HOW TO CAPTURE LOW-RISK PROFITS FROM THE NEW BULL MARKET

Investors have better investment choices for this new bull market than ever before. The 1995-2000 bull market was more than half over before most investors realized they should have owned the small-cap stocks and technology shares. Investors should not make the mistake of listening to stock analysts this time around.

The conventional wisdom on Wall Street tells investors that since the technology and small-cap stocks led the last bull market, you had better look elsewhere this time.

This is very simply not true! Nor do you need a stock analyst earning $20 million annually to tell you where to invest or, most likely, lead you down a dark alley for a haircut. Many investors are still on the sidelines because the gloom and doomers are warning investors that this new bull market is nothing more than a bear market rally. Let's examine the easiest test for a bull market:

The time-tested Dow Theory says a bull market is underway if the Dow Transportation Average is also rising in support of a rising Dow Industrial Average.

As we go to press, the Dow Industrial Average is up 25 percent since the 3/12/03 market bottom. More importantly, the transportation sector is soaring! The Dow Transportation Index is up 40 percent since the 3/12/03 market bottom. The rising prices of the transportation stocks is welcome proof that economic activity is accelerating. FedEx, UPS and the freight companies are reporting rising sales and earnings.

The Wall Street pros know that a booming transportation/freight industry is a reliable early warning indicator of an economic recovery.

With this knowledge, the Smart Money has been pushing stock prices higher on heavy volume during the final hour of trading. Another quick way to confirm or deny a bull market is to use Cabot's Two Second Indicator: the daily new highs and new lows. For example, when the Wall Street pros and the institutional money managers came back to work after Labor Day, they were buying aggressively.

On Tuesday, September 2, 941 stocks posted new 52-week highs, while only 18 stocks posted new 52-week lows.

The next day, 1,135 stocks posted new highs on volume of almost four billion shares. Only 17 stocks posted new lows. As long as daily new-lows stay below 40, stock prices will be rising and you should be fully invested. But where can you achieve the most reliable, low-risk profits from this new bull market? At the close of trading each day, I monitor the daily performance of certain, specific stock market indices. Study the performance of these indices for a moment:

	% Gain*
Dow Industrial Index	25%
S&P 500	26%
Nasdaq Composite	45%
Russell 2000 Small-Cap Index	46%
Dow Jones Wireless Index	51%
Dow Jones Internet Index	76%

EXHIBIT B

NDL-074-001447

Notice the lagging performance of the Dow 30 Industrial stocks. These are large, mature companies, some with substantial manufacturing facilities in China, Asia and/or India. Notice the lagging performance of the 500 largest industrial companies in the S&P 500 Index.

Next, notice the above average performance of the Nasdaq Composite is up 45 percent.

These smaller Nasdaq companies have far better sales and earnings because they are, for the most part, newer companies with the latest technologies, and exciting new products in nano-technology, virtual reality and, of course, wireless, which is experiencing booming worldwide sales and earnings from new product offerings. Next, notice the impressive performance of the 2000 small-cap stocks in the Russell 2000 Small-Cap Index, up 46 percent.

Finally, notice the impressive year-to-date performance of the companies in the Dow Jones Wireless Index, up 51 percent and the Dow Jones Internet Index, up 76 percent.

This powerful new bull market is being led by the small-cap technology stocks. Technology is the future of this country, as it will be difficult to stop the flow of manufacturing jobs to China and Asia. Therefore, owning mutual funds that duplicate and leverage the performance of these soaring small-cap technology stocks is a very profitable investment strategy.

The profitable performance of these indices since the 3/12/03 market bottom is far better than the volatile performance of the technology sector during the 1995-2000 bull market.

I see two advantages, and both will help you make far more money during this new bull market: 1) Stock analysts and brokerage companies cannot manipulate an entire stock index. Do you remember the famous stock analyst who was told to recommend a stock so his company could capture billions in investment banking fees? After doing so, he sent an email to a friend and told him, "This company is a piece of garbage!"

2) You can leverage your profits (150 percent to 200 percent) from these investments as the bull market gains momentum.

I have summarized Ten Index Mutual Funds, along with their investment objective and the year-to-date performance since 3/12/03. Yes, you can even beat these performances by purchasing our recommended stocks. But why not try both strategies. The bull market just began. The biggest profits are still ahead. The rapidly growing small and mid-cap stocks are still undervalued with earnings about to explode in the second-half.

FIDELITY SELECT FUNDS ARE OUTPERFORMING THE STOCK MARKET

Everyday, at the close of the market, I review the performance of the 42 Fidelity Select Mutual Funds. I then make a list of the top seven performing funds to determine which sectors are leading the market. This daily exercise will tell you: 1) which five sector funds to invest in, and 2) which sectors to choose stocks from.

Most of the top performing stocks are from the top five performing sectors.

