Welcome to government's "Advanced Imaging Technology" Program.

Implemented in November, flying the friendly skies now includes a show-all, every nook and cranny, full body scan.

It's a birthday suit graphic fit for a coin-operated porn booth.

If you refuse the X-rated X-ray, or if you are just unlucky, you are subjected to a process called "enhanced pat down."

It's government's version of "No Crevice Left Behind."

And this is when the TSA'ers day goes south.

Fondling nuns. Body searching children. Groping grandmothers. Clutching and removing the prosthetic breast of a cancer survivor.

Hands thrust deep inside a traveler's underwear. Continue reading ->

The Dog Ate My Election

Posted on November 26, 2010 by Poz

Watching the antics of some of our elected officials reminds me of my days as a kid. An infraction at school was an offense not tolerated by my parents. Once committed, the best course of action was to come clean and throw myself at the mercy of the court.
