or magistrate judge of the United States shall disqualify himself in any proceeding in which his impartiality might reasonably be questioned." The goal of this particular statute is to avoid even the appearance of partiality even though no actual partiality exists. Liljeberg v. Health Services Acquisition Corp., 486 U.S. 847, 860 (1988). Using the "objective" standard articulated in Liljeberg, the court must ask "whether a reasonable person with knowledge of all the facts would conclude that the judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned." United States v. Holland,

The Ninth Circuit has laid out the general principles in Section 455(a):

519 F.3d 909, 913 (9th Cir. 2008) (citation omitted).

Section 455(a) asks whether a reasonable person perceives a significant risk that the judge will resolve the case on a basis other than the merits. The reasonable person is not someone who is hypersensitive or unduly suspicious, but rather is a well-informed, thoughtful observer. The standard must not be so broadly construed that it becomes, in effect, presumptive, so that recusal is mandated upon the merest unsubstantiated suggestion of personal bias or prejudice.

Holland, 519 F.3d at 913 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted) (emphasis added).

Applying these principles to the present case, I must first examine the facts surrounding the instant motion, because recusal under Section 455(a) is "necessarily fact-driven and may turn on subtleties in the particular case." Id. The analysis under this section requires "an independent examination of the unique facts and circumstances of the particular claim at issue." Id.

On December 13, 2016, Gumataotao filed the instant motion. ECF No. 28. On that same day, Gumataotao filed a similar motion to disqualify myself in two other cases: Heath v. Evans, Adversary Proceeding No. 16-00002 (ECF No. 32); and In re Takano, Bankruptcy Case No. 15-00108 (ECF No. 97). On that same day, I denied a separate motion to disqualify filed on December 9, 2016, by Gumataotao and his co-counsel, in Fernandez v. Guam Education Board et al., Civil Case No. 16-00080 (ECF No. 27).

The basis for disqualification in all of these four cases is that my "impartiality might reasonably be questioned" because Gumataotao is counsel for Plaintiff William C. Bischoff, who is suing my brother Phillip J. Tydingco, in Bischoff v. Rapadas, Weisenberger, and Tydingco, Superior Court of Guam CV01179-14 (hereinafter "Bischoff"). In that case, the plaintiff is seeking over half a million in monetary damages from the defendants. Gumataotao's entry of appearance in Bischoff was made on December 6, 2016.

In the decision I issued in Fernandez, I questioned Gumataotao's reasons for my disqualification as suspect. Gumataotao is counsel for debtors in thirty bankruptcy cases,² one adversary proceeding,³ and two civil cases,⁴ which are all currently pending before me. Yet, Gumataotao has failed to file motions for disqualification in all of these proceedings. Aside from the present motion, as noted above, he filed only three other motions for disqualification out of the thirty-three cases he has before me. In addition, Gumataotao appeared before me on December 9, 2016, three days after his entry of appearance in Bischoff, in two bankruptcy matters⁵ and yet, Gumataotao did not question my presiding over those two hearings. Certainly, if Gumataotao genuinely believed that an appearance of partiality exists on my part, because he is counsel to the plaintiff who is suing my brother, he would have asked that I be disqualified in all the cases he has before me. But he did not do that. Instead, he only asked that I be disqualified in four cases.

To cherry-pick cases that he wants me to be disqualified from, I viewed this as judge-

A day after I issued my decision in Fernandez, in his attempt to cure the hole in his argument and to discredit my reasoning for the denial, Gumataotao filed additional twenty-two motions for disqualification on December 14, 2016.⁶ Despite these additional filings, I continue to find Gumataotao's motion to disqualify as suspect, given the timing of when these motions were filed.

Moreover, the U.S. Supreme Court explained that:

... § 455(a) expands the protection of § 455(b), but duplicates some of its protection as well—not only with regard to bias and prejudice but also with regard to interest and relationship. Within the area of overlap, it is unreasonable to interpret § 455(a) (unless the language requires it) as implicitly eliminating a limitation explicitly set forth in §455(b). It would obviously be wrong, for example, to hold that "impartiality could reasonably be questioned" simply because one of the parties is in the fourth degree of relationship to the judge." Section 455(b)(5), which addresses the matter of relationship specifically, ends the disability at the third degree of relationship, and that should obviously govern for purposes of §455(a) as well. Similarly, §455(b)(1), which addresses the matter of personal bias and prejudice specifically, contains the "extrajudicial source" limitation—and that limitation (since nothing in the text contradicts it) should govern for purposes of §455(a) as well.

Liteky v. United States, 510 U.S. 540, 552-53 (1994). The requirement that a judge recuse herself because of a relationship in a proceeding is specifically governed under Section 455(b)(5). That section requires that a judge disqualify herself if she or a person within third degree of relationship is "a party to the proceeding . . . is acting as a lawyer in the proceeding . . . is known by the judge to have an interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding . . . is to the judge's knowledge likely to be a material witness in the proceeding." 28 U.S.C. §455(b)(5). Although my brother falls within the third degree of relationship, he is not a party to this proceeding. Gumataotao points to no facts that would allow a reasonable person to conclude that my brother is a party to this litigation or has an interest in a party to this litigation. I also note that Gumataotao himself is not a party to the Bischoff litigation but rather, he is merely counsel to the plaintiff.

II. CONCLUSION

After having thoroughly reviewed the facts particular to this case and the facts surrounding the motions to disqualify in the other cases, there is an absence of a legitimate reason for me to disqualify myself from this case. A reasonable person with knowledge of all the facts would not find that my impartiality might reasonably be questioned. Accordingly, based on the foregoing, the motion to disqualify is hereby DENIED.

SO ORDERED.
