

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF CONNECTICUT

ROSA LEE KLANESKI, as Assignee of Farmington Auto Park, LLC, as Assignee of Dimaisha Jurado,
Plaintiff,

v.

STATE FARM MUTUAL AUTOMOBILE
INSURANCE CO.,
Defendant.

No. 3:22-cv-1456 (VAB)

RULING AND ORDER ON MOTION TO DISMISS

Rosa Lee Klaneski (“Plaintiff”) has sued State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company (“Defendant” or “State Farm”), alleging that State Farm provided incorrect guidance to Dimaisha Jurado regarding the safety of Ms. Jurado’s car after an accident and later failed to pay the full amount owed under Ms. Jurado’s policy. See Compl., ECF No. 1. Ms. Jurado later assigned her rights under the policy to Farmington Auto Park, LLC, which in turn assigned these rights to Ms. Klaneski. See id. at 3. Ms. Klaneski now asserts claims under the Federal Trade Commission Act (“FTCA”), the federal mail and wire fraud statutes, the Connecticut Unfair Insurance Practices Act (“CUIPA”), the Connecticut Unfair Trade Practices Act (“CUTPA”), state insurance regulations, and state common law. See id. at 4–10.

State Farm has filed a motion to dismiss the Complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and failure to state a claim. Mot. to Dismiss, ECF No. 11 (“Mot.”).

For the following reasons, State Farm’s motion to dismiss is GRANTED.

Ms. Klaneski’s claims under federal law are DISMISSED with prejudice for failure to state a claim.

Because the federal claims are dismissed and the Court does not have diversity jurisdiction over this action, the Court declines to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over Ms. Klaneski's state law claims. These claims are DISMISSED without prejudice to refiling in state court.

If Ms. Klaneski believes that the jurisdictional defects identified in this Ruling and Order can be cured, she must seek leave to file an Amended Complaint by August 4, 2023, or this action will be dismissed with prejudice.

I. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

A. Factual Allegations

On September 24, 2021, a passing car allegedly struck Ms. Jurado's parked car. Compl. at 2. A few weeks later, on October 14, 2021, Ms. Jurado allegedly drove the car, a Nissan Altima, to the local Nissan dealership in order to determine if it was repairable. Id. While at the dealership, Ms. Jurado allegedly called her insurer, State Farm, and informed them of the damage. Id. A State Farm employee allegedly told Ms. Jurado that, because the airbags had not deployed, it was safe to continue driving the vehicle. Id. The employee allegedly told Ms. Jurado to keep driving the car and that a claims adjuster would visit her to conduct an appraisal at a later date. Id.

Later that day, while Ms. Jurado was driving, the Nissan Altima allegedly began to overheat. Id. According to the Complaint, the September 24 collision had not only significantly damaged the interior, but also cracked the radiator. Id. This crack allegedly led to a catastrophic loss of antifreeze, which resulted in engine failure that left the vehicle inoperable. Id.

After this breakdown, Farmington Auto Park allegedly towed the car to its shop, where it remained until a State Farm appraiser allegedly visited on October 22, 2021. Id. After conducting a review, State Farm allegedly informed Ms. Jurado that it would pay $8,200 to repair the exterior of the vehicle. Id. at 3. The insurer, however, allegedly asserted that the cost of replacing the engine was not covered by its policy because the October 14 engine failure was not related to the September 24 collision. Id.

Farmington Auto Park allegedly repaired the Nissan Altima and rented a vehicle to Ms. Jurado at a total cost of $23,812.30. Id. State Farm allegedly made two payments totaling $10,156.42, which allegedly left an outstanding balance of $13,655.88. Id.

B. Procedural History

On November 14, 2022, Ms. Klaneski filed her Complaint in the United States District Court for the District of Connecticut. Compl.

On January 19, 2023, State Farm filed its motion to dismiss Ms. Klaneski's Complaint. Mot.; Def.'s Mem. in Supp. of Mot. to Dismiss, ECF No. 11-1 ("Mem.").

On February 6, 2023, Ms. Klaneski filed her opposition to State Farm's motion to dismiss. Pl.'s Mem. in Opp'n to Def.'s Mot. to Dismiss, ECF No. 14 ("Opp'n").

