C. Cir. 2019) (recognizing that “[a]n 13 ATS claim . . . incorporates the law of nations”). When a plaintiff seeks to plead an 14 ATS claim based on an alleged violation of the law of nations, the plaintiff must 15 identify an international norm that is “specific, universal, and obligatory.” Sosa, 542 16 U.S. at 732. As a general matter, “[c]ourts ascertain customary international law ‘by 17 consulting the works of jurists, writing professedly on public law; or by the general 18 usage and practice of nations; or by judicial decisions recognizing and enforcing that 19 law.’” Siderman de Blake v. Republic of Argentina, 965 F.2d 699, 714–15 (9th Cir.
20 1992) (quoting United States v. Smith, 18 U.S. 153, 160–61 (1820)).

22 Plaintiffs allege that the duty of non-refoulement is a jus cogens norm 23 recognized by the law of nations. (SAC ¶¶ 227–35.)<sup>13</sup> And, in opposition to 24

25 <sup>13</sup> “As defined in the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, a jus cogens 26 norm, also known as a ‘peremptory norm’ of international law, ‘is a norm accepted 27 and recognized by the international community of states as a whole as a norm from 28 which no derogation is permitted and which can be modified only by a subsequent norm of general international law having the same character.’” Siderman de Blake
v. Republic of Argentina, 965 F.2d 699, 714 (9th Cir. 1992) (quoting Vienna

1 dismissal, Plaintiffs elaborate on these allegations under the applicable standard, 2 locating the asserted jus cogens norm in (1) a range of fundamental international 3 treaties, including Article 33 of the Convention on the Status of Refugees and its 4 Protocol (“Refugee Convention”), Article 13 of the International Covenant on Civil 5 and Political Rights (“ICCPR”), and Article 3 of the Convention Against Torture
 6 and Other Cruel, Inhuman and Degrading Treatment or Punishment (“CAT”); (2) 7 statements by international law bodies, including the Executive Committee of the 8 United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR); and (3) international 9 law commentators. (ECF No. 210 at 27–30.) Defendants simply fail to grapple with 10 Plaintiffs’ allegations or arguments on whether non-refoulement is a norm that is 11 recognized by the law of nations.<sup>14</sup>

12 _____
 13 Convention on the Law of Treaties, art. 53, May 23, 1969, 1155 U.N.T.S. 332, 8 14 I.L.M. 679). Courts determine whether a jus cogens norm exists by looking to the 15 works of jurists, writing professedly on public law; or by the general usage and 16 practice of nations; or by judicial decisions recognizing and enforcing that law, but 17 courts must make the additional determination “whether the international 18 community recognizes the norm as one ‘from which no derogation is permitted.’” Id. (quoting Committee of U.S. Citizens Living in Nicaragua v. Reagan, 859 F.2d 929, 940 (D.C. Cir. 1988)).

19 <sup>14</sup> None of Defendants’ dismissal arguments grapples with the Plaintiffs’ 20 fundamental contention that non-refoulement is a jus cogens norm whose violation 21 is actionable. Defendants initially moved to dismiss the “non-refoulement claims” 22 of the New Individual Plaintiffs allegedly in Mexico at the time of their alleged 23 injuries on three grounds. First, Defendants argued that each of the treaties the SAC 24 identifies is not independently enforceable and separately analyzed each treaty.
 25 (ECF No. 192-1 at 23–24.) Second, Defendants argued that the Refugee Act of 1980
 26 does not provide Plaintiffs with any independent cause of action in this Court 27 because the Act only allows claims to be adjudicated defensively before an 28 immigration judge or affirmatively before USCIS. (Id. at 24.) These arguments elide the ATS claims that Plaintiffs have actually pleaded. Plaintiffs’ opposition brief expressly observes that Defendants’ opening brief fundamentally misconstrues Plaintiffs’ ATS claims. (ECF No. 210 at 27.) And the SAC is fairly clear in alleging Plaintiffs’ theory that the duty of non-refoulement is a jus cogens norm whose violation is actionable—not that each individual treaty cited in the SAC is a separate

1           The only somewhat applicable argument Defendants raise is that “even if the 2 Extraterritorial Plaintiffs had raised tort claims, Defendants’ alleged conduct does 3 not come close to the type of egregious ‘violations of the law of nations’ even 4 potentially within the ATS’s grant of jurisdiction.” (ECF No. 192-1 at 25 (citing 5 Filartiga v. Pena-Irala, 630 F.2d 876 (2d Cir. 1980) as “allowing wrongful death
6 claim to proceed against Paraguayan police supervisor alleged to have ‘deliberate[ly]
7 tortured’ an individual in Paraguay ‘under color of official authority’”). The inquiry 8 under the ATS, however, does not turn on subjective assertions about whether the 9 challenged conduct is “egregious” or not. The Court can only understand 10 Defendants’ current briefing to concede, at this stage, the core contention underlying 11 Plaintiffs’ ATS claims that there exists a recognized duty of non-refoulement that 12 qualifies as an international law norm under the law of nations.

