Would you please explain to me why Eric, who is not a supervisor, is organizing training and doling out assignments to his colleagues?

Arabella and Gene, I wanted to forward this to you because I found this email to be quite inappropriate. I have done numerous training sessions on these topics, both inside and outside of the office. I am troubled that there is a training "tradition" in this office that excludes me from participating in training sessions with training new attorneys. This is particularly disturbing because I am a senior attorney and have the most experience of anyone in the office with disposition and post-disposition matters.

I am also interested in whether Eric Gallun was officially put in charge of training.

Dave is absolutely intent upon doing that session. Its some sort of tradition now or something. He specifically asked to do that one.

But Mary, maybe you can do one on meeting etiquette??

I would be happy to talk to Rachel about disposition and post-disposition matters.

Though I have been completely lax in creating a formal training schedule for Rachel, I would now like to try to put some sessions together. The following attorneys have already committed their time:

Shelly-Prepping a case

Andy-How to try a drug case (including DEA-7s, drug experts, etc.,)

Sharon-How to try a gun case (including test-fires, gun certs., etc.,)

Barbara-Compulsory school attendance cases and Drug Court overview

I expect each of the above attorneys to set a specific time with Rachel over the next two weeks. Please inform me once the training has been completed.

Ally has already done a session with Rachel on prepping cases. I expect to do a session with Rachel on plea offers.

If anyone else traditionally gives a training session or has an idea for an hour of training, please respond to this email. Thanks.