On February 10, 2023, the parties filed their Rule 26(f) report. Rule 26(f) Report, ECF No. 15.

On February 13, 2023, the Court issued a scheduling order. Scheduling Order, ECF No. 16.

On February 21, 2023, State Farm filed a reply in support of its motion to dismiss. Def.'s Reply to Pl.'s Obj. to Mot. to Dismiss, ECF No. 17 ("Reply").

On April 21, 2023, the Court granted State Farm's motion to stay discovery pending the resolution of State Farm's motion to dismiss. Order, ECF No. 22.

II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

A. Rule 12(b)(1)

“A case is properly dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under [Federal Rule of Civil Procedure] 12(b)(1) when the district court lacks the statutory or constitutional power to adjudicate it.” Makarova v. United States, 201 F.3d 110, 113 (2d Cir. 2000); Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1). The plaintiff bears the burden of establishing by a preponderance of the evidence that the court has subject matter jurisdiction over the claims. Id.

“When considering a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1), the court must take all facts alleged in the complaint as true and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of plaintiff.” Sweet v. Sheahan, 235 F.3d 80, 83 (2d Cir. 2000); see also Nat. Res. Def. Council v. Johnson, 461 F.3d 164, 171 (2d Cir. 2006) (quoting Sweet, 235 F.3d at 83). The Court may also, however, resolve disputed jurisdictional fact issues “by referring to evidence outside of the pleadings, such as affidavits, and if necessary, hold an evidentiary hearing.” Karlen ex rel. J.K. v. Westport Bd. of Educ., 638 F. Supp. 2d 293, 298 (D. Conn. 2009) (citing Zappia Middle E. Constr. Co. v. Emirate of Abu Dhabi, 215 F.3d 247, 253 (2d Cir. 2000)).

B. Rule 12(b)(6)

A complaint must contain a “short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a). Any claim that fails “to state a claim upon which relief can be granted” will be dismissed. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). In reviewing a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), a court applies a “plausibility standard” guided by “[t]wo working principles.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009).

First, “[t]hreadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice.” Id.; see also Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007) (“While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff’s obligation to provide the ‘grounds’ of his ‘entitle[ment] to relief’ requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do.” (alteration in original) (citations omitted)). Second, “only a complaint that states a plausible claim for relief survives a motion to dismiss.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 679. Thus, the complaint must contain “factual amplification . . . to render a claim plausible.” Arista Records LLC v. Doe 3, 604 F.3d 110, 120 (2d Cir. 2010) (quoting Turkmen v. Ashcroft, 589 F.3d 542, 546 (2d Cir. 2009)).

When reviewing a complaint under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), the court takes all factual allegations in the complaint as true. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678. The court also views the allegations in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and draws all inferences in the plaintiff’s favor. Cohen v. S.A.C. Trading Corp., 711 F.3d 353, 359 (2d Cir. 2013); see also York v. Ass’n of the Bar of N.Y.C., 286 F.3d 122, 125 (2d Cir. 2002) (“On a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, we construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, accepting the complaint’s allegations as true.”).

A court considering a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) generally limits its review “to the facts as asserted within the four corners of the complaint, the documents attached to the complaint as exhibits, and any documents incorporated in the complaint by reference.” McCarthy v. Dun & Bradstreet Corp., 482 F.3d 184, 191 (2d Cir. 2007). A court may also consider “matters of which judicial notice may be taken” and “documents either in plaintiffs’ possession or of which plaintiffs had knowledge and relied on in bringing suit.” Brass v. Am. Film Techs., Inc., 987 F.2d 142, 150 (2d Cir. 1993); Patrowicz v. Transamerica HomeFirst, Inc., 359 F. Supp. 2d 140, 144 (D. Conn. 2005).

III. DISCUSSION

The federal district courts are courts of limited jurisdiction. See Lyndonville Sav. Bank & Tr. Co. v. Lussier, 211 F.3d 697, 700 (2d Cir. 2000) (“It is axiomatic that federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction and may not decide cases over which they lack subject matter jurisdiction.”). “It is to be presumed that a cause lies outside this limited jurisdiction, and the burden of establishing the contrary rests upon the party asserting jurisdiction.” Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 511 U.S. 375, 377 (1994) (citations omitted). “Unlike failure of personal jurisdiction, failure of subject matter jurisdiction is not waivable and may be raised at any time by a party or by the court sua sponte. If subject matter jurisdiction is lacking, the action must be dismissed.” Lussier, 211 F.3d at 700–01 (citing Bender v. Williamsport Area Sch. Dist., 475 U.S. 534, 541 (1986)).

