I visit other forums and I see there's a growing complaint towards HF users. They are seen as spammers.

Lots of reposts, fake files, low quality uploads and disregard for the rules are amongst the complaints.

I wouldn't be surprised if HF begins to be banned due to users abuse.

If the main boards/forums beging to ban it, HF will end up as a host file service for bloggers and small boards.

HF is such a fine service and it is a shame to see that its users may kill it.

Where have you seen that HF is called a scammer? From what i think, u join only to post this so u might be working for a competitor host and trying to bring hotfile down... hotfile always pays, there has been no payment issues till now..

Did you read what I said?. I said HF users.
If you read carefully you'll see I said:

Quote:

HF is such a fine service and it is a shame to see that its users may kill it.

I have nothing to complain about HF. The problem is in its members. Too many spammers, flooding the boards with useless stuff to make money and the members in those boards have started complaining about the bad stuff that it is posted.
HF is a fine cash host and people shouldn't abuse it.

I will type one very big board and the other (aslo famous but smaller then the first one), where hotfile is banned.

1st:

The main reason for hotfile start being banned is because lot of ppl who share hotfile links, doing that in a way they really irritate every community. There use few tools that are available to 'remotely' share posts on 100s of boards just by one click. That's why you see lot of started topics with only single post inside. If boards could ban those users, that would be great. But they can't do it so easily.
You guys have to EARN your earnings. Not just put lot of links in your tools, and then just click the button and share. That's why boards started to ban hotfile links. I also don't like when I see 1000 of single posted topics.

I make my way to the first forum page by posting good stuff in one single topic, and that way I'm bumping myself. Then some as*hole comes in and post 100 of single threaded posts, and shoot me back on.....let's say10th page just in few minutes.

El Llanero

Jun 26th 2009, 6:22 am

Didn't know it was already banned in some places!. But it comes as no surprise.

where they complain? they dont complain about other host? come one!
rapidshare user dont post stuff? and other?

foru*ophilia they never allow hotfile so its not banned its just not on allowed list since start rapidshare gives 2euro per premium (have 8 already) and thats why i started spamming boards? nah!

banning will not help,people will switch to other and other well, I had the same experience as you. nobody could send me money with paypal. When some of my friends tried to send me money, they say they faced with message "this recipient is from  country and cannot receive money from other paypal members. This recipient can only spend money from his/her credit or debit card" I registered another paypal address by stating that I am from other country. i hope your country is not also blocked as mine :)

IAAL* : What Peer-to-Peer Developers Need to Know about Copyright Law

by Fred von Lohmann
Senior Intellectual Property Attorney
Electronic Frontier Foundation
fred@eff.org

v. 5.0, January 2006

I. What this is, and who should read it.

The future of peer-to-peer file-sharing is entwined, for better or worse, with copyright law. Copyright owners have already targeted not only the makers of file-sharing clients like Napster, Scour, Audiogalaxy, Aimster and Kazaa, and Morpheus, but also companies that provide products that rely on or add value to public P2P networks, such as MP3Board.com, which provided a web-based search interface for the gnutella network. The U.S. Supreme Court in MGM v. Grokster addressed some, but by no means all, of the copyright law issues that may confront P2P developers and other technologists in the future.

If these courtroom skirmishes yield any lesson for P2P developers, it is that a legal strategy needs to be in place early, preferably at the beginning of development, rather than bolted on at the end.

This piece is meant as a general explanation of the U.S. copyright law principles most relevant to P2P file-sharing technologies. It is aimed primarily at:

- Developers of core P2P file-sharing technology, such as the underlying protocols, platform tools, and specific client implementations; and
- Developers of ancillary services that depend upon or add value to P2P file-sharing networks, such as providers of search, security, metadata aggregation, and other services.

The following discussion is meant as a general introduction, and thus glosses over many of copyright law's more subtle nuances. It is aimed not at giving you all the answers, but rather at allowing you to recognize the right questions to ask.

What this is not: The following discussion focuses only on U.S. copyright law, and does not address any issues that may arise under non-U.S. law. While non-copyright principles may also be mentioned, this discussion does not attempt to examine other legal principles that might apply to P2P file-sharing, including patent, trademark, trade secret, or unfair competition. Nothing contained herein constitutes legal advice—please discuss your individual situation with your own attorney.

II. Overview

This paper is divided into four sections:

* Acronym for “I am a lawyer,” to distinguish from the common “IANAL” (“I am not a lawyer”) that appears on Slashdot and other online forums. This white paper was originally titled “IAAL: Peer-to-Peer File Sharing and Copyright Law after Napster.”

- An introduction to basic copyright concepts and terminology, including the three most relevant forms of copyright liability for P2P developers—contributory infringement, vicarious liability, and inducement.
- A review of the chief P2P cases decided to date—Napster, Aimster, and Grokster.
- An overview of the chief defenses that may be available to P2P developers.
- Ten specific things P2P developers can do that may reduce the risk of copyright infringement liability.

III. Copyright basics and the intersection with P2P file sharing.

Copyright law applies to virtually every form of expression that can be captured (or, to use the copyright term of art, “fixed”) in a tangible medium, such as on paper, film, magnetic tape, hard drive, optical media, or (arguably) in RAM. Songs, books, photographs, software, and movies are all familiar examples of copyrighted works. Copyright law reserves certain rights exclusively to the owner of the copyright, including the rights to reproduce, distribute, and publicly perform the work.

The nature of file-sharing technology inevitably implicates copyright law. First, since most digital files are “fixed” for purposes of copyright law (whether on a hard drive, CD, or possibly in RAM), the files being shared generally qualify as copyrighted works. Second, the transmission of a file from one person to another generally results in a reproduction. Copyright owners have also argued that digital transmissions can qualify as a distribution, and possibly a public performance (in the world of copyright law, “public performance” may include the act of transmitting a copyrighted work).

Thus, to a copyright lawyer, every reproduction, distribution, and public performance requires an explanation, and thus file-sharing seems suspicious from the outset.

A. The end-users: “direct” infringement.

For the individuals who are sharing files, the question becomes whether all of these reproductions, distributions, and public performances are authorized by the copyright owner or otherwise permitted under copyright law (as “fair use,” for example). So, if the files you are sharing with your friends are videos you took of your vacation, you are the copyright owner and have presumably authorized the reproduction, distribution, and performance of the videos.

However, if you are sharing MP3’s of Metallica’s greatest hits, or disc images of the latest Microsoft Office install CD, the issue becomes more complicated. In that case, assuming that the copyright owner has not authorized the activity, the question of copyright infringement will depend whether you can qualify for any of the limited exceptions to the copyright owner’s exclusive rights. If not, you’re what copyright lawyers call a “direct infringer”—you have directly violated one or more of the copyright owner’s exclusive rights.

In a widely-used public P2P file-sharing environment, it is a virtual certainty that at least some end-users are engaged in infringing activity (unless the application is specifically designed not to function as a general purpose networking tool, but instead to permit only certain “authorized” files to be shared). When the major record labels and music publishers decided to sue Napster, for example, it was not difficult for them to locate a large number of Napster users who were sharing copyrighted music without authorization.

B. The P2P tool maker: secondary infringement.

But what does this have to do with those who develop and distribute peer-to-peer file-sharing tools? After all, in a pure P2P file-sharing system, the vendor of the file-sharing tool has no direct involvement in the copying or transmission of the files being shared. These activities are handled directly between end-users.

Copyright law, however, can sometimes reach beyond the direct infringer to those who were only indirectly involved in the infringing activity. As in many other areas of the law (think of the “wheel man” in a stick up, or supplying a gun to someone you know is going to commit a crime), copyright law will sometimes hold one individual accountable for the actions of another. So, for example, if a swap meet owner rents space to a vendor with the knowledge that the vendor sells counterfeit CDs, the swap meet owner can be held liable for infringement alongside the vendor.

Under copyright law, this indirect, or “secondary,” liability can take three distinct forms: inducement, contributory infringement and vicarious liability.

1. Inducement.

In its June 2005 ruling in MGM v. Grokster, 125 S.Ct. 2764 (2005), the Supreme Court announced a new form of secondary liability, which it described this way:

“[O]ne who distributes a device with the object of promoting its use to infringe copyright, as shown by clear expression or other affirmative steps taken to foster infringement, is liable for the resulting acts of infringement by third parties.”

