EMPLOYMENT

October 2000-April 2008

(Permanent, October 2000 to April 2005; part-time until April 2008)

Managing Editor of Minerva magazine, the international review of ancient art and archaeology. Responsible for the daily management of a team of seven people in the UK and USA from commissions to design, copy-editing, proofreading, pre-press, advertising and accounts. Achievements include:

- Developing Minerva from a specialist magazine for antiquities collectors into a popular cultural product by commissioning thematically diverse copy from journalists, university lecturers, museum curators and heritage workers, making the past relevant to the present.
- Transforming the magazine from a mixed colour/black and white product into a full glossy magazine printed on silk paper.
- Appointment of a new editorial advisory board and set of correspondents worldwide to keep the magazine at the cutting-edge of news, research and exhibition reportage.
- Through the formulation of press releases publicising exclusives, picked up by national newspapers like The Times, the magazine's reputation and readership expanded into 40 countries worldwide.
- Personal contribution of over 200 editorials, news and exhibition reports, articles and book reviews.
- Initiating, designing and managing a magazine website (www.minervamagazine.com).
- Expanded visibility of Minerva beyond the high street to major museums, such as the Ashmolean, Fitzwilliam, Louvre, Bible Lands Museum Jerusalem, and key special exhibition sites, such as 'Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs' at the O2 Centre.

April 2005-Present

Writer. Author of God's Gold. Quest for the Lost Temple Treasure of Jerusalem published by John Murray, London (October 2006) and by HarperCollins, USA (June 2007). Russian, Polish, Brazilian and Czechoslovakian translation rights sold.

July 2007-Present

Television consultancy. Originator and consultant for filming of God's Gold for two episodes of the Digging for the Truth series for the History Channel (July/August 2007). Talking head for Megastructures of the Deep, History Channel (December 2007). Originator and consultant for Finding Noah, Discovery Channel USA (February/March 2008).

December 2007

Design and editorial for the production of Eyesus Hintsä: An Ethiopian Journey through Landscape and Time by Louise Schofield.

December 2006-December 2007

Scientific consultant on a (publicly undisclosed) Spanish Armada shipwreck project.

2003-2004

Series Consultant for an encyclopaedia of underwater archaeology produced by Periplus Publishing London Ltd. Commissioner and editor of Barbarian Seas – Late Rome to Islam and Vikings: Conquerors, Traders and Pirates.

1996-2004

Author of five academic and coffee-table books, including Shipwreck Archaeology of the Holy Land (Duckworth, 2004). Author of 27 scientific articles on ancient heritage, shipwrecks and the archaeology of the Near East.

June 2002-March 2003

Part-time consultant for the deep-ocean marine archaeology company Odyssey Marine Exploration.

April 2000

Editorial assistant for Dr Bryan Ward-Perkins, Trinity College Oxford, in production of the archaeology journal Papers of the British School at Rome.

May 1999

Co-ordinator of a conference at the University of Oxford on 'Economy and Exchange in the East Mediterranean in Late Antiquity'. Sean edited the proceedings into a book published through Oxbow, Oxford.

1993-2007

Contributing author to magazines and newspapers, including Times Higher Education Supplement, History Today, Jerusalem Post, Jewish Quarterly, Minerva, Eretz (Israeli national geographical magazine) and Europa Nostra.

1987-2003

Extensive experience setting up, directing, consulting on and publishing archaeological and heritage projects, including:

1. May 2003 – co-director of survey of the endangered heritage of coastal Montenegro on behalf of the Institute of World Archaeology, University of East Anglia.
2. October 1999 – director of the excavation of a 6th-century AD shipwreck in the ancient port of Dor, Israel (Somerville College, University of Oxford).
3. 1994-97 – ancient pottery specialist for international projects for Bar-Ilan University, Israel, Rutgers University, Newark, USA, Centre National de Recherche Scientifique, France, and the Israel Antiquities Authority.
4. September/October 1994 – supervisor the Palestine Exploration Fund in the Landscape Archaeology Project at Dor, Israel. Patterns in landscape change were recorded over 10 square km.
5. April 1991-December 1992 – founder and co-director of the Dor Maritime Archaeology Project. Discovery and documentation of nine shipwrecks (1200 BC to AD 1850), the largest concentration in the eastern Mediterranean. The results are fully published.
6. June/July 1990 – supervisor in a regional landscape study on the island of Anglesey, Wales. Hundreds of test-pits were cut around two Neolithic megalithic tombs to investigate artefact density patterns. Project directed by Dr. Mark Edmunds of Cambridge University and Dr. Julian Thomas from Lampeter, University of Wales.
7. 1987-1992 (part-time in summers and full-time April 1991-June 1992) – staff member at the Centre of Nautical and Regional Archaeology, Israel. The Centre was established in 1976 as the base of the marine unit of the Israel Department of Antiquities and functions as a regional museum. It protects, preserves and documents the regional cultural heritage on land and in the sea to create a popular bridge between academia and the general public. Duties undertaken ranged from presenting guided tours to participating in underwater surveys, producing an educational film about the region's ancient cultures, artefact restoration and documentation, and co-directing excavations and surveys on land.
8. June/July 1988 – site assistant in the excavation of a Neolithic megalithic tomb at Banc Rhosgoch Fach, Wales. Directed by Dr. Julian Thomas from Lampeter, the University of Wales.

9. September 1987 – excavation of a medieval waterfront at Jennings' Wharf, Windsor, for the Trust for Wessex Archaeology.