In her Complaint, Ms. Klaneski asserts that the Court has federal question jurisdiction over this action. See Compl. at 2. State Farm, however, argues in its motion to dismiss that the federal statutes under which Ms. Klaneski asserts claims do not provide for private rights of action. See Mem. at 16–17.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the insurer contends, this Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over Ms. Klaneski’s claims. Id. Ms. Klaneski argues in response that, even if federal question jurisdiction does not exist, the Court can exercise diversity jurisdiction over this action. See Opp’n at 5.

The Court will address each potential basis for subject matter jurisdiction in turn.

A. Federal Question Jurisdiction

To invoke federal question jurisdiction, a plaintiff must assert claims “arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States.” 28 U.S.C. § 1331. “The presence or absence of federal-question jurisdiction is governed by the ‘well-pleaded complaint rule,’ which provides that federal jurisdiction exists only when a federal question is presented on the face of the plaintiff’s properly pleaded complaint.” Caterpillar Inc. v. Williams, 482 U.S. 386, 392 (1987).

Here, State Farm argues that the Court lacks federal question jurisdiction over Ms. Klaneski’s claims because the federal statutes that she invokes—the FTCA and the criminal mail fraud and wire fraud statutes—do not provide for private rights of action. See Mem. at 16–17.

In response, Ms. Klaneski argues that these federal statutes create affirmative obligations that State Farm is required to observe. See Opp’n at 4. She emphasizes that “federal courts [have] a ‘paramount’ role in protecting federal rights,” and argues that this role justifies exercising subject matter jurisdiction over the claims in this case. See id. at 4–5 (alteration in original) (quoting Roach v. Morse, 440 F.3d 53, 56 (2d Cir. 2006)).

The Court agrees with State Farm, in part.

“A private individual may bring suit under a federal statute only when Congress specifically intended to create a private right of action.” Hill v. Didio, 191 F. App’x 13, 14 (2d Cir. 2006) (citing Gonzaga Univ. v. Doe, 536 U.S. 273, 283 (2002); and Alaji Salahuddin v. Alaji, 232 F.3d 305, 308, 311–12 (2d Cir. 2000)).

Ms. Klaneski first asserts a claim under the FTCA, which prohibits “[u]nfair methods of competition” and “unfair or deceptive acts or practices.” 15 U.S.C. § 45(a). Courts have consistently held, however, that “the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act may be enforced only by the Federal Trade Commission.” Alfred Dunhill Ltd. v. Interstate Cigar Co., 499 F.2d 232, 237 (2d Cir. 1974). “Nowhere does the Act bestow upon either competitors or consumers standing to enforce its provisions.” Id. Thus, “no private right of action arises under that Act.” Naylor v. Case & McGrath, Inc., 585 F.2d 557, 561 (2d Cir. 1978).

Ms. Klaneski next asserts claims under the federal criminal mail fraud and wire fraud statutes, 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341 and 1343. “As a general matter, [the Second Circuit has] long recognized that crimes are prosecuted by the government, not by private parties.” Hill, 191 F. App’x at 14–15 (citing Conn. Action Now, Inc. v. Roberts Plating Co., 457 F.2d 81, 86–87 (2d Cir. 1972)). Consequently, “no private right of action exists under criminal statutes absent an indication that Congress intended to create such a private right of action.” Nath v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 732 F. App’x 85, 87 (2d Cir. 2018) (citing Cort v. Ash, 422 U.S. 66, 79–80 (1975); and Alaji Salahuddin, 232 F.3d at 307–08). Applying this rule, the Second Circuit has held that the “federal criminal mail and wire fraud statutes,” the precise statutes at issue in this case, do not create a private right of action. See id. (citing 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341, 1343).