In other words, in order to prevail on an inducement theory, a copyright owner must prove each of the following elements:

- Direct Infringement: There has been a direct infringement by someone.
- Affirmative Act: The accused inducer has made statements or taken other active steps directed at encouraging infringing uses. Examples of affirmative steps may include advertising a product for infringing uses, instructing users how to infringe (including when providing customer support), or anything else that “entices or persuades” a user to commit infringement. It can also include promotional efforts aimed at deliberately attracting infringers to use your product (e.g., trying to attract the users of the old Napster service).
- Intent: The accused inducer intended to promote copyright infringement. Courts generally allow intent to be shown by circumstantial evidence, which means that copyright owners will argue that almost anything could be relevant to establishing what the defendant intended. For example, copyright owners may point to how a company makes money, whether it could have modified its software to reduce infringing uses, and whether it was trying to attract infringers as users. As part of the litigation process known as “discovery,” copyright owners may be entitled to search through company and individual emails and other documents, as well as interview potential witnesses under oath, in order to develop evidence of intent.

2. Contributory infringement.

Contributory infringement is similar to “aiding and abetting” liability: one who knowingly contributes to another’s infringement may be held accountable. Or, as the courts have put it, “one who, with knowledge of the infringing activity, induces, causes, or materially contributes to the infringing conduct of another, may be held liable as a contributory infringer.”¹

So, in order to prevail on a contributory infringement theory, a copyright owner must prove each of the following elements:

- Direct Infringement: There has been a direct infringement by someone.
- Knowledge: The accused contributory infringer knew of the underlying direct infringement. This element can be satisfied by showing either that the contributory infringer actually knew about the infringing activity, or that he reasonably should have known given all the facts and circumstances. At a minimum, however, the contributory infringer must have some specific information about infringing activity—the mere fact that the system is capable of being used for infringement, by itself, is not enough.
- Material Contribution: The accused contributory infringer caused or materially contributed to the underlying direct infringement. Merely providing the “site and facilities” that make the direct infringement possible can be enough. Copyright owners have argued that simply providing software or a device that makes infringement possible is “material contribution.”

Holding technology developers responsible for the unlawful acts of end-users obviously can impose a crushing legal burden on those who make general-purpose tools. Fortunately, the Supreme Court has defined an outer limit to contributory infringement.

In Sony v. Universal City Studios, 464 U.S. 417 (1984), a case brought by the movie industry against the Sony Betamax VCR, the Supreme Court found that contributory infringement liability could not reach the manufacturer of a device that is “capable of substantial noninfringing use.” In that case, the Court found that the VCR was capable of several noninfringing uses, including the time-shifting of television broadcasts by home viewers. Rather than focusing on the proportion of the uses are noninfringing, the Supreme Court adopted a standard that asks whether the technology is “merely capable” of substantial noninfringing uses.

The “Betamax defense” has been under sustained legal attack in cases involving P2P technology. In the Napster case, for example, the court found that this defense, even if effective against a contributory infringement claim, will not protect a defendant from a vicarious liability claim (discussed below). In the Aimster case, the court suggested that the Betamax defense may require an evaluation of the proportion of infringing to noninfringing uses, contrary to language in the Supreme Court’s Sony ruling.

The Supreme Court in MGM v. Grokster did little to clarify the debates surrounding the Betamax defense. Instead, the Court based its ruling on an inducement theory and made it clear that the Betamax defense does not apply to inducement.

The heart of the debate, still unresolved, is whether the Betamax defense turns on a product's "capability" or "primary use." The entertainment industry continues to argue that anyone who continues to distribute a product, knowing that it is primarily used for infringement, is a contributory infringer, notwithstanding the Betamax defense. The technology industry disagrees, arguing that so long as your product is "merely capable" of substantial noninfringing uses, it does not matter what the proportion of infringing or noninfringing uses might turn out to be.

In short, the law surrounding the Betamax defense remains in flux, putting P2P developers (and all technologists) on unpredictable legal ground when it comes to contributory infringement.

3. Vicarious liability.

Vicarious liability is derived from the same legal principle that holds an employer responsible for the actions of its employees. Vicarious liability applies where a defendant has the right and ability to supervise the direct infringer and also has a direct financial interest in the infringer's activities.

Thus, in order to prevail on a vicarious liability theory, a copyright owner must prove each of the following:

- Direct Infringement: There has been a direct infringement by someone.
- Right and Ability to Control: The accused vicarious infringer had the right and ability to control or supervise the underlying direct infringement. This element does not necessarily set a high hurdle. For example, the Napster court found that the ability to terminate user accounts or block user access to the system was enough to constitute "control."
- Direct Financial Benefit: The accused vicarious infringer derived a "direct financial benefit" from the underlying direct infringement. In applying this rule, however, the courts have not insisted that the benefit be especially "direct" or "financial"—almost any benefit seems to be enough. For example, the Napster court found that "financial benefit exists where the availability of infringing material acts as a draw for customers" and the growing user base, in turn, makes the company more attractive to investors.

The nature of vicarious liability creates a strong incentive to monitor the conduct of your users. This stems from the fact that knowledge is not required for vicarious liability; a person can be vicariously liable even if she is completely unaware of the underlying infringing activity.

As a result, if you exercise control over your users and derive a benefit from their activities, you remain ignorant of their conduct at your own risk. In the words of the Napster court, "the right to police must be exercised to the fullest extent. Turning a blind eye to detectable acts of infringement for the sake of profit gives rise to liability." In addition, the court in Napster declared that the Betamax defense is not applicable to vicarious liability claims. Accordingly, if you have control over, and derive a financial benefit from, direct infringement, the existence of “substantial noninfringing uses” for your service is irrelevant (at least in the Ninth Circuit, which covers most of the western U.S., where Napster was decided).

The entertainment industry has argued that the failure to implement “filtering” technologies (i.e., technologies that are able to identify content as not authorized for sharing) should be enough to establish “control” for purposes of vicarious liability. In other words, if you could redesign your technology so as to control or reduce infringing uses, but fail to do so, you should be vicariously liable. No court has yet accepted this argument, although the Supreme Court in MGM v. Grokster noted that the failure to add filtering could be evidence of “intent” in connection with an inducement claim.

IV. Indirect liability and P2P file sharing: the cases so far.

As of August 2005, there have been three major court opinions that have applied indirect liability theories to companies that distribute P2P software:

A&M Records v. Napster, 239 F.3d 1004 (9th Cir. 2001)

In re Aimster Copyright Litigation, 334 F.3d 643 (7th Cir. 2003)

MGM v. Grokster, 125 S.Ct. 2764 (2005)

Unfortunately, these three cases are not entirely consistent in their analyses. The law continues to evolve, and other courts may further muddy the waters in the years to come.

A. The Napster case.

In the Napster case, the music industry plaintiffs admitted that Napster did not, itself, make or distribute any of their copyrighted works. Instead, they pressed contributory infringement and vicarious liability theories. Based on these theories, the plaintiffs convinced a federal district court to grant a preliminary injunction against Napster. The injunction was appealed and affirmed by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in February 2001 (Napster ultimately declared bankruptcy and was liquidated before any final ruling on liability).

Turning first to contributory infringement, the Ninth Circuit upheld the lower court’s findings:

- Direct Infringement: At least some Napster users are direct infringers, because they distributed and reproduced copyrighted music without authorization.
- Knowledge: Napster had actual knowledge of infringing activity, based on internal company emails and the list of 12,000 infringing files provided by the RIAA. Moreover, Napster should have known of the infringing activity, based on the recording industry experience and downloading habits of its executives and the appearance of well-known song titles in certain promotional screen shots used by Napster.
- Material Contribution: Napster provided the “site and facilities” for the directly infringing conduct of its users.
- Betamax* Defense Rejected: Although the court admitted that Napster was capable of substantial noninfringing uses, it ultimately found the Betamax defense inapplicable because Napster had actual knowledge of specific infringing material and failed to block access or remove the material. In the Ninth Circuit’s view, that was enough to overcome the Betamax defense.

