PLAINTIFF’S SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE TO DEFENDANT AT&T MOBILITY LLC’S MOTION TO COMPEL ARBITRATION, AND TO
AT&T MOBILITY LLC’S CITATION TO SUPPLEMENTAL AUTHORITY

NOW COMES the Plaintiff, JOSE TRUJILLO, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, by and through his attorneys, LARRY D. DRURY, LTD., and in supplement to his Response to Defendant AT&T Mobility LLC’s (AT&T) Motion to Compel Arbitration and Dismiss, and in response to AT&T’s citation to supplemental authority, the Plaintiff states as follows:

I. AT&T’S ARBITRATION AGREEMENT IS PROCEDURALLY
UNCONSCIONABLE WHERE, BY ITS DESIGN, CONSUMERS WOULD HAVE INCURRED SUBSTANTIAL FEES HAD THEY NOT AGREED TO ITS TERMS

The court in Kinkel v. Cingular Wireles LLC held that “the issue of unconscionability should be examined with reference to all of the circumstances surrounding the transaction.” 857 N.E.2d 250, 263 (2006). The Bess II court reinforced that mandate only a few weeks ago, where it held that “[i]n our view, under Illinois law the procedural unconscionability of an arbitration provision may be informed by the facts and circumstances surrounding the making of the contract...and questions regarding the facts and circumstances surrounding the making of that contract are relevant in determining whether the arbitration clause itself is procedurally unconscionable. Bess v. DirecTV ___N.E.2d___, 2008 WL 740344 at *6 (Ill.App.5 Dist., 2008).

In the case at bar, the facts and circumstances surrounding Plaintiff's "agreement" to AT&T's arbitration clause vis a vis its Terms of Service demand a finding of unconscionability where Plaintiff would have been forced to pay a substantial fee to Apple Computer, Inc. (Apple) had he not agreed to AT&T's terms.

Until a consumer begins the process of activating his iPhone with AT&T, he has no knowledge of AT&T's Terms of Service or its arbitration clause. Therefore, a consumer must purchase the phone from Apple prior to beginning the activation process and learning of AT&T's Terms of Service. This poses a problem for the consumer because, as Apple admits in its response to Plaintiff's interrogatories, a consumer must remove the iPhone from its packaging, and connect it to a computer, in order to activate the iPhone. See Apple's Response to Plaintiff's Interrogatory #11, attached as Exhibit A. Once removed from its packaging, the consumer is charged a 10% restocking fee (which can be as high as $50.00) should he return the phone - even if the return is made within the 14 day return period. See Apple's Response to Plaintiff's Interrogatory #12, attached as Exhibit A.

Under these circumstances, a consumer who does not agree to AT&T's arbitration clause (which he first learns of after removing the phone from its packaging, connecting it to his computer, and beginning the activation process) is faced with a myriad of options, all of which are equally unfair and unconscionable. A consumer who does not agree to AT&T's arbitration clause may (1) not activate the iPhone with AT&T, leaving the consumer with nothing more than a useless $500.00 paperweight since AT&T and Apple have contracted to make AT&T the sole cellular service provider of the iPhone; (2) return the iPhone to Apple and pay a 10% restocking fee; or (3) be forced to agree to the Terms of Service and arbitration clause, and become locked into AT&T's two-year service contract, to avoid the equally unconscionable first two options. Apple and AT&T have created a process that, by design, forces the consumer to agree to AT&T's arbitration clause, or suffer a loss, thereby depriving Plaintiff of the most sacred “meaningful choice.”