Thus, Ms. Klaneski has not asserted a cognizable federal cause of action in her Complaint. Nonetheless, this conclusion does not compel the dismissal of her claim for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. “Determinations that a federal statute does not provide a private right of action are typically subject to dismissal under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) . . . for failure to state a claim.” Fair v. Verizon Commc’ns Inc., 621 F. App’x 52, 53 (2d Cir. 2015) (citing Republic of Iraq v. ABB AG, 768 F.3d 145, 171 (2d Cir. 2014); Lopez v. Jet Blue Airways, 662 F.3d 593, 597 (2d Cir. 2011); and George v. N.Y.C. Dep’t of City Plan., 436 F.3d 102, 103 (2d Cir. 2006)). But see Cain v. U.S. Bank, Nat’l Ass’n, No. 20-cv-05034 (AMD) (AYS), 2021 WL 3884196, at *3 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 31, 2021) (noting that, notwithstanding the Second Circuit’s statement in Fair, some district courts “have found that there is no federal question jurisdiction when a private party brings federal criminal claims for which there is no private right of action”).

Accordingly, the Court will exercise subject matter jurisdiction over Ms. Klaneski's claims under the FTCA and the federal mail and wire fraud statutes and dismiss these counts under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim.

With respect to Ms. Klaneski's state law claims, the Court may exercise subject matter jurisdiction and reach the merits of these claims if Ms. Klaneski has established that the Court has diversity jurisdiction over this action or if the Court decides to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over the state law claims. These issues are addressed below.

B. Diversity Jurisdiction

District courts have "original jurisdiction of all civil actions where the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and is between . . . citizens of different States." 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

1. The Alleged Failure to Assert Diversity Jurisdiction

As a threshold matter, the Court may consider whether diversity jurisdiction exists even though Ms. Klaneski did not assert diversity jurisdiction in her Complaint. A court "must liberally construe [a plaintiff's] complaint 'to determine whether the facts set forth justify taking jurisdiction on grounds other than those most artistically pleaded.'" Curley v. Brignoli, Curley & Roberts Assocs., 915 F.2d 81, 84 (2d Cir. 1990) (quoting N.Y. State Waterways Ass'n v. Diamond, 469 F.2d 419, 421 (2d Cir. 1972)). The Second Circuit has also recognized that courts "may look to unpleaded bases of federal subject matter jurisdiction" when the plaintiff's asserted basis fails. Id. at 85.

Thus, "[w]hen the complaint pleads facts from which federal jurisdiction may be inferred, . . . the insufficiency of the jurisdictional allegation is not controlling, and the action need not be dismissed. Harary v. Blumenthal, 555 F.2d 1113, 1115 n.1 (2d Cir. 1977). Even if the complaint does not allege sufficient facts to conclusively establish jurisdiction, 28 U.S.C. § 1653 provides that “[d]efective allegations of jurisdiction may be amended, upon terms, in the trial or appellate courts.” The Second Circuit has recognized that this provision “is to be construed liberally to permit the action to be maintained if it is at all possible to determine from the record that jurisdiction does in fact exist,” Curley, 915 F.2d at 88 (internal quotation marks omitted), and should be used “to avoid dismissals of actions on technical grounds,” Pressroom Unions-Printers League Income Sec. Fund v. Cont’l Assurance Co., 700 F.2d 889, 893 (2d Cir. 1983).

In light of these principles, district courts that have found assertions of federal question jurisdiction to be insufficient have either considered whether the complaint sufficiently alleges diversity jurisdiction or allowed the plaintiff to amend the complaint to assert diversity jurisdiction. One court in this Circuit held in similar circumstances that “[a]lthough Plaintiffs specifically pled jurisdiction based only on 28 U.S.C. § 1331, this Court may take notice of the existence of diversity jurisdiction as based on the allegations in the complaint.” Philan Ins. Ltd. v. Frank B. Hall & Co., 786 F. Supp. 345, 348 (S.D.N.Y. 1992); see also In re Balfour MacLaine Int’l Ltd., 85 F.3d 68, 76 (2d Cir. 1996) (exercising subject-matter jurisdiction based on unpleaded diversity of citizenship after concluding that the asserted theory of admiralty jurisdiction failed). Another court concluded that, although the federal question jurisdiction asserted by the plaintiff did not exist, “in the interest of justice, Plaintiff should be permitted to amend the complaint to assert a jurisdictional basis on diversity grounds.” Clark ex rel. Clark v. Grp. Plan for Emps. of N. Tonawanda Pub. Schs., 845 F. Supp. 117, 120 (W.D.N.Y. 1994).