The Ninth Circuit also endorsed the lower court's vicarious liability analysis:

- Direct Infringement: At least some Napster users are direct infringers, because they distributed and reproduced copyrighted music without authorization.
- Right and Ability to Control: Napster has the ability to control the infringing activity of its users because it retains the right to block a user's ability to access its system.
- Financial Benefit: Napster derived a financial benefit from the infringing activities of its users because this activity acted as a "draw" for customers, and a portion of Napster's value is derived from the size of its user base.

The Ninth Circuit concluded, however, that the lower court had not adequately considered the technological limits of the Napster system when crafting the preliminary injunction. In ordering the district court to revise its injunction, the Ninth Circuit spelled out some guiding principles. First, in order to prevent contributory infringement, Napster was required to take reasonable steps to prevent further sharing of music after receiving notice from a copyright owner that a particular recording is being shared on its system without authorization. Ultimately, Napster voluntarily implemented a number of filtering mechanisms (including file name filters and acoustic fingerprinting filters) intended to filter out works that were not approved for sharing. These filters were never accurate enough to satisfy the district court judge, and Napster ended up in bankruptcy before a trial could be held.

Second, in order to stave off vicarious liability, the Ninth Circuit declared that "Napster...should bear the burden of policing its system within the limits of the system." During the period until its bankruptcy, Napster and the plaintiffs bitterly disagreed about what these monitoring obligations entailed. At a minimum, Napster had the duty to terminate users who were identified as infringers. Beyond that, there was little agreement. The disagreement was never fully resolved by the court, since Napster was shut down while it worked on improving its filtering technologies.

B. The Aimster case.

In the Aimster case, the music industry plaintiffs made the same vicarious and contributory infringement claims that they did in the Napster case. They succeeded in obtaining a preliminary injunction that ultimately shut Aimster down pending the trial on the merits (like Napster, Aimster went bankrupt before a trial could occur). In June 2003, the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the preliminary injunction ruling.

In upholding the preliminary injunction, the appeals court relied solely on the contributory infringement claim. The court did not engage in the traditional contributory infringement analysis, instead engaging in a more general discussion of several relevant concepts, including the Betamax defense. In the end, the court upheld the injunction because Aimster had (1) failed to introduce any evidence of noninfringing uses and (2) had engaged in activities that demonstrated clear knowledge of infringing activities.

With respect to the issue of knowledge, the court focused on "tutorials" that specifically encouraged Aimster users to download popular copyrighted music. The court also was not impressed by the fact that Aimster network traffic was encrypted, allegedly making it impossible for Aimster to know exactly what files were being shared by individual end-users. In the eyes of the court, the steps taken by Aimster to avoid knowledge supported an inference of "willful blindness.” (This suggests that, at least in some courts, copyright owners may argue that you “knew” what your users were up to, even if encryption makes it impossible for you to monitor their activities; this makes the Betamax defense even more critical with respect to contributory infringement.)

Turning to the Betamax defense, the court concluded that Aimster had failed to introduce any evidence that the Aimster software had ever been used for anything other than infringing activity. This finding alone was enough to disqualify Aimster from relying on the Betamax defense (which requires a showing that the technology in question is at least capable of a substantial noninfringing use).

The court, however, went on to suggest that application of the Betamax defense requires a consideration of the proportion of the infringing to noninfringing uses. This is in direct conflict with language contained in the Supreme Court’s opinion in the Betamax case. The discussion of proportionality in the Aimster opinion is arguably not binding on any subsequent court, as the outcome in that case was determined by Aimster’s failure to introduce any evidence of noninfringing uses for its technology. In any event, the Aimster ruling simply underscores the continuing controversy over whether the proportion of infringing and noninfringing uses is relevant to the Betamax defense.

C. The Grokster case.

The MGM v. Grokster case involves three sets of defendants—the makers of the Kazaa, Morpheus and Grokster P2P file sharing software. Unlike the software at issue in the Napster and Aimster cases, the software here was decentralized in nature—once the software was downloaded and installed by a user, the software vendors had no ability to monitor or control what it was used for, nor did the software vendors maintain any central indexes or bootstrap servers. Two of the defendants, Grokster and StreamCast Networks, succeeded in getting the lawsuit as to at least some versions of their software thrown out, a ruling that was later affirmed by the appellate court, but reversed by the Supreme Court.

Although the entertainment industry plaintiffs originally argued that the defendants were liable for contributory infringement and vicarious liability, the Supreme Court in June 2005 found that there was enough evidence on inducement to justify a trial and thus reversed the lower courts. The Supreme Court did not resolve the contributory infringement or vicarious liability questions posed in the case, but sent those questions back for the lower courts to address.

As discussed above, the Supreme Court announced a new theory of copyright inducement liability:

“[O]ne who distributes a device with the object of promoting its use to infringe copyright, as shown by clear expression or other affirmative steps taken to foster infringement, is liable for the resulting acts of infringement by third parties.”

The Supreme Court began its analysis by stating that the Betamax defense, whatever its scope, does not apply to inducement claims. In the words of the Court, “where evidence goes beyond a product’s characteristics or the knowledge that it may be put to infringing uses, and shows statements or actions directed to promoting infringement, [the Betamax defense] will not preclude liability.” (In two concurring opinions, the Justices split 3-3 on their interpretation of the proper scope of the Betamax defense as applied to the traditional theories of contributory infringement and vicarious liability.)

According to the Supreme Court, inducement requires both an “affirmative act” and “intent” on the part of the defendants to foster infringing uses. The Court pointed to three things that it believed might constitute an “affirmative act” for inducement purposes:

- Advertisements aimed at attracting Napster users to use defendants’ OpenNap servers (an earlier technology that pre-dated the decentralized P2P software distributed later);
- Newsletters that contained links to news articles that discussed infringing uses of the software; and
- Customer support messages responding to users who were having trouble locating or playing copyrighted materials.

This list of examples should be viewed as merely illustrative—the Court specifically cautioned that other kinds of activities might satisfy the “affirmative act” requirement in other cases.

The Court pointed to the following things it felt could be relevant to the question of “intent”:

- Internal communications and advertising designs that indicated a purpose of bringing about infringing acts;
- Efforts to attract former Napster users (“a known source of demand for copyright infringement”);
- Failure to implement filtering or other mechanisms to diminish infringing activity; and
- A business model premised on advertising that yielded increased revenues as overall usage of the software increased.

In MGM v. Grokster, the Supreme Court concluded that there was enough to permit the entertainment industries to go forward with their case, and therefore set aside the lower court rulings in favor of StreamCast and Grokster, sending the case back to the district court in Los Angeles for a trial or other further proceedings.

In the final analysis, by disposing of MGM v. Grokster on inducement grounds, the Supreme Court missed an opportunity to clarify the traditional secondary liability doctrines of contributory infringement and vicarious liability. As a result, software developers are left to puzzle their way through the uncertainties and contradictions left by the Sony, Napster and Aimster rulings, as well as any future rulings by the lower courts in MGM v. Grokster.

V. Potential defenses against secondary liability claims.

A. No direct infringer: “All of my users are innocent.”

If there is no direct infringement, there can be no indirect liability. Consequently, if no users in the network are sharing copyrighted works without authorization, this would be a complete defense to any inducement, contributory infringement, or vicarious liability claims. Unfortunately, this may be extremely difficult to demonstrate, given the decentralized nature of most P2P networks and the wide variety of uses to which they may be put. Even if file sharing by some users is privileged under the “fair use” doctrine or another statutory exception to copyright, it will be very difficult to show that every use falls within such an exception. Nevertheless, in certain specialized “walled garden” networks that permit the sharing of only secure, authorized file types, this may be a viable defense.

B. The Betamax defense: “Capable of substantial noninfringing uses.”

As discussed above, the Supreme Court concluded in Sony v. Universal that contributory infringement liability could not reach the manufacturer of a device, so long as the device is “capable of substantial noninfringing use.”

Unfortunately, the “Betamax defense” has been under sustained legal attack in cases involving P2P technology. The various rulings have not always been consistent, creating considerable ambiguity. But all three of the major court rulings—Napster, Aimster, and Grokster—make it clear that developing a clear record of substantial noninfringing uses is critically important for software developers who fear they may be sued for contributory infringement.