Apple claims that on certain occasions it may not charge the restocking fee. See Apple’s Response to Plaintiff’s Interrogatory #12, attached as Exhibit A. Those occasions/exceptions may include, according only to Apple’s Response, a situation where the consumer does not agree with AT&T’s Terms of Service. This too is problematic because, as with the terms of the battery replacement program from which this case arises, neither Apple nor AT&T disclosed this (or any) waiver of the restocking fee to the consumer. In fact, Apple’s receipt, which is the only document Plaintiff receives upon purchase of the iPhone that even remotely addresses the iPhone’s return policy, states that Plaintiff will incur a “$49.90 fee if opened”, even if returned by the indicated return date. See third column of Plaintiff’s Receipt titled “Return Date”, attached hereto as Exhibit B. It makes no mention of any exception, let alone a waiver of the restocking fee. Further, Apple makes no mention of any exception to the restocking fee in its Sales & Refund Policy; rather, Apple clearly states that “Apple will assess a 10% restocking fee on any opened hardware or accessory.” See pages 19-20 of Apple’s Sales & Refund Policy, attached as Exhibit C. In fact, mention of any waiver or exception to Apple’s restocking fee can only be found in Apple’s Response to Plaintiff’s Interrogatories, and nowhere else. This begs the question: does such a waiver or exception even exist, and if it does, how could a consumer have ever known of it?

By design, AT&T’s arbitration agreement is procedurally unconscionable where the process AT&T and Apple have created to activate the iPhone requires the consumer to remove it from its packaging - which immediately places the consumer under the 10% restocking fee return policy before the consumer even learns of AT&T’s arbitration clause. At that crucial point in the process, a consumer is forced to either agree to AT&T’s arbitration clause or pay a stiff 10% penalty for disagreement. Such a process is grossly unfair and clearly unconscionable.

II. DEFENDANT'S RELIANCE UPON BESS V. DIRECTV AS AUTHORITY FOR THIS CASE IS UNFOUNDED WHERE THE FACTS OF BESS ARE DISTINGUISHABLE

The Defendant has filed the court's ruling in Bess v. DirecTV, ___ N.E.2d ___, 2008 WL 740344 at *6 (Ill.App.5 Dist., 2008) as supplemental authority in this case. However, the Defendant has failed to mention that the facts in Bess could not differ more from the facts in this case. At issue in the pending motion is the enforceability of AT&T's arbitration clause. The arbitration clause in Bess is in no way similar to the one at hand. In Bess, DirecTV's arbitration clause did not foreclose, and in fact provided for, maintenance of the suit as a class action. Id. at *9. In the case at bar, AT&T's arbitration provision expressly prohibits class arbitration and class actions, and forces the Plaintiff to waive his right to both a trial by jury and the right to bring his claim as a class action. Additionally, while the court found that the arbitration clause at issue in Bess provided for payment of all expenses that the plaintiff may incur under the rules of the American Arbitration Association, AT&T's arbitration provision calls for AT&T to pay only the costs of filing, administration, and arbitrator fees, but is conveniently silent as to expenses for travel, witnesses, and the costs for any proof produced at the request of the arbitrator.

Further, the court in Bess found that "[a]lthough Bess did not receive the customer agreement at the time she ordered the service, under the terms of the Customer Agreement, she was not bound by its terms until after she had read the Customer Agreement and continued to receive the service. Accordingly, the "deactivation fee" [similar to the 'restocking fee' in the case at bar] set forth in the 2001 Customer Agreement would not have applied to Bess had she cancelled the service upon receipt of that version of the agreement." Id. at *7. Unlike Bess, Plaintiff herein, under the terms of the Defendants' own return policy, would have been assessed the 10% restocking fee. This is a crucial distinguishing factor between Bess and the instant case, as the court in Bess struggled with this issue in both the majority and dissenting opinions. The majority took great care to point out that Bess would not incur any penalty for return of her satellite television equipment, indicating that this was among the deciding factors against finding it so procedurally unconscionable as to be unenforceable. Id. The basis for the dissenting opinion in fact was that “the Customer Agreement did not provide for the reimbursement of her equipment costs...nor is there any indication in the record that she could have returned the equipment without incurring a penalty.” *Id. at *15-18.* Because, among other things, Bess would not incur a return penalty, the majority in Bess found the arbitration agreement to be enforceable but nonetheless still, to a degree, procedurally unconscionable. Here, Plaintiff would incur a return fee, and as the dissent stated in Bess, “this would deny [the consumer] of a meaningful choice in determining whether to accept the arbitration provision...” and would permit AT&T to “hook the consumer into using its product and then impose upon the consumer its carefully drawn contract when it is far less likely to be rejected.” *Id. at *16.* The dissent even went so far as to say that under these terms, “it would be unconscionable to enforce the arbitration provision because Bess was deprived of a meaningful choice in accepting the terms of the agreement.” Id.