State Farm argues that Ms. Klaneski cannot now amend her Complaint to retroactively establish subject matter jurisdiction if none existed at the outset of the action. See Reply at 2. In support of this argument, the insurer relies on Broad v. DKP Corp., No. 97 Civ. 2029 (LAP), 1998 WL 516113 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 19, 1998), aff'd, 182 F.3d 898 (2d Cir. 1999). That case, however, presented a different set of circumstances: the plaintiffs incorrectly asserted diversity as a basis for subject matter jurisdiction and then sought to amend their complaint to add a federal RICO claim that would confer federal question jurisdiction. See id. at *1. The court noted that it could not “allow plaintiff to amend his complaint in an effort to establish jurisdiction retroactively” because once the original complaint was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, “there simply is no remaining case or controversy for plaintiff to re-fashion in an attempt to remain in federal court.” Id. at *2.

Here, it is possible that diversity jurisdiction existed from the outset, even if it was not adequately pled. See Andrus v. Charlestone Stone Prod. Co., 436 U.S. 604, 608 n.6 (1978) (holding that the complaint’s failure to specifically allege federal question jurisdiction did not matter because “the facts alleged in it are sufficient to establish such jurisdiction and the complaint appeared jurisdictionally correct when filed”). Allowing Ms. Klaneski to amend her Complaint to specifically allege diversity of citizenship and a sufficient amount in controversy would not “establish jurisdiction retroactively” in the way that amending the complaint to add a federal claim would have in Broad.

Accordingly, the Court may consider whether Ms. Klaneski’s Complaint alleges facts sufficient to support the exercise of diversity jurisdiction.

2. The Amount in Controversy Requirement

“A party invoking the jurisdiction of the federal court has the burden of proving that it appears to a ‘reasonable probability’ that the claim is in excess of the statutory jurisdictional amount.” Scherer v. Equitable Life Assurance Soc’y of U.S., 347 F.3d 394, 397 (2d Cir. 2003) (quoting Tongkook Am., Inc. v. Shipton Sportswear Co., 14 F.3d 781, 784 (2d Cir. 1994)). In conducting this inquiry, courts in the Second Circuit apply “a rebuttable presumption that the face of the complaint is a good faith representation of the actual amount in controversy.” Id. (quoting Wolde-Meskel v. Vocational Instruction Project Cmty. Servs., Inc., 166 F.3d 59, 63 (2d Cir. 1999)). If, however, “from the face of the pleadings, it is apparent, to a legal certainty, that the plaintiff cannot recover the amount claimed . . . , the suit will be dismissed.” St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v. Red Cab Co., 303 U.S. 283, 289 (1938). The parties do not dispute that Ms. Klaneski and State Farm are diverse parties. Thus, the only issue is whether the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

Ms. Klaneski asserts in her Complaint that she is entitled to $13,655.88 in compensatory damages. Compl. at 11. She argues, however, that punitive damages under CUTPA could make up the difference required to meet the $75,000 amount in controversy threshold. See Mem. at 5. Ms. Klaneski emphasizes the low burden for pleading damages under the “legal certainty” test and notes that Connecticut courts have awarded substantial sums as punitive damages under CUTPA in other cases. See id. at 6–10.

In response, State Farm argues that punitive damages could not satisfy the amount in controversy requirement because Ms. Klaneski’s CUTPA claim fails as a matter of law. See Reply at 4. The insurer further argues that, even if Ms. Klaneski has plausibly alleged a CUTPA claim, she has not asserted a legal basis for awarding punitive damages under that statute. See id.

The Court agrees.