There remain many unsettled questions, however. First, it is unclear whether the Betamax defense applies to both contributory infringement and vicarious liability claims, or only against the former. The Ninth Circuit in Napster limited the defense to contributory infringement claims, but a different court outside the Ninth Circuit might rule otherwise. In addition, there is still some question about whether the proportion of infringing and noninfringing uses can be a relevant factor in applying the Betamax defense. The two concurring opinions in MGM v. Grokster take different views on this, but each opinion only attracted the votes of 3 Justices of the Supreme Court, shy of the majority required to clarify the law. The Aimster decision, meanwhile, says that an examination of proportion is important, but does so in what lawyers call “dicta” (i.e., discussion was not necessary to the outcome of the case, and thus is entitled to less weight).

The conflicting court interpretations of the Betamax defense have at least two important implications for P2P developers. First, they underscore the threat of vicarious liability—at least in the Ninth Circuit, a court will not be interested in hearing about your “substantial noninfringing uses” if you are defending against a vicarious liability claim. Accordingly, “control” and “direct financial benefit,” as described above, should be given a wide berth. This will likely reduce the attractiveness of business models built on an on-going “service” or “community-building” model, to the extent that these models allow the provider to control user activity (i.e., terminate or block users) and create value by attracting a large user base.

Second, with respect to contributory infringement, the lower court rulings in Grokster suggest that a technology vendor may be better off with designs that confer no ability to control user activities after the software has been downloaded and installed. After all, once you receive specific notices from copyright owners about infringing activities, courts may be tempted to wonder why you did not “do something” about the infringing activities (e.g., the Supreme Court recognized this as potentially relevant to showing a defendant’s “intent” for purposes of inducement). In that context, the scope of your obligation may depend on the extent that the architecture allows you to “do something.” In cases involving truly decentralized P2P networks built on open source software, there may be nothing a software developer or vendor can do to stop infringing activities (just as Xerox cannot control what a photocopier is used for after it is sold). To the extent you want to minimize your obligation to police the activities of end-users, this counsels strongly in favor of software architectures that leave you with no ability to control, disable, or influence end-user behavior once the software has been shipped to the end-user.

Copyright owners have recently begun arguing that technologists have a duty to redesign technologies (e.g., by implementing “filtering” mechanisms) once they are put on notice regarding infringing end-users. This argument has never been accepted by the courts. However, future developments are difficult to predict. Breaking developments on this front may have important ramifications for P2P developers and should be closely monitored.

C. The DMCA Section 512 “safe harbors.”

In 1998, responding in part to the concerns of ISPs regarding their potential liability for the copyright infringement of their users, Congress enacted a number of narrow “safe harbors” for copyright liability. These safe harbors appear in section 512 of the Copyright Act, which in turn appears in title 17 of the U.S. Code (17 U.S.C. § 512). These safe harbors apply only to “online service providers,” and only to the extent that the infringement involves four functions: transitory network transmissions, caching, storage of materials on behalf of users (e.g., web hosting, remote file storage), and the provision of information location tools (e.g., providing links, directories, search engines).

Each of these functions, however, is narrowly defined by the statute (e.g., they don’t cover what you’d think) and reflects the state of the art in 1998. Because Congress did not anticipate peer-to-peer file sharing when it enacted the safe harbors, many P2P products may not fit within the four enumerated functions. For example, according to an early ruling by the district court² in the Napster case, an online service provider cannot use the “transitory network transmission” safe harbor unless the traffic in question passes through its own private network. Many P2P products will, by their very nature, flunk this requirement, just as Napster did.

In addition to being limited to certain narrowly-circumscribed functions, the safe harbors are only available to entities that comply with a number of complex, interlocking statutory requirements:

- The online service provider (“OSP”) must (1) adopt, reasonably implement, and notify its users of a policy of terminating the accounts of subscribers who are repeat infringers; and (2) accommodate and not interfere with “standard technical measures” that have been widely adopted on the basis of industry-wide consensus.
- The OSP must designate a “copyright agent” to receive notices of alleged copyright infringement, register the agent with the Copyright Office, and place relevant contact information for the agent on its web site.
- The OSP must, upon receiving a notification of infringement from a copyright owner, expeditiously remove or disable access to the infringing material (“notice and takedown”).
- The OSP must not have known about the infringement, or been aware of facts from which such activity was apparent (i.e., if you take a “head in the sand” approach, you lose the safe harbor).
- The OSP must not receive a direct financial benefit from infringing activity, in a situation where the OSP controls such activity.

In the final analysis, qualifying for any of the DMCA safe harbors requires careful advance attention to the legal and technical requirements and obligations that the statute imposes. As a result, any P2P developer who intends to rely on them should seek competent legal counsel at an early stage of the development process—an after-the-fact, “bolt on” effort to comply is likely to fail (as it did for Napster).

D. The DMCA ban on circumvention technologies.

One recent addition to the copyright landscape deserves special attention. Section 1201 of the Copyright Act, enacted as part of the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (“DMCA”), makes it unlawful to “circumvent” any technology aimed at protecting a copyrighted work. In addition, the development, distribution or use of circumvention technology or devices is, with only narrow exceptions, also unlawful. For example, if a copyright owner uses a digital rights management (“DRM”) solution to protect a song, it would be unlawful for anyone to crack the encrypted file without the copyright owner’s permission, or to build or distribute a software tool designed to crack the file.

Of course, circumvention technology is not a necessary part of a P2P file-sharing network. Today’s P2P protocols, such as Bit Torrent, FastTrack and gnutella, simply facilitate file transfers, leaving the file itself, whether encrypted or not, unaltered. Nevertheless, as copyright owners begin to deploy DRM and watermarking systems, there may be interest in integrating circumvention tools with file-sharing tools. In particular, any “spoofing” of authentication handshakes between applications can create concerns (see, e.g., Real Networks v. Streambox, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1889 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 18, 2000)).

VI. Lessons and guidelines for P2P developers.

A few general guidelines for P2P developers can be derived from the discussion above. These are steps you can take that may: (1) reduce the chance that your project will be an easy, inviting target for copyright owners; and (2) minimize the chances that your case will become the next legal precedent that content owners can use to threaten future innovators.

Of course, because the relevant legal principles are still in flux, these guidelines represent merely one, general analysis of the legal landscape. Please consult with an attorney regarding your precise plans.

1. Do not make or store copies.

This one may be obvious, but remember that if you make or distribute any infringing copies (even if only in RAM) of copyrighted works, you may be held liable as a direct infringer. In that case, a plaintiff need not prove “affirmative acts” or “intent” or “control” or “knowledge” or “financial benefit” or “material contribution”—the fact that copies were made on your equipment can be enough to establish direct infringement liability, whether you knew about them or not.

Of course, this shouldn't be a problem for most P2P developers, since the great insight of peer-to-peer architectures is that the actual resources being shared need not pass through any central server. Nevertheless, be careful where caching or similar activities are concerned.

2. Do not promote, encourage, or foster infringing uses.

In the wake of the Supreme Court’s ruling in MGM v. Grokster, developers will want to give a wide berth to any conduct that can be viewed as inducing infringing uses of any file sharing application.

Inducement liability turns on the combination of “affirmative acts” and “intent” to encourage or foster infringing activity. Unfortunately, it can be very difficult to prove what your “intent” was—intent is often proved by circumstantial evidence, which means that every email (internal and external), customer support message, conversation (internal and external), and scrap of marketing material might be deemed relevant by a court. In other words, there may be little you can do to definitively resolve the “intent” question.

Fortunately, you have a better chance of controlling whether you engage in any “affirmative acts” that encourage infringement. Accordingly, it is imperative that P2P developers avoid anything that could be construed as an “affirmative act.” The following may be worth scrutinizing closely:

- Marketing and promotional materials (including websites, advertisements, press releases, newsletters, or links to third party reviews or testimonials); and
- Any instructions aimed at users (including screenshots, FAQs, and customer support communications, whether in email, chat, or bulletin board postings).

Recall, as well, that the Supreme Court found that an effort to attract users who are known to be copyright infringers (like users of the former Napster software) could constitute an “affirmative act” aimed at fostering infringement.