I am republishing charts of the top seven sector funds which are currently outperforming the Dow Industrial Average (up 25 percent since the 3/12/03 market bottom). You should own any five of the seven Fidelity Sector funds shown on pages 8, 9 and 10. This strategy should enable you to more than double your portfolio every three years.

AMERITRADE HOLDING CORPORATION (NASDAQ - AMTD)

Ameritrade Holding Corporation (NASDAQ: AMTD) is a provider of securities brokerage services and technology-based financial services to retail investors and business partners, predominantly via the Internet.

Ameritrade also provides trading execution and clearing services for its own broker-dealer operations and for unaffiliated broker-dealers through the company's subsidiaries. Currently serving over three million investors, Ameritrade is a leader in the online brokerage business.

The company has two principal business units, a Private Client Division and an Institutional Client Division. Both divisions provide multiple service offerings tailored to specific clients and their respective investing and trading preferences.

The Private Client Division provides brokerage services directly to individual investors, as well as tiered levels of products and services to meet the needs and investing patterns of individual investors, financial institutions and corporations. The private client offerings include Ameritrade, Ameritrade Plus, and Freetrade.Com.

The Institutional Client Division provides clearing services, brokerage capabilities and advisor tools as co-branded or private-label products to business partners and their customers. Through this division, Ameritrade seeks to grow its account base and expand revenues by targeting specific segments of the institutional client market with relevant products and services, as well as by leveraging its core competencies of trade execution, technology, and client service.

Ameritrade has received as an overall four-star rating, and a top rating for "Ease of Use" and "Research Amenities" on the Barron's 2003 Online Broker Survey, and is a recent recipient of Forbes magazine's annual "Best of the Web" honors.

Over the past four quarters, Ameritrade has realized earnings growth of 300%, 100%, 25%, and 300% on sales increases of 88%, 39%, 67% and 24%, respectively. The company is expecting earnings of $0.30 per share this year, an increase of 147% from last year, while the industry is expecting an increase of 6%. Long-term earnings growth is expected to average 15% annually.

APPLIED FILMS CORPORATION (NASDAQ - AFCO)

Applied Films Corporation (NASDAQ: AFCO) is a leading provider of thin film deposition equipment to industries that produce flat panel displays (FPDs); architectural, automotive and solar glass; and consumer electronics and products packaging. The company has also developed a barrier coating solution technology for the plastic beverage bottle industry.

Applied Films' deposition systems are used to deposit thin films that enhance the characteristics of glass, plastic, paper, foil, or other items. These thin films provide conductive, electronic, reflective, filter, and barrier properties that are critical elements of Applied Films' customers' products. The company also processes and sells thin film coated glass to the FPD industry.

Applied Films has a large, installed base of systems for the FPD, the architectural and automotive glass markets, and the consumer products packaging and electronics markets. It is the world's largest volume supplier for FPDs.

The company is focusing its research and development efforts on three high-growth markets: solar cell, organic light emitting diodes (OLEDs), and barrier coated polyethylene terephthalate (PET) bottles. Applied Films has installed equipment in the OLED, solar cell and coated PET bottle markets, and is working with its strategic partners to develop additional technologies in these areas.

Over the past two quarters, Applied Films has realized earnings growth of 2,800%, and 800% on sales increases of 76% and 48%, respectively. The company is expecting earnings of $0.96 per share this year, an increase of 135% from last year, while the industry is expecting an increase of 15%. Long-term earnings growth is expected to average 14% annually.

INVESTMENT SUMMARY

The Bottom Line - What To Do Now

U.S. STOCK MARKET: The best place to be! Choose index mutual funds, Fidelity Select funds, purchase our recommended stocks, or diversify with all three strategies. Third quarter S&P 500 profits are expected to rise twenty percent from last year. Third quarter GDP is now estimated at six percent.

I expect stock prices to rise dramatically between now and year-end. Stocks are far better investments now than bonds.

Many subscribers are concerned that the rising federal deficit will force interest rates higher. There is no historic evidence to support that claim. The federal deficit rose to record levels under President Reagan as he rebuilt the military during the Cold War. Interest rates fell relentlessly during the Reagan years. The same people are now claiming the Bush tax cut will not accelerate economic growth.

We know that claim is also false. A great boom is on the way! You should be fully invested. The small and mid-cap stocks are undervalued with earnings about to explode!

Stop-Loss Rules: If a recommended stock drops 8% from your entry point, sell it. Once a stock has gained 5% to 10%, do not allow your gain to turn into a loss. Once a stock is up over 10%, always use a 10% trailing stop-loss as your exit guideline. (Note: A 10% trailing stop-loss is when a stock falls back 10% from its last new high.)
 It is important to note that all Strong Buy, Buy, Hold, and Sell recommendations are based upon the stop-loss from our original recommended entry price. If you purchase a stock at a different price or add to an already existing position, then your stop-loss will be different from The Wall Street Digest's stop-loss.