“Where both actual and punitive damages are recoverable under a complaint[,] each must be considered to the extent claimed in determining jurisdictional amount.” Bell v. Preferred Life Assurance Soc’y of Montgomery, 320 U.S. 238, 240 (1943). “Punitive damages available under state law can help a plaintiff meet the jurisdictional requirement even where they make up the bulk of the amount in controversy.” Peoples Club of Nigeria Int’l, Inc. v. Peoples Club of Nigeria Int’l – N.Y. Branch, Inc., 821 F. App’x 32, 35 (2d Cir. 2020) (citing Bell, 320 U.S. at 240). Nonetheless, a court “is plainly not compelled to accept a claim of punitive damages, however unwarranted, made for the purpose of conferring federal jurisdiction.” Zahn v. Int’l Paper Co., 469 F.2d 1033, 1034 n.1 (2d Cir. 1972), aff’d, 414 U.S. 291 (1973). “Indeed, in computing jurisdictional amount, a claim for punitive damages is to be given closer scrutiny, and the trial judge accorded greater discretion, than a claim for actual damages.” Id.

Thus, Ms. Klaneski can rely on her punitive damages claim to meet the $75,000 amount in controversy threshold. The Court must, however, apply greater scrutiny to this claim than to the $13,655.88 that Ms. Klaneski claims in compensatory damages.

In order to establish that a business practice violates CUTPA, the plaintiff must show that “the practice, ‘without necessarily having been previously considered unlawful, offends public policy as it has been established by statutes, the common law, or otherwise.’” State v. Acordia, Inc., 310 Conn. 1, 37 (2013) (quoting McLaughlin Ford, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 192 Conn. 558, 568 (1984)). And because the Connecticut Unfair Insurance Practices Act “provides the exclusive and comprehensive source of public policy with respect to general insurance practices, . . . unless an insurance related practice violates CUIPA or, arguably, some other statute regulating a specific type of insurance related conduct, it cannot be found to violate any public policy and, therefore, it cannot be found to violate CUTPA.” Id.

In her CUIPA claim, Ms. Klaneski asserts that State Farm engaged in unfair claim settlement practices under Connecticut General Statutes section 38a-816(6). See Compl. ¶¶ 17–20. This provision requires that such practices be committed or performed “with such frequency as to indicate a general business practice.” Conn. Gen. Stat. § 38a-816(6). The Connecticut

Supreme Court has concluded that this language “reflects the legislative determination that isolated instances of unfair insurance settlement practices are not so violative of the public policy of this state as to warrant statutory intervention.” Mead v. Burns, 199 Conn. 651, 666 (1986). Thus, CUIPA claims “require a showing of more than a single act of insurance misconduct.” Id. at 659.

Furthermore, a plaintiff may obtain punitive damages under CUTPA only if the evidence reveals “a reckless indifference to the rights of others or an intentional and wanton violation of those rights.” Ulbrich v. Groth, 310 Conn. 375, 446 (2013) (internal quotation marks omitted). “In fact, the flavor of the basic requirement to justify an award of punitive damages is described in terms of wanton and malicious injury, evil motive and violence.” Id.

Ms. Klaneski does not specifically assert that the wrongful acts alleged here occur “with such frequency as to indicate a general business practice.” Conn. Gen. Stat. § 38a-816(6). Instead, she rests on her allegation that “[d]ue to the behemoth size of the Defendant’s insurance business spanning many different states, and the number of claims that must be processed in order to total an annual revenue of billions of dollars, . . . the act of short paying the assignor Farmington Auto Park cannot be a sole such incident.” Compl. at 7 ¶ 22. She alleges merely that she “believes that such partial payment and partial denials of claims are a general business practice of the Defendant State Farm.” Id.

Courts in this District have consistently dismissed CUIPA claims that rely on the type of generalized allegations presented here. One court granted a motion to dismiss because the plaintiffs relied on the bare allegation that “it is the general business practice of State Farm to wrongfully deny coverage by relying upon inapplicable policy exclusions” and otherwise failed “to allege any pattern of wrongful conduct, either with respect to their claim or those of others.”

