More Than Sexy: Conundrums Faced by Feminists in Porn

August 3 @ 9:00 am - 10:30 am

How do you deal with sexism, when it's your job to be sexy? How do feminists in porn deal with issues around propagating harmful stereotypes, unhealthy power dynamics, and body image? What do women in porn believe are their most effective tools for empowering themselves and others, and where are they still falling short? Hear personal narratives from different parts of the porn industry as they discuss their experiences of sexism and sexual liberation.

Sex Work and Disability: Shifting the Focus to Disabled Sex Workers

August 3 @ 10:45 am - 12:15 pm

When we talk about sex work and disability, we almost always discuss the disabled people (mostly men) who pay for sex workers' services. It is rare that we discuss disabled sex workers or even consider their existence.

Using unpublished first-hand accounts from the above-mentioned study as well as published first-person memoir, this session will shift the focus of conversations about sex work and disability to disabled people who trade sex, thereby shifting the dialogue from consumers' desires to workers' rights. The session will address how the trope of disabled client-abled worker came to be and why it is a harmful one. The core topics will be the multidirectional relationship between disability and trading sex; the intersectional stigmas disabled sex workers of different races, genders, and sexualities face; and the numerous difficulties they navigate in accessing housing, healthcare, education and alternative employment.

Finally, the session will present talking points about sex work and disability that attendees can take into their own spaces and communities, as well as strategies for advocacy and direct action in support of disabled sex workers in various spaces. For example, we will discuss how to advocate against university policies that prohibit students from doing sex work (a particularly attractive option for student-workers whose disabilities include symptoms like fatigue) and how to create accessible classroom environments for disabled students, sex working students, and those at the intersection— even if you're a fellow student.

Capitalism is Not Consensual: Sex Work and the Shaky Foundations of Consent

August 3 @ 2:45 pm - 4:15 pm

This session will look at the history of consent, rape-able bodies, and how the modern concepts of sexual consent have been built upon structures rooted in property, capitalism and criminalization, and how they have consistently marginalized women of color, LGBTQ communities and criminalized populations. As we often center the conversation on consent along the lines of victim/perpetrator, rarely we questioned how those notions are constructed, and what that means for a common understanding of what justice looks like. This presentation will begin in the historical context about concepts of who has been allowed to declare consent for access to their bodies, briefly touching on the different ways those boundaries were violated. Moving briefly through the history, which includes more communities than those selling sex, the modern construct will focus on the sex trade, and how sex workers complicate the current narratives of consent, sexual violence and criminal-justice-focused responses. Finally, participants will look at elements of restorative justice and alternative models to see how communities are inverting these paradigms to better serve their healing. Participants will be asked to break into small groups to discuss how these concepts manifest in their own experiences, and how to integrate a broader understanding of justice into their communities.

Criminalization of Sex Work is a Human Rights Violation and a Labor Rights Concern

August 3 @ 4:30 pm - 6:00 pm

This session will discuss the various ways sex workers are criminalized under both prostitution and sex trafficking legislation and the outcomes it has for the every day lives of those who engage in sex work. This presentation directly addresses the rights to housing, health care, safety, and dignity for sex workers regardless of race, class, substance use, and sexual or gender orientation. This session will inform on the better practices and policies for both sex workers and sex trafficking victims and explain the benefits of a future in which sex workers may lead the fight against sex trafficking instead of becoming its casual victims.

Avoiding Harm When You Need an Ambulance

August 4 @ 10:45 am - 12:15 pm

Calling 911 in an emergency is especially perilous for sex workers who can face arrest and prosecution if they come into contact with Police. Yet few, if any, would consider not calling for aid if anyone needed it. This places sex workers in the dilemma of either protecting themselves or helping others. We will discuss what calling 911 means, and how to navigate the process while protecting yourself and your privacy.
