

occurred in the course of performing judicial functions, judicial immunity protects them from suit. See id.; Mirales v. Waco, 502 U.S. 9, 11 (1991) (per curiam) (noting that “judicial immunity is an immunity from suit, not just from ultimate assessment of damages,” and that it “is not overcome by allegations of bad faith or malice”).

An Order consistent with this Memorandum Opinion is issued separately.