Kim v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., No. 3:15-cv-879 (VLB), 2015 WL 6675532, at *4–5 (D. Conn. Oct. 30, 2015). Another court dismissed a CUIPA claim that relied on the plaintiffs’ own individual complaints along with “the allegations contained in six enumerated lawsuits,” holding that “the plaintiffs cannot merely rely on the fact that others have made allegations against State Farm and/or its affiliates, as opposed to including their own factual allegations, for which they have a good faith basis, in the Complaint.” Phillips v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., No. 3:19-cv-623 (AWT), 2020 WL 3105485, at *4 (D. Conn. Feb. 28, 2020) (internal quotation marks omitted). In fact, “prior instances of insurance misconduct offered to demonstrate a general business practice” must be not only specifically alleged but must also be “sufficiently similar to the allegations at issue to support” the conclusion of a general business practice. New England Sys., Inc. v. Citizens Ins. Co. of Am., No. 3:20-cv-01743 (JAM), 2021 WL 1978691, at *4 (D. Conn. May 17, 2021) (citing Mazzarella v. Amica Mut. Ins. Co., 774 F. App’x 14, 18 (2d Cir. 2019)). Thus, the generalized allegations that Ms. Klaneski presents here do not satisfy the standard for pleading a CUIPA/CUTPA claim.<sup>2</sup>

Likewise, under the “closer scrutiny” that courts apply to claims for punitive damages, such bare allegations are insufficient to satisfy the amount in controversy requirement. See Zahn,

<sup>2</sup> Connecticut Superior Courts have divided over the question of whether a bare allegation of a general business practice devoid of factual support is sufficient at the pleading stage under state law. Compare Prucker v. Am. Econ. Ins. Co., No. CV-18-6013630-S, 2019 WL 2880369, at *6 (Conn. Super. Ct. May 31, 2019) (noting “the absence of appellate authority on the subject” and siding with cases holding that “more than just a conclusory allegation of a general business practice is required to state a cause of action for unfair claims settlement practices”), with Venegas v. Horace Mann Ins. Co., No. NNH-CV-16-6061980, 2017 WL 2453115, at *3 (Conn. Super. Ct. May 9, 2017) (agreeing with “the line of cases holding that it is unnecessary to plead specific instances of ‘other’ wrongdoing in support of an allegation of a general business practice”). The cases adopting the more lenient view have been distinguished by courts in this District on the ground that they “applied the Connecticut pleading standard, rather than the standard announced in Iqbal and Twombly, which requires more than the bare conclusory allegations accepted by the state court.” Kim, 2015 WL 6675532, at *6 (internal quotation marks omitted). Even to the extent that Ms. Klaneski’s CUIPA/CUTPA claim might survive a motion to strike in Connecticut state court, her allegations cannot support a good faith representation that the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000, particularly under the “closer scrutiny” applied to punitive damages claims. See Zahn, 469 F.2d at 1034 n.1 (“[I]n computing jurisdictional amount, a claim for punitive damages is to be given closer scrutiny, and the trial judge accorded greater discretion, than a claim for actual damages.”).

469 F.2d at 1034 n.1 (“[T]he trial court is plainly not compelled to accept a claim of punitive damages, however, unwarranted, made for the purpose of conferring federal jurisdiction.”). The Second Circuit addressed a similar case in Pang v. Allstate Ins. Co., 173 F.3d 845 (2d Cir. 1999) (unpublished table decision), where the plaintiff sought to satisfy the amount in controversy requirement by asserting a claim for punitive damages against an insurer for allegedly engaging in unfair claim settlement practices under New York law. The court concluded that the plaintiff’s “conclusory allegation that ‘the fraudulent way defendant [handled] the present claim is indicative of a general practice’ is insufficient to show that the governing substantive law would permit him to recover punitive damages and survive Allstate’s motion to dismiss.”<sup>3</sup> Id. at *1. Here, as in Pang, Ms. Klaneski offers only conclusory allegations of a general business practice that would not survive a motion to dismiss and cannot support “a good faith claim for punitive damages.” Id.

Accordingly, because Ms. Klaneski’s claim for punitive damages under CUTPA cannot be used to satisfy the amount in controversy, Ms. Klaneski has not met her burden to establish diversity jurisdiction over this action.

C. Supplemental Jurisdiction

“[I]n any civil action of which the district courts have original jurisdiction, the district courts shall have supplemental jurisdiction over all other claims that are so related to claims in the action within such original jurisdiction that they form part of the same case or controversy under Article III of the United States Constitution.” 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a). “[D]istrict courts may decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over a claim,” however, if “the district court has dismissed all claims over which it has original jurisdiction.” Id. § 1367(c)(3).