Finally, it is unclear when you might be held responsible for the statements of third parties. In MGM v. Grokster, the Supreme Court found that sending a newsletter with links to news articles that mentioned infringing uses might be an “affirmative act” for inducement purposes. In light of this, special caution is warranted if you disseminate, host, or otherwise adopt statements of third parties who talk about infringing uses. So, for example, you may want to exercise special caution if you host a bulletin board or other forum where users talk directly to each other about infringing uses of your software.

3. Your two options: total control or no control.

In the wake of recent decisions on indirect copyright liability, it appears that copyright law has foisted a binary choice on P2P developers: either build a system that allows for thorough monitoring and control over end-user activities, or build one that makes such monitoring and control impossible.

Contributory infringement arises when you have “knowledge” of, and “materially contribute” to, someone else’s infringing activity. The chief battleground for contributory infringement in the P2P cases so far has been the “knowledge” issue, with copyright owners dumping box-loads of infringement notices on software developers, hoping to create “knowledge” of the infringing activities of end-users.³

The law of contributory infringement therefore presents a developer with a binary choice: you can either include mechanisms that enable monitoring and control of user activities (and use them to stop allegedly infringing activity when you receive complaints), or choose a truly decentralized architecture wherein such monitoring and control is impossible without extensive redesign. (Copyright owners have begun arguing that you must redesign future versions of your software to prevent infringement. This argument has never been accepted, but the Supreme Court did say that a failure to take steps to implement filtering can be relevant to establishing “intent” for inducement purposes.)

Vicarious liability also requires that the plaintiff demonstrate that you “control,” and receive “benefit” from, someone else's infringing activity. The “benefit” element will be difficult to resist in many P2P cases (at least for commercial products)—so long as the software permits or enables the sharing of infringing materials, this will serve as a “draw” for users, which may be enough “benefit” to result in liability according to some precedents.

So the fight will likely center on the “control” element. The Napster court found that the right to block a user's access to the service was enough to constitute “control.” The court also found that Napster had a duty to monitor the activities of its users “to the fullest extent” possible. Accordingly, in order to avoid vicarious liability, a P2P developer would be wise to choose an architecture that makes control over end-user activities impossible.

On this front, open source software developers may have an advantage over those who distribute only proprietary object code, insofar as an open source developer can credibly argue that it has virtually no ability to control, or even redesign, its software once distributed. After all, if a developer were to add “filtering” or other restrictions to its software, end-users could simply delete those restrictions and recompile the source code themselves.

4. Better to sell stand-alone software products than on-going services.

Vicarious liability is perhaps the most serious risk facing P2P developers. Copyright owners will argue that having the power to terminate or block users from accessing the network is enough “control” to justify imposing vicarious liability. Add “financial benefit” in the form of a business model that depends on a large user base, and you're well on your way to being held vicariously liable. This is true even if you are completely unaware of what your users are up to—the pairing of “control” and “financial benefit” can be enough.

Of course, most “service” business models fit this “control” and “benefit” paradigm. What this means is that, after the Napster decision, if you offer a service, you may have to monitor and police your users if you want to escape liability. If you want to avoid monitoring obligations, you'll have to give up on anything that smacks of “control.”

As a result, vendors of stand-alone software products may be in a better position to resist monitoring obligations and vicarious liability. After Sony sells a VCR, it has no control over what the end-user does with it. Neither do the makers of photocopiers, optical scanners, or audio cassette recorders. Having built a device with many uses, only some of which may infringe copyrights, the typical electronics manufacturer has no way to “terminate” end-users or “block” their ability to use the device. They also have no ability to repossess or remotely modify the device after purchase. The key here is to let go of any control you may have over your users—including remote kill switches, automatic update features, contractual termination rights, or other similar mechanisms.

5. What are your substantial noninfringing uses?

If your product is intended to work solely (or best) as a mechanism for copyright piracy, you're asking for legal trouble. More importantly, you're thinking too small. Almost all peer-to-peer systems can be used for many different purposes, some of which the creators themselves fail to appreciate.

So create a platform that lends itself to many uses. Actively, sincerely, and enthusiastically promote the noninfringing uses of your product. Gather testimonials from noninfringing users. The existence of real, substantial noninfringing uses will increase the chances that you can invoke the Betamax defense if challenged in court.

6. Disaggregate functions.

Separate different functions and concentrate your efforts on a discrete area. In order to be successful, peer-to-peer networks will require products to address numerous functional needs—search, bootstrapping, namespace management, security, dynamic file redistribution, and user support, to take a few examples. There's no reason why one entity should try to do all of these things. In fact, the creation of an open set of protocols or APIs, combined with a competitive mix of interoperable, but distinct, applications is probably a good idea from a product-engineering point of view.

This approach may also have legal advantages. If Sony had not only manufactured VCRs, but also sold all the blank video tape, distributed all the TV Guides, and sponsored clubs and swap meets for VCR users, the Betamax case might have turned out differently. Part of Napster's downfall was its combination of indexing, searching, and file sharing in a single piece of software. If each activity is handled by a different product and vendor, on the other hand, each entity may have a better legal defense to a charge of infringement.

A disaggregated model, moreover, may limit what a court can order you to do to stop infringing activity by your users. As the Napster court recognized, you can only be ordered to police your own "premises"—the smaller it is, the less you can be required to do.

In addition, certain functions may be entitled to special protections under the "safe harbor" provisions of the DMCA. Search engines, for example, enjoy special DMCA protections. Thus, the combination of a P2P file sharing application with a third party search engine might be easier to defend in court than Napster's integrated solution.

Finally, in the wake of the MGM v. Grokster ruling, copyright owners may argue that certain features, if implemented as part of a file-sharing application, constitute evidence of inducement. They have already singled out features intended to provide anonymity (e.g., proxies) and network integrity (e.g., IP blocklists, anti-spoofing features) for criticism. While no court has yet ruled that a product feature can, by itself, support an inducement claim, it may be wise to leave those features to third parties and leave it to your users to figure out how to use them. Incorporating simple APIs (like support for SOCKS proxies and user-configurable IP blocklists) can make this easier and stimulate interoperability among different network services.

7. Don't make your money from the infringing activities of your users.

Avoid business models that rely on revenue streams that can be directly traced to infringing activities. For example, a P2P file-sharing system that includes a payment mechanism might pose problems, if the system vendor takes a percentage cut of all payments, including payments generated from sales of bootleg Divx movie files.

8. Give up the EULA.

Although end-user license agreements (“EULAs”) are ubiquitous in the software world, copyright owners have attempted to use them in P2P cases to establish “control” for vicarious liability purposes. On this view, EULAs represent “contracts” between vendors and their users, and thus give software vendors legal control over end-user activities. EULAs that permit a vendor to terminate at any time for any reason may raise particular concerns, insofar as they may leave the impression that a vendor has the legal right to stop users from using the software.

P2P software vendors should consider distributing their code without a EULA. Even without a EULA, a software developer retains all of the protections of copyright law to prevent unauthorized duplication and modifications. (After all, books, DVDs, and music CDs are all sold without any EULA, and copyright law certainly protects them.)

9. Beware direct customer support.

Any evidence that you have knowingly assisted an end-user in committing copyright infringement will be used against you. In the P2P cases so far, one source for this kind of evidence is from customer support channels, whether message board traffic, instant messages or email. A user writes in, explaining that the software acted strangely when he tried to download The Matrix. If you answer him, copyright owners will make it seem that you directly assisted the user in infringement, potentially complicating your inducement or contributory infringement defenses.

Fortunately, user communities often can and do support themselves in whatever forums they like. As a result, there may be no need for one-on-one customer support from the developers of the software (this will be even more likely if the software is open source and expert users can see how it works for themselves).

10. Be open source.

In addition to the usual litany of arguments favoring the open-source model, the open source approach may offer special advantages in the P2P realm. It may be more difficult for a copyright owner to demonstrate “control” or “financial benefit” with respect to an open source product. After all, anyone can download, modify and compile open source code, and no one has the ability to “terminate,” “block access,” implement “filtering,” or otherwise control the use of the resulting applications. Any control mechanisms (including “filtering”), even if added later, can simply be removed by users who don’t like them.

