true. my life totally sucks and I am a total TTT loser, but at least it wouldn't be as bad as AK47's once his name is released. He made SO many offensive, racist posts. He did take the bar exam last summer, and is likely working now.

his posts are awful, and his constant ripping of T15-T25 law schools is not really entertaining. I can't wait til his identity comes to light and we potentially find out he doesn't even go to law school much less have a degree from a T14.

This is correct. That was some habitual fucking line-stepping.

However. Creating and running a not even remotely genuine-seeming racist schtick on an internet messageboard full of mindless racist schticks = grounds to have one's reputation ruined and incur $10,000+ punitive damages? No.

I don't really agree with this. Most people don't want what they say on this board shown to their bosses, or parents or even friends/SOs possibly. I def. wouldn't. AK47 is a creep, but I don't think he deserves to have his real life ruined because he said retarded stuff on xoxo. To the best of my knowledge, he hasn't hurt anyone. Anyone who's not an idiot knows he's retarded and should be ignored. The people who actually said stuff about raping and stalking real women, and the guy who emailed that girl's professors should be ruined, not some racist loser.

You are an idiot if you believe this. Posting material on the public domain that is the internet leaves your material open to being read by others. Everyone knows this. If you think that there might be repercussions to something you say on the internet, then don't say it.

we're going to have to agree to disagree on this one. maybe i'm too sensitive but i hate the fact that i have to be subjected to this crap every time i'm on the board (and i know that i could stop checking in, but i apparently have an addiction). and in a way it's worse here than IRL -- if someone pulled that shit with me in person i could punch him out, but because of the anonymity factor we can't even track them down, and these cowards are free to call people whatever horrible things come to mind. yeah it's harmless in a way, but if you're going to post that kind of vile you should be held accountable IMO.

and while i would prefer that my bosses/parents/etc. don't see what i post, i for one have never posted anything that i don't believe or wouldn't stand behind IRL.

it doesn't matter if the guy couldn't squish an ant. anyone spews that kind of filth in a public forum should have to bear the consequences, whatever they may be. i don't believe that because it's on the internet it's any less hateful, he might not have the balls to harm anyone irl (whatever that means) but he should have the balls to stand behind his words/posts. hopefully this litigation will force him to do so.

well i think in trustafarian's case it was obviously a 100% joke so, yes. OTOH, if someone posts that they plan to kill so-and-so, then no i don't think that should be protected if his posts are not damnable then why does it matter if he is linked to them?

"others" as in the rest of society? so you recognize that most of society views ak47's posts as terribly offensive, yet you personally don't find them offensive.

why do you believe anyone posting in a public forum has a right to anonymity?

This is what I don't get. Posting on the internet implies an acknowledgment that you are posting on the public domain. It is no different than someone talking atop a soap box in the park.

that's the whole point. he could say these things IRL and claim that he doesn't find them damnable, but other people will -- that's why this shit could ruin his life. there's no reason the internet should be any different.

why do you feel it's so important to protect one's right to anonymously print hate speech in a public forum?

i completely disagree. some things are inappropriate in any public forum.

you can say stupid shit anonymously but i think people should be held accountable for hateful and offensive shit.
