Tiger, Georgia - Goats on the Roof

"Goats on the Roof" is in reality a fairly average country store, but with one primary difference: There are goats on the roof. There are sky walks to several different buildings to allow the goats to move around with a couple of strange devices to allow kids to feed the goats. [Jacob Krejci, 04/10/2009]

Salmon - Elk Bend, Idaho - Dugout Dick's Ice Cave Ranch

Off US 93 just north of Elk Bend, the antidote for the overcivilized world awaits. Dugout Dick's Ranch is a wonderful anachronism. Before Dick staked his claim in 1948, he busted sod, rode herd and rode the rails, and raised sheep and goats and hay, but now, as he explains with a sly grin, he's in the "tourist business." Personally-guided tours of his unique ranch only cost a buck, and for another smackaroo you can take as many pictures as you please.

Old age hasn't slowed thrifty Dick down -- you may find him hard at work refining his recycled rubber tire building technique. Some of his dwellings tunnel back into the hillside more than 100ft. He claims that several of the dugouts he rents out for $25 a month only cost him $10 to build using driftwood salvage from the riverbank and sundry scavenged materials, including $1 car hoods and double-thick windshields. He's quite proud of his hand-hewn rock walls, which he rolled down the hill.

He says he started building by digging out caves in riverbanks when he was knee-high to a greashopper back in Indiana, but refined his building techniques during his shepherding days and migrated to Idaho in the early 1940s to work on a dairy farm.

If Dick's not around, check the orchard down by the river, or in the ice cave near the office, or just sit tight and wait a spell, he's probably in town checking his mail. If his cane is not by the "cave tour" sign, he's most likely out on his bicycle. Conversely, if his bike's there, he's most likely in his home, the one with the small solar panel on the roof.

You're strongly encouraged to stick around long enough to find out why both the goats are nicknamed "Nuisance," (the billy knocked Dick down the hill and broke his hip a few years back!). There's a choice of more than a dozen rubber tire houses, including a few cavernous abodes that will sleep up to 12 folks comfortably, depending on your definition of comfort, of course -- check them all out, then decide which one meets your needs.

If it's not rented, shack up in the cabin farthest up the hill on the left-hand side. Bring a warm sleeping sack, matches for the stove and some grub, toilet paper and a flashlight to find your way to the outhouse. Don't expect Dick to leave the light on for you -- there ain't one. [Andrew Dean Nystrom, 04/01/2001]

[RA: October 2005 - Joe Hauge sent a link to a news story reporting Dick is now advertising his Cave accommodations at $5 per night or $25 per month. The "rooms" include mattresses and wood stoves.]

Sister Bay, Wisconsin - Goats on the Roof

Al Johnson's Swedish Restaurant and Butik is an authentic Swedish family-owned restaurant where you can find goats grazing the sod roof. It's quite a sight, and it's made this place one of the most famous restaurants in Door County. Inside the casual, carpeted dining room, young ladies in Scandinavian garb dish out limpa bread and Swedish meatballs.

The menu consists of a variety of Swedish fare, from pancakes with lingonberries to Swedish meatballs, whitefish, sandwiches, salads, and a variety of hot and cold plates. [Jeremy, 04/30/2007]