“Financial benefit” may also be a problematic concept where the developers do not directly realize any financial gains from the code (as noted above, however, the Napster court has embraced a very broad notion of “financial benefit,” so this may not be enough to save you). Finally, by making the most legally dangerous elements of the P2P network open source (or relying on the open source projects of others), you can build your business out of less vulnerable ancillary services (such as search services, bandwidth enhancement, file storage, meta-data services, etc.).

Finally, as mentioned above, expert end-users may be better able to provide customer support for the user community if they can see for themselves how the code works, relieving the developers of the burden of providing customer support. This may be particularly relevant, as copyright owners have focused on customer support interactions when gathering evidence to use against P2P developers.

Earn money while uploading and sharing your files with your friends. Our affiliate program is open for every registered member in our site. We have a flexible rate for each of your files.

Earnings Table

| Rank | 5 - 50MB | 50 - 100MB | 100 - 2000MB |
|----------|----------|------------|--------------|
| Copper | $2 | $3 | $4 |
| Bronze | $3 | $5 | $7 |
| Silver | $5 | $7 | $10 |
| Gold | $6 | $9 | $12 |
| Platinum | $7 | $10 | $15 |

Note: All prices are for 1000 downloads.

Ranks

All uploader accounts are checked daily for their performance during the last 14 days. If necessary your status will be changed and your file's downloads will be credited according to the table above. Your status mainly depends on your conversion ratio which includes:

1. The ratio of the users that downloaded your files and the users that become premium based on your uploaded files.
2. The ratio of uploaded files to number of downloads.

Rules & Conditions

1. We count every successfully completed download, but if a premium user downloads a file more than once, that will be counted as a single download. This doesn't apply for free users downloads - their downloads are counted without limitations (multiple downloads for a file from same IP are counted).
2. We pay every Monday (Paypal, AlertPay, Webmoney). Minimum payment amount is $15. Payments are done automatically, you don't need to do anything.
3. We count downloads from all countries in the list below:

| Americas | Europe | Asia & Rest | | | | | |
|----------------------|-----------------|----------------|-----------|-------------|-----------------|-------------|--------------|
| North: | Austria | Belgium | Bulgaria | Croatia | Bahrain | China | Hong Kong |

Hotfile Features

1. FTP upload, Remote Upload, Link List, File Manager (Rename, Copy, Delete, Move files and folders).
2. File copies and different download links are supported (After you upload a file you will be able to create copies of it on our site).
3. Backup for all uploads so files are never lost
4. We offer unmatched speeds. Free users can download with 128kb and our premiums enjoy unlimited download speed.
5. Usability - we use no popup and ads on our download pages.
6. We do not restrict any country - free downloads for everyone are guaranteed.
7. We have detailed statistics for downloads and revenues.

Referral programs

We offer 2 additional affiliate programs for people who either own sites where they can post links or that can refer hotfile to fellow uploaders. We are not restricting anybody, so you can use both if you want.

I'd like to make some explanations:

Your account type will be calculated each day and depending of this your downloads will be paid regarding the Earnings table (see our Affiliate section)

We change account status daily, but we consider one week back period when we calculate your conversion ratio.

Your old downloads (before 24.06) will be counted by old prices/conditions.

Your status depends mainly on your conversion ratio - In other words, how many people that downloaded your files have become premium users.

There is progress bar in your account "My Stats" - you can check what is your position and how you performs - better or worse.

Number of postings and downloads are not indicator for your account status. You may have lot of posts, downloads, but your users who download your links don't become premium! We pay for your downloads only from premium users who paid for their accounts. So we implemented new account types.

If your conversion ratio is good-you will be gold or platinum and for these accounts we INCREASED prices.

Other indicators are considered as well, such as:

- * - how much files you upload
- * - number of downloads
- * - server resources load and etc

The most important indicator, however, is your conversion ratio!

With this we want to benefit all uploaders which works good, got many downloads of their files, but conversion also!

Possible low rank could affect uploaders whose traffic does not bring the proper premium users to the site. But at the same time, according to statistics, there are substantial overall increase in earnings from partners with higher-converted traffic for the past days.

About payments - we pay each Monday and so far never delayed. Next Monday payments will be too, so don't need to speculate about this!

If you just upload, yes you may have downloads, but if we don't receive premium conversion from your users, how we supposed to pay you? Where to get money from?

We check all competitors and most of them will do the same (even RapidShare, not mentioned others).

How to convince people to become premium?

From one side-it depends on our site,download page -> this will be improved very soon

From other side-I notice people who just don't make dump links, but make some good description of their file (on their blog,site or forum), their downloaders become premium more often.

We believe this will benefit in long term all good uploaders!

About RapidShare remote upload - for all users with rank Silver+ there is no limit!

Even more - we think to offer for all Silver+ users to use remote upload, even if they don't have their premium

RS account!

Right now RS changed their authentication system and we rewrite our code, hope soon all will be ready.

We are working now also for upload/download tool and other stuff, I'm sure you will be glad to use.

Regards,

I agree with last 2 of you.

Yesterday I was gold (as I am today)...but...

I when new day started I was around 50% between sylver and premium level. Few hours later when I waked up, I had 66%. I was like "Wow, something positive is happening".

So what I did? I killed myself sharing (without sleeping to much), so that I could finally see that platinum lever right next to my nickname.

Maybe it's a weak result for bigger players here, but:

Previous day when I had 66% and sum of 242 unique downloads (193 being form files bigger then 100 MB in size).

But next day I had 326 unique downloads (326 being from files bigger then 100 MB in size).

One day I earned $2.65, and next one over $4.

What is my reward for that? I am now at 25%. And very close to silver level.

That sucks. I would really like to know how they count our levels.

They keep telling us that 'conversion ratio' is most important. Well here it is how things are going, when you think about it logically:

Quote:

To earn more I have to be platinum user. To make that happen, ppl have to download my files more. But most important is how much of them become premium users. OK, then I have to do this: Share lot more, and good stuff (from basic user point of view), so that they will finally decide to buy a premium and stop torturing themselves by downloading as basic users. I will share more, upload more, and that will for sure bring better results in my stats"

So, again, I share more. Lot more ppl downloaded my files. I earned more (compared to my previous days, it was the record).

How they thanked me for that? Oh, well, I am now on 25% (but yesterday I earned less, while in the same time was closer to platinum level)

Quote:

IF THE CONVERSION RATIO IS MOST IMPORTANT, THEN TELL US AT ONCE HOW YOU CALCULATE WHOLE DAMN THING. AND PUT THE INFO OF NEW PREMIUM USERS THAT WE BRING YOU IN OUR STATS, SO THAT WE COULD KNOW THAT TOO

(mods, I know about CAPS rule, I did it with reason 'cause I know hotfile stuff visiting this board, but they always "somehow" overlook what we are saying here. If it can't stay that way, please lower my caps)

ButcherBoy, thanks for responding here.

I quted part of your previous message (that is made while I was typing mine, previous message).

Ok, what I quoted make some sense (if we put ourself in your shoes), but:

We cannot bring you more premium users while we share few files, because if I am some basic user (as I am) and want to download some file from you, I would do that without buying a premium account. But if I see a lot of good stuff and I want those, I would say "damn it, I cannot wait forever to download all this, let's buy a premium account"

So, you can't say that download count is less important. It is telling you that we "force" ppl to download our files. But we cannot beat them to buy a premium.

2 days ago I made a record how much I earned. I was also at 66% closer to platinum. Yesterday I made a much bigger jump in download counts and my final earnings, and you rewarded me with 25% closer to silver level.

To be honest, your progress bar SUCKS. Those are just percents. If it shows how many users became premium users while downloading our files, put that info in stats. So we could know (1,2, 3) users bought premium from our files. Also, give us at least how many % that new premium user is valuable for you.

We still don't know how you calculate the whole thing. We only know "what is most important" and that's it. Again, you cannot have new users if we share only few files. The best indicator that we are going in the right direction is how many downloads are made. So we can only hope that one of those users will buy a premium account with you. There is no other way. So we share, a lot of ppl download, and that means they LIKE WHAT WE SHARE. That's the end of our part in the whole thing.

