I support Israel completely / Je soutiens Israël sans aucune réserve

I feel that generally in life people should speak up and speak out about things that are important to them. I am not Jewish, in fact I'm Episcopalian (at least nominally). However, I want to go on record as saying that I support Israel with passion. I spent months researching the issue of Palestine, because that's my nature. What I discovered is what Israel knows, but the world ignores. There are no 'Palestinians,' merely a variety of different peoples associated with different religious and tribal factions in Jordan and Syria (chiefly). There were few Palestinians when the Zionists first began colonizing the barren land that would become Israel. From the moment of their creation, in which they were devastated by trickery on the part of the British, they were left vulnerable and exposed and in the midst of hostile populations. The West Bank was part of the Kingdom of Jordan, with the assumption that the residents were Jordanians. When the Arab states attacked Israel in 1967, Israel pushed back ... with the intention of creating defensible borders and a viable border. In any event, in the process of research I fell in love with Israel and its people. I want to visit Tel Aviv. Israelis are tough, fair, democratic and Western. So, understand this: Israel is one of my causes. It need not be yours, but it is mine. / Je pense que généralement dans la vie les gens devraient prendre la parole et parler de choses qui sont importantes pour eux. Je ne suis pas juif, en fait, je suis épiscopalien (au moins théoriquement). Cependant, j'aimerais noter ici que je soutiens Israël avec passion. J'ai passé des mois des recherches sur la question de la Palestine, parce que c'est ma nature. Ce que j'ai découvert ce que Israël sait, mais le monde ignore. Il n'y a pas de «Palestiniens», simplement une variété de peuples différents associés à différentes factions religieuses et tribales en Jordanie et en Syrie (principalement). Il y avait peu de Palestiniens lorsque les premiers sionistes ont commencé à coloniser la terre aride qui allait devenir Israël. À partir du moment de leur création, dans lequel ils ont été dévastés par une ruse par la part des Britanniques, ils ont été laissés vulnérables et exposés, et au milieu de populations hostiles. La Cisjordanie faisait partie du Royaume de Jordanie, avec l'hypothèse que les résidents étaient des Jordaniens. Lorsque les États arabes ont attaqué Israël en 1967, Israël repoussé ... avec l'intention de créer des frontières défendables et une bordure viable. En tout état de cause, dans le processus de la recherche je suis tombé en amour avec Israël et ses habitants. Je veux y visiter Tel-Aviv. Israéliens sont durs, justes, démocratiques et de l'Ouest dans leur orientation. Donc, comprenez ceci: Israël est l'un de mes causes. Il ne doit pas être la vôtre, mais c'est la mienne.

Israel shares our values ... we are family.

Although I was an English teacher and I'm a writer, I firmly believe that a picture is worth a thousand words. A group of us were having a chat today and we ended up talking about where each of us was on 9/11 and what we'd been doing ... and what we thought as we sat glued to the television. Someone said that he remembered how disgusted he was to see Palestinians dancing in the streets, thousands of them, with delight and happiness over the loss of so many innocent people. I said that it was the same for me, I remember being completely disgusted by the reaction of Palestinians and others, who did festive dancing over American deaths. At the same time, we all remembered the images of people crying in the streets of Tel Aviv and Jerusalem. We all came to the same conclusion: if we have to choose (and we do) we choose Israel. They have our same value structure, they really are our cousins. We need to protect and defend them from the people who would do the same festive dancing with their kalashnikovs over Israeli deaths. This is not to say that I don't want to hear what reasonable Palestinians have to say about peace, but I can't say that I care about them very much ... sorry, just being honest. As far as I'm concerned they're Jordanians. They were part of the Kingdom of Jordan until 1967, and should still be in my opinion. Why do they need a separate state? They already have one. However, all I know is that when push comes to shove, my support goes every time and always will to the Israelis ... who cried over our great loss, not to the people who celebrated it!