<sup>3</sup> Connecticut law requires “wanton and malicious injury, evil motive and violence” to award punitive damages, Ulbrich, 310 Conn. at 446, while New York law similarly requires “a fraud evincing a high degree of moral turpitude and demonstrating such wanton dishonesty as to imply a criminal indifference to civil obligations,” Pang, 173 F.3d 845, at *1 (quoting Rocanova v. Equitable Life Assurance Soc’y of the U.S., 634 N.E.2d 940, 943 (N.Y. 1994)). And as Connecticut law requires evidence of a “general business practice” to establish a CUIPA violation, Conn. Gen. Stat. § 38a-816(6), New York law permits punitive damages only when the wrong is “aimed at the public generally,” i.e., “part of a pattern of similar, publicly directed misconduct,” Rocanova, 634 N.E.2d at 943–44.

The exercise of supplemental or pendant jurisdiction is a matter of discretion, not of right. See United Mine Workers v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 726 (1966). “Once a district court’s discretion is triggered under § 1367(c)(3), it balances the traditional ‘values of judicial economy, convenience, fairness, and comity’ in deciding whether to exercise jurisdiction.” Kolari v. N.Y.-Presbyterian Hosp., 455 F.3d 118, 122 (2d Cir. 2006) (quoting Carnegie-Mellon Univ. v. Cohill, 484 U.S. 343, 350 (1988)).

“[I]n the usual case in which all federal-law claims are eliminated before trial, the balance of factors . . . will point toward declining to exercise jurisdiction over the remaining state-law claims.” Id. But as the Second Circuit recently emphasized, “[t]he principle that the elimination of federal-law claims prior to trial generally points to declining to exercise supplemental jurisdiction ‘in the usual case’ clearly does not mean that the balance of the factors always points that way.” Catzin v. Thank You & Good Luck Corp., 899 F.3d 77, 86 (2d Cir. 2018). Thus, “[w]hen § 1367(c)(3) applies, the district court must still meaningfully balance the supplemental jurisdiction factors” of judicial economy, convenience, fairness, and comity before declining to exercise supplemental jurisdiction. Id.

As discussed above, the Court will exercise jurisdiction over Ms. Klaneski’s federal claims but will dismiss these claims under Rule 12(b)(6). The Court also may not exercise diversity jurisdiction over Ms. Klaneski’s remaining state law claims. Thus, the Court “has dismissed all claims over which it has original jurisdiction,” and it must decide whether to “decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction” over Ms. Klaneski’s state law claims. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c).

Here, after balancing the factors set forth in Gibbs and Cohill, the Court will decline to retain supplemental jurisdiction. When, “as here, the federal claims are eliminated in the early stages of litigation, courts should generally decline to exercise pendent jurisdiction over remaining state law claims.” Klein & Co. Futures v. Bd. of Trade of N.Y.C., 464 F.3d 255, 262 (2d Cir. 2006). Ms. Klaneski’s remaining claims—negligence, quantum meruit, promissory estoppel, breach of contract, breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, unjust enrichment, and violations of CUIPA, CUTPA, and state insurance regulations—raise quintessential questions of state law, and dismissal “will procure for the parties ‘a surer-footed reading of applicable law’” with respect to these claims. Id. at 263 n.5 (quoting Gibbs, 383 U.S. at 726). Finally, as in Klein & Co., the substantial number of remaining claims favors dismissal. See id. (emphasizing that “the eight remaining state law claims” would be more properly considered in state court).

Accordingly, the Court will not exercise supplemental jurisdiction over Ms. Klaneski’s remaining state law claims, and these claims will be dismissed without prejudice to re-filing in state court.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, State Farm’s motion to dismiss is GRANTED.

Ms. Klaneski’s claims under federal law are DISMISSED with prejudice for failure to state a claim.

Because the federal claims are dismissed and the Court does not have diversity jurisdiction over this action, the Court declines to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over Ms. Klaneski’s state law claims. These claims are DISMISSED without prejudice to re-filing in state court.

If Ms. Klaneski believes that the jurisdictional defects identified in this Ruling and Order can be cured, she must seek leave to file an Amended Complaint by August 4, 2023, or this action will be dismissed with prejudice.

SO ORDERED at Bridgeport, Connecticut, this 30th day of June, 2023.