It depends on a person's mind if it wants to buy premium. We can't do anything about it except keep sharing good stuff. And if more ppl download, that sure doesn't mean they don't like it. You have to fix something in your 'calculation' and give us more information in our stats.

Maybe you don't like my criticism, but it's for the benefits of both sides. (your system is not perfect, make it better)

ButcherBoy

Jun 26th 2009, 5:40 am

We track all your downloads and all users who become premium from your links.

Together with other information we monitor - we make your rank and showed it to you.

This rank is your performance - if your % is increased - this means your conversion ratio is increased. That's the information you need. If we show you let's say-200 downloads, 3 premiums... would it be easier for you to guess what you did and what you should do to increase conversion? No. Our user rank is more complex indicator, and that's the reason we put it in all accounts.

Jun 26th 2009, 5:55 am

Is it possible to let us have both 'progress bar' and 'new premium users' in our stats?

If the progress bar is more complex, then I guess, putting also a 'premium users' info is not too much to ask because it's just one part of 'progress bar' formula.

It's just a number, why you are so 'afraid' about showing us that number? :) (progress bar has to stay, it's just need one more info to go with it)

Some TIPS for better ranking

Some TIPS for better ranking:

Essentially to reach a higher status your links should sell more premium accounts. Here are few tips that may help you to be promoted to a higher type of uploader and eventually to reach the platinum status:

* Don't post links to different file hosting sites for the same file. This kind of mirrors allows users to simultaneously download from different sites and they have less incentive to buy premium.

- * Don't switch every day to different file hosting service - that way people are less willing to buy a premium account, as they will need multiple premium accounts from different services to get all the content and that is more expensive.
- * Do not upload files that you will not promote. Used server space is also accounted when your rank is considered.
- * Put more effort into bringing more visitors to download your files, rather than to upload more files. If you are uploading 10Gb of files everyday just to have every file downloaded few times you are going to stick with Copper.
- * Don't post on resources that have popups, try to install trojans and similar stuff. This way users do not have much trust and are less willing to pay.

@ButcherBoy, we need a referral link so that we can directly sell hotfile premium membership to our downloaders. You don't indicate how many have bought premium from our links and this should be indicated clearly. 5 people bought premium from my referral links today + more than 1000 downloads and im still on copper status, how do we know that the purchase of premium was accredited to us? Your indicator is not accurate at all, only you know about this conversion ratio and you can always manipulate this to however you want it.

One thing is very obvious, the more you share, the less you earn, i dont really see the logic here. You should be rewarding uploaders who work very hard to upload to your server. Why should we upload files that nobody wants to download? That will just be a waste of time, we are with hotfile because of what you offered before. Please take this matter into serious consideration. Thank you very much.

*We show you progress bar, we are not here to manipulate results!
If you think we act like this - it will be easier to put you stats 'you have 1,5,100 premiums', don't you think?!
As I explained your rank is not only just one simple indicator-premiums are most important, but not only one.*

One thing is very obvious, the more you share, the less you earn, i dont really see the logic here. You should be rewarding uploaders who work very hard to upload to your server. Why should we upload files that nobody wants to download? That will just be a waste of time, we are with hotfile because of what you offered before. Please take this matter into serious consideration. Thank you very much.

The more you share - the more downloads you have and more premium users, all together this is how you are supposed to work!

To pay you just to upload?! Why should we pay you then?
I can easily make all RS or other hosts mirror to all our servers?

Why should we upload files that nobody wants to download?
I wonder also, why? You may think your files are interested and most probably they are, but we must convince downloaders and to convert them to premium users. I post some tips - I didn't invent them, just make observation of platinum users-how the work, what they do and post these tips to all our uploaders.

Jun 27th 2009, 12:06 am

WOW, what a jump I made (or better say, they made me to jump there) !!!
I was gold yesterday, but my progress bar was showing that I kept going to Silver level. So I was ready for Silver ("nothing I can do about it, HF system sucks", I was thinking).
DAMN, they surprised me (in a bad way, ofcourse). BRONZE

I just broke another record (positive). I made downloads like never before. Earned more then ever before. PPL are downloading my files. I wasn't sharing so much new files (only 29 of them). What I got in return?
BRONZE
Thanks HotFile ! :(

It would be good if they make even lower level then COPPER, cause tomorrow...I am sure I would jump over COPPER end straight to that (even) lower level. Lets make "ZERO $ for our good uploaders". I am waiting for that, hotfile team.

Lets make 0 $ level, so that I could know that is time for me to stop wasting my time whole day, sharing my uploads on lot boards, and making ppl download them. Cause the only thing it matters is 'conversion ratio' which does not make any sense at all.

Again, your system sucks. I cannot and I wont BEG ppl for you to buy premium account. Nobody should do that. I guess making your links being visited and files being downloaded from your servers is not enough, cause everyday I made more $ you kept lowering my level. :(

Hi dduck, you are absolutely right, my actual observation is when you start earning more than $10 per day, you will be shocked the next day - your status will be downgraded to Copper just like what happened to me, this despite very good download figures, all files have been downloaded more than 20 times, some files more than 50 times, the conversion ratio formula should be made clear. Thank you.

Hey ButcherBoy, you just answered your own questions from my previous posts, but still no clear answer on how many bought premium accounts from our links, also i dare you to come out with the formula for your conversion ratio. Thank you.

Hmm.. ButcherBoy, I feel you SHOULD add the feature of letting us know how many premium accounts we sell / day. There is Uploading.com doing that, now RS, except Hotfile. I have been in this uploading business for alot of time now and right now, I feel.. Uploading.com would earn us MORE than HF. Frankly speaking I don't like uploading.com not because it restricts some countries from downloads but it's support sux, it's always getting some bug in either it's stats page, or some of its server don't respond. But we don't have any other option do we? Deposit Files.. it's dead, quebcash... who shaves download + pays only for unique download, sux ... then comes Uploading.com ... already told it's pros n cons.. and lastly.. Hotfile ..

I personally knew hotfile would do something like this, JUST LIKE any other file hostign company

- 1) Mass market with sexy download rates
- 2) once a service is well known or has gained enough popularity, download rates are changed or some crappy rule is applied but with such a crappy tab on the downloads? No Need. Uploading.com pays for every download. Hotfile pays more attention on the premium accounts sold. This is a weird business. totally weird business. Agreed you had to do this (any uploading business' revenue depends on the premium accounts sold) but atleast give a standard rate of downloads / file / size just like any other file hosting company. Fluctuating the download rates every day has ALREADY de-motivated me from using HotFile. You might not think of just one person leaving but u'll surely see a sharp downfall soon. Maybe that might interest you a bit.

Anyhow, tell me when you're done with this crappy rule. I might join back. Enough of promoting Hotfile for now.

Peace

@ Others - If HotFile is not willing to show the premium accounts purchased through your link

- 1) it can mean that they are shaving or have started shaving downloads already , so not every premium accounts purchased through your link would count. As a result of that, your status is not affected much and you dont get a higher ranking. That's what I can possibly get out of your posts of all those who are sure that they are able to sell accounts but account status is not affected or still downgrading.

I have friends who have made $4k / month (approx) on HotFile for 2 months and now what? they're downgraded to copper :D .. why? because they must have not got premium accounts OR .. HotFile wanan reduce some 'expenses'. ANYhow, back to Shitloading.com for now.

I'm asking myself, how much the used space does matter.

If I have a typical 1400MB file, splitted in:

1. 200MB parts = 7 files. Each downloaded 30 times, with 2 users buying premium. Result: 210 dls, 2 Premium, 1400Mb disk space used.

or

2. 100MB parts = 14 files. Each downloaded 30 times, with 2 users buying premium. Result: 420 dls, 2 Premium, 1400MB disk space used.

In case 1 I have less dls, but the ratio dls/premium would be better.

Case 2 means more dls, but the ratio dls/premium would be worse. What would be the best scenario?

Also, is it useful if I delete unused files from my account? Less used space, but same amount of dls = better ratio = better status?

