Dear Mr. Barnett:

Thank you. Quite a provocative document. I've never seen a notice of intent to object. I usually just plunged ahead and objected. I look forward to reading the ways in which I've been inappropriate, inaccurate and misleading. I'll approach it with an open mind, and if I come to agree with those characterizations, I'll promptly redress any improprieties, inaccuracies or misdirections of which I'm guilty. I attach a courtesy red line copy of my soon-to-be filed correction of my third report. On careful re-reading, I found a number of typos and poor constructions, so I'm addressing them promptly. Inappropriate for an old English major and hack journalist, to be sure, but not especially inaccurate or misleading.

Special Master Ball --

Bob Pass asked me to send you a courtesy copy of the attached Notice of Intent to File that was filed earlier this evening.

Thanks.
