ORDER

Pro se plaintiff Brenda L. Mutcherson sued her previous, South Carolina-based employer for discrimination. Doc. 1. This Court transferred her case to the United States District Court for the District of South Carolina. Doc. 5. Over four years later, she began sending letters to this Court variously addressed to judges and the United States Attorney, including her most recent “motion for relief for this case.” Docs. 6-9. In it she raises defamation, harassment, and constitutional tort claims that were not alleged in her previous suit.¹ Compare doc. 9, with doc. 1 at 2 (asserting Title VII and Americans with Disabilities Act claims). Since her case has been transferred, the Court DENIES that motion as moot. Doc. 9. Mutcherson must file a new lawsuit and be subject to this Court's $400 filing fee if she wishes to pursue new claims. She cannot dodge that expense by filing motions in a transferred case.

SO ORDERED, this 13th day of March, 2017.