If hotfile gets most of the money from the selling of premium accounts than they should reduce the download speed a little, last time i download a file from them i got more than 150kb/s. People with time to spend downloading a large movie or game will never buy a premium. 50 minutes to download a 400Mb file WOW! Why spend my precious money buying a premium when i can have what i want for free. So, reduce it a little, like to a stable 100kb/s and force people to buy premium. Most of the people around knows the download speed that uploading.com gives to free users, it is a shame but this way they force people to buy premium accounts, there i sell some every week with hotfile i don't know if i sold any.

With this i don't want to tell you how to run your business but you should think about it. You will gain more and maybe with time you can give more to the ones working 4 hotfile.

Well, i'll be frank here : even at free downloads, my memebrrs have told me the at they have got speed upto 2 mbps :D.. but the average download speed is 128 kb/sec if im not wrong. Anyways, even rapidshare isn't good these days with its servers getting problems + the speed at which RS is deleting the files.

When my downloads are growing up ,my rank going down.

1 question Butcherboy:

Why we don't seeing in our statistics,how many we are sells premium accounts?
Now it's the important thing in our statistics.

RRamirezJun 27th 2009, 6:59 pm

i was downgraded to copper as well
BULL - TOTAL bull
they must be running out of money absolute bonkers
btw what do you guys upload cause i can BARELY get people to download my stuff its adult stuff though :P
been barely getting downloads but been busy getting around $20 per day form associated content so screw that until i am desperate for some cash

AznRicoJun 27th 2009, 8:10 pm

hmm im quiet happy with HotFile at the moment. even since the change i have been platinum for all but 1 day when i was gold! thats good rates for me

BionicmanJun 27th 2009, 8:34 pm

Why do you think you have platinum? Can you give us some tips cause I'm trying everything and it won't move from 0% copper lol

There's no way I can control who's buying premium so I'm working on upload-download ration. I'm trying to promote my old files rather than uploading new. I deleted some files I don't intent to use anymore. Some of my files have less than 30 downloads but most of them have over 50 and there are some around 1000 so it is pretty well balanced I think.
But I'm stuck at 0% copper and it never moved since it dropped from gold in one day.

So today...I wasn't dropping down (too bad...hofile, you desappointed me now. why am I still on bronze level, when there is one more lower level to achive?)

OK, I joined the club of 100% level without advancing to a higher rank.

Here are the pictures that are made ~1 minute before update, and second one just after update. Look at

BEFORE update

<http://139.tinypic.com/1z3bgpk.jpg>

AFTER update

<http://i43.tinypic.com/lbqmv.jpg>

Now...every person who is sane enough know that this is quite impossible. Where the hell did they found 19% to add to my current status??!!

Why not 18% ... 17% ...16? ... Maybe even 20% (or higher)?

BUT nooo, they found just a nice little number: 19 !

So yesterday it was possible for me to drop down from gold level, over the silver and right on bronze level. But for today, I couldn't make it 20% to advance??!! Oh, really?

It's so obvious that it stinks so much. There is a script that doing just that. No matter if you even deserve to advance (by those new crazy rules) , it makes you stay on that crappy level for another 24 hours. (I may only hope It's "just" 24 hours)

Since I am not the first one who reported being on 100% without advancing on next level, I can say for sure that there is a script with a purpose to not allow you to advance so fast. (at least for another 24 hours).

FAQ

Q Can broken downloads be resumed?

A. At this point, only Premium members can resume interrupted downloads. They can use extensive server routines which also support the downloading of segments. In this way, a file can be downloaded much faster in parallel in parallel to several streams, e.g. with the download accelerator.

Q Your system complains about that I am already downloading files or that I have already downloaded too much. But I did not download anything! Whats wrong there?

A. Our System checks your IP-address in order to count the downloads. If you are getting this message and you really did not download anything, then you are using a proxy-server, which is used by other people as well. Even if you have no proxy-server set up in your configuration, there are many providers who force a transparent proxy-server between you and the net. If you do not believe us, go to other pages: telling you your IP-address (for example <http://www.myipaddress.com>). But what can you do? You have to disable this proxy-server. If you are not able to disable the proxy-server, the only solution is a Premium-account. Premium-users are recognized by cookies, not by IP-address. Unfortunately we cannot disable our IP-check, else people would download so much that we would have to close down this service completely. I hope you understand our situation in this matter.

Q I can generally not download any files, what can I do?

A. If you do not have a Premium Account, you have to deactivate a possible Download Accelerator. This resolves the issue in most cases. If you are still encountering problems, you could possibly be blocking our cookies. Cookies are required for Proxy User

Q Can I search the Hotfile server for certain files?

A. No. Hotfile protects the privacy of our users. Only the person storing a file on Hotfile gets the download link. That person decides who should have access to the link. A file can only be downloaded if the download link details are known.

Q Can I delete my files?

A. Of course. After successful uploading, you receive two links: a download link and a deletion link. Please keep both. If you want to remove the file from the server, you can click on the deletion link.

Q For how long are files stored?

A. In principle, we host data without a time limit. But files that have not been accessed for 90 days are deleted to relieve the system of forgotten and not needed content. This rule does not apply to Premium members.

Q Where can I buy a Premium Account?

A. You can buy premium account here: <http://www.hotfile.com/premium.html>

Q Important Notice

A. All users who post links in sites / forums without following respective rules (spamming, flooding and etc.) will be suspended and their accounts will be closed!

Q How can I rename, copy, delete, move my files?

A. You can do this easy with our File Manager - log in to your account and go for "File Manager"

Q How can I create list with all files in folder?

A. You can do it with our File Manager - for each your directory you will find "Get list" option. Click it and you will get url of page, containing all your files in this directory.

Q Affiliates: How do I become platinum member / raise my rank?

A. Essentially to reach a higher status your links should sell more premium accounts. Here are few tips that may help you to obtain a higher rank and eventually reach platinum status:

- Try to post files from hotfile.com only. Using another file hosting service for the same files allows users to simultaneously download from different sites and they have less incentive to buy premium.
- Switching to different file hosting services every other day hurts your rank - that way people are less willing to buy a premium account, as they will need multiple premium accounts from different services to get all the content and that is more expensive.
- Upload files only if you intent to promote them. Used server space is also accounted when your rank is considered.
- Put more effort into bringing more visitors to download your files, rather than to upload more files. If you upload 10GB of files everyday just to have every file downloaded just few times you are going to be stuck with a Copper.
- Post only on reliable resources. Posting on sites that have popups, try to install trojans or similar stuff hurts your performance and you lose rank.

Q May I resell Premium accounts?

A. Sure you can. Check out our FAQ page for more information.

How does monthly subscription work?

A. When you subscribe to a Hotfile plan, your payment method will automatically be set up for monthly recurring billing for your convenience - without having to always manually send money. Your account will remain premium and you don't need to worry about account expiration. Your payment method will automatically be charged one month after your initial transaction and each month thereafter.

How do I cancel my Hotfile subscription?

A. You can easily cancel your Hotfile monthly subscription at any time.

When you cancel, your account will continue to be Hotfile premium until the end of the term that you have already paid for.

Customers using PayPal should note that subscriptions are maintained and controlled by PayPal and not by Hotfile, but you can cancel your subscription with them at any time. To cancel your subscription click here.

How to generate and use voucher?

A. You can convert your Earnings to vouchers for Hotfile premium accounts and give them to your friends.

From "Account upgrades" link you can purchase voucher.

You will be given with voucher ID (for example: HOT05JA003345H424JC99FC656FILE) to enter it here:

<http://hotfile.com/usevoucher.php?V=HOT05JA003345H424JC99FC656FILE> or you can use direct link given also:

<http://hotfile.com/usevoucher.php?V=HOT05JA003345H424JC99FC656FILE>

With such a link (voucher ID) your friends can create or extend premium account and start using it instantly.

How can I enable HotDirect linking for my files?

A. Login into your account and select "File Manager" through the dropdown menu under "My Account". You will see list with all your files, select file(s) you want to enable Hotlink for and press button "Hotlink On/Off". You can enable HotDirect link for single file by pressing button "Switch" ("Yes"-hotlink is enabled, "No"-hotlink is disabled).

Do I still earn downloads when people download my hotlinked files?

A. No, while hotlinked your files downloads will not be counted at all, but you will be able to see the traffic used for each file in File Manager.
