ORDER

Frederick Leburn Myers filed a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus under 28 U.S.C. § 2254, challenging various defects in his state criminal case. Doc. 1. The Court recommended dismissal of his petition, given that his “state criminal case remains open, though well aged,” with an “active docket” including “competency evaluations, evidentiary hearings, and the withdrawal of counsel [that] have taken their toll on the expedient resolution of the case.” Doc. 4 at 1 (citing State v. Myers, CR15-0463 (Chatham County Super. Ct.)); see attached (docket sheet). Myers disputes that characterization, arguing that “only one hearing has been held in over 40 months” and that, contrary to what has been memorialized on the public docket, no trial date has ever been set. Doc. 5 (objections to report and recommendation) at 3.

Regardless, Myers does not dispute that his criminal prosecution is indeed still ongoing, and that he seeks federal habeas relief under § 2254 both without first receiving any final state court “judgment” and without pursuing any form of state habeas relief. Doc. 5; see 28 U.S.C. § 2254 (the section applies only to prisoners held “in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court” and “shall not be granted unless it appears that the applicant has exhausted the remedies available in the courts of the [convicting] State.”) (emphasis added). His § 2254 petition thus is DISMISSED without prejudice as it is both premature and unexhausted.

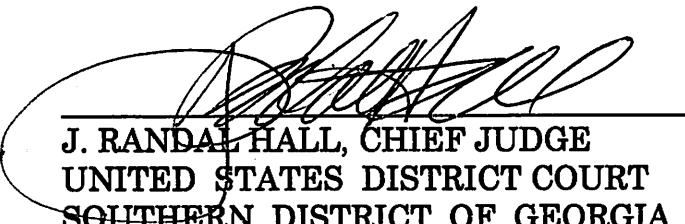

Myers also argues that his petition should have been evaluated under 28 U.S.C. § 2241, which does not require a final state court judgment. Doc. 5; see Hughes v. Att’y Gen. of Fla., 377 F.3d 1258, 1261-62 (11th Cir. 2004) (pretrial detainees alleging that their continued detention violates the constitution may pursue habeas relief under § 2241, as they are not “in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court” within the meaning of § 2254). It does, however, still require exhaustion. Wilkinson v. Dotson, 544 U.S. 74, 79 (2005) (both § 2254 and § 2241 petitions “require a petitioner to fully exhaust state remedies”); Thomas v. Crosby, 371 F.3d 782, 812 (11th Cir. 2004) (Tjoflat, J., concurring) (“Among the most fundamental common law requirements of § 2241 is that petitioners must first exhaust their state court remedies.”); see also Santiago-Lugo v. Warden, 785 F.3d 467, 475 (11th Cir. 2015) (noting that the judicially created exhaustion requirement under § 2241 is not jurisdictional, but remains a prerequisite to pursuing habeas relief). And Myers admits that he has not filed a state habeas petition challenging his pre-trial detention. Doc. 1 at 2-6; Harvey v. Corbin, 2011 WL 4369828 at * 2 (S.D. Ga. Aug. 12, 2011) (petition unexhausted where petitioner “has not alleged, and there is nothing in the record to suggest, that he filed a state habeas petition challenging his pre-trial detention.”). Therefore, in the alternative, his petition must still be DISMISSED without prejudice so that he may exhaust his available state remedies.¹

After a careful, de novo review of the file, the Court concurs with the Magistrate Judge's Report and Recommendation. Accordingly, the Report and Recommendation of the Magistrate Judge is ADOPTED as the opinion of the Court and petitioner's 28 U.S.C. § 2254 petition is DISMISSED. Petitioner is also not entitled to a Certificate of Appealability, rendering moot any request for in forma pauperis status on appeal.

ORDER ENTERED at Augusta, Georgia, this 7th day of May, 2018.