13 14                           2. The INA Does Not “Preempt” Plaintiffs’ ATS Claims

15           Defendants’ second argument is that the existence of a “comprehensive and 16 exclusive scheme of legislation” under the INA “preempt[s] the enforcement of a 17 freestanding international law norm of non-refoulement in this Court.” (ECF No.
18 238 at 17–18.) Curiously, Defendants raise this argument while arguing in the same 19 breath that the New Individual Plaintiffs fall outside the scope of the relevant INA 20 provisions in this case. If this latter argument is to be credited, then there is no 21 comprehensive and exclusive scheme under which these Plaintiffs could seek relief 22 and Defendants’ argument collapses.

24           In any event, the Court has already rejected Defendants’ argument. The Court 25 expressly stated in the prior dismissal order, “[t]o the extent that Defendants contend 26 that the ATS claims must be dismissed because a remedy is available under domestic 27

28 _____ basis for Plaintiffs’ ATS claims.

1 law, the Court rejects that argument. ‘Contrary to defendants’ argument, there is no 2 absolute preclusion of international law claims by the availability of domestic 3 remedies for the same alleged harm.’” Al Otro Lado, 327 F. Supp. 3d at n.10 4 (quoting Hawa Abdi Jama v. United States INS, 22 F. Supp. 2d 353, 364 (D.N.J.
5 1998)). Defendants’ latest assertion of their prior argument under a “preemption” 6 label overlooks Jawa’s express recognition that “there is nothing in the [ATS] which 7 limits its applications to situations where there is no relief available under domestic 8 law” and Jawa’s conclusion that “[t]here is no reason why plaintiffs cannot seek 9 relief on alternative grounds.” Jama v., 22 F. Supp. 2d at 364. Defendants otherwise 10 direct the Court to cases in which federal courts rejected an alien’s attempt to rely 11 on international law norms to seek immigration relief and, in doing so, stated that 12 “where a controlling executive or legislative act does exist, customary international 13 law is inapplicable.” See Cortez-Gastelum v. Holder, 526 Fed. App’x 747 (9th Cir.
14 2013); Galo-Garcia v. INS, 86 F.3d 916, 918 (9th Cir. 1996). Defendants’ reliance 15 on this caselaw underscores for the Court that, at a minimum, Plaintiffs may plead 16 their ATS claims as alternative claims in the event that their INA-based claims fail.
17 See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(3) (“A pleading that states a claim for relief must contain . .
18 . a demand for the relief sought, which may include relief in the alternative or 19 different types of relief.”); Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(3) (“A party may state as many 20 separate claims . . . as it has, regardless of consistency.”). Thus, the Court rejects 21 Defendants’ “preemption” argument.

23 * * *

24 Nevertheless, the Court observes that Plaintiffs do not cite a single case in 25 which another federal court has recognized that the duty of non-refoulement is 26 actionable through a federal court’s ATS jurisdiction. The paucity of such caselaw 27 should at least give this Court pause on whether it is appropriate to recognize the 28 particular ATS cause of action the Individual Plaintiffs raise in this case. Having 1 reviewed Defendants’ present dismissal arguments, however, the Court cannot 2 conclude that it lacks jurisdiction over the Individual Plaintiffs’ ATS claims.

3 Because the ATS is a jurisdictional statute, Defendants are not foreclosed from 4 challenging the Plaintiffs’ ATS claims at a later stage. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3) 5 (recognizing that subject matter jurisdiction can be assessed “at any time”); see also 6 Baloco v. Drummond Co., 767 F.3d 1229, 1234 (11th Cir. 2014) (affirming dismissal
7 of ATS claims under Rule 12(b)(1)); Best Med. Belg., Inc. v. Kingdom of Belg., 913 8 F. Supp. 2d 230, 236 (E.D. Va. 2012) (“The [ATS] is jurisdictional in nature and 9 also subject to challenge by a Rule 12(b)(1) motion.”); In re Chiquita Brands Int’l, 10 Inc., 792 F. Supp. 2d 1301, 1354 (S.D. Fla. 2011) (observing that “a complaint that 11 fails to sufficiently plead the elements of an ATS claim is analyzed under Rule 12 12(b)(1)”).

14 CONCLUSION & ORDER

15 For the foregoing reasons, the Court GRANTS IN PART AND DENIES IN 16 PART Defendants’ motion to dismiss the SAC. The Court GRANTS Defendants’ 17 motion as follows:

18 1. The Court DISMISSES WITHOUT LEAVE TO AMEND the 19 Section 706(1) claims of the New Individual Plaintiffs for alleged failures to take 20 agency action required by 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A).

21 2. The Court DISMISSES WITH PREJUDICE Organizational Plaintiff
22 Al Otro Lado’s ATS claim for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.

23 The Court otherwise DENIES Defendants’ motion to dismiss the SAC.
24 Defendants SHALL ANSWER the SAC no later than August 16, 2019. Given the 25 length of time this case has been pending at the motion to dismiss stage, the Court 26 will not grant extensions of the deadline.

27 IT IS SO ORDERED.