Given the facts surrounding Plaintiff’s “forced agreement” to AT&T’s arbitration provision, and the unsavory alternatives that serve to either compel Plaintiff’s agreement or punish his disagreement, AT&T’s arbitration provision should be found unconscionable and its Motion to Compel Arbitration should be denied.

WHEREFORE, the Plaintiff, Jose Trujillo, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated, hereby respectfully requests that this Court enter an order denying AT&T Mobility LLC’s Motion to Compel Arbitration and Dismiss, and for such further relief as this Court deems just.

JOSE TRUJILLO, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated,

INTERROGATORY NO. 11:

State whether or not it is possible for a consumer to activate an iPhone with AT&T Mobility, LLC, without removing the iPhone from its packaging/box? If yes, state the process for doing same.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 11:

Apple refers to and incorporates by reference its Preliminary Statement, Objections to Plaintiff's Definitions and Instructions, and General Objections as though set forth in full herein. Apple further objects to the extent that it seeks information to which plaintiff has equal access and/or which is already in the possession, custody, or control of plaintiff. Apple further objects to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is overbroad, unduly burdensome and does not seek the discovery of information relevant to the resolution of Apple's pending summary judgment motion nor to the claims and defenses in this case.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Apple responds as follows:
In order to activate an iPhone, the iPhone must be connected to a computer.

INTERROGATORY NO. 12:

Does Apple charge a 10% restocking fee on iPhones returned within 14 days after purchase if the iPhone was removed from its packaging? If no, please explain Apple's return/exchange policy regarding the iPhone.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 12:

Apple refers to and incorporates by reference its Preliminary Statement, Objections to Plaintiff's Definitions and Instructions, and General Objections as though set forth in full herein. Apple further objects to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is compound and contains discrete subparts which exceed the allowable number of Interrogatories pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 33.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Apple responds as follows:

A customer who has purchased an iPhone from an Apple retail store may return it to any Apple retail store within 14 days for a refund of the original purchase price, so long as the iPhone is unopened in its original packaging. If a customer who has opened the iPhone box wishes to return the iPhone to an Apple retail store (an "open-box" return), he may do so within 14 days after purchase if the product is still in new condition. Depending on the reason for return, Apple may refund the original purchase price less a 10-percent restocking fee for open-box returns. However, there are several circumstances in which a customer may return an open-box iPhone to the Apple retail store without being assessed a restocking fee. A customer may return an iPhone within thirty (30) days without being charged a restocking fee if the customer indicates that he or she does not agree with AT&T's terms and conditions of service, is unable to qualify for a service contract with AT&T, or is unable to get acceptable cellular reception in their primary areas of use. A customer may also return an iPhone within thirty (30) days without being charged a restocking fee if the customer indicates that he or she does not agree to the terms of Apple's product warranty.

INTERROGATORY NO. 13:

What studies has Apple conducted regarding the lifespan and/or durability of its iPhone battery? For each such study, please identify the individual that conducted the study, when the study was commenced / completed, and the results of each study.

RESPONSE TO REQUEST FOR INTERROGATORY NO. 13:

Apple refers to and incorporates by reference its Preliminary Statement, Objections to Plaintiff's Definitions and Instructions, and General Objections as though set forth in full herein. Apple objects to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it fails to describe the information sought with reasonable particularity. Apple further objects to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is vague and ambiguous as to time and in its use of the terms "studies," "durability" and "lifespan." Apple further objects to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is overbroad and does not seek the discovery of information relevant to the resolution of Apple's pending summary judgment motion nor to the claims and defenses in this case. Apple further objects to this Interrogatory to the extent that it seeks information protected by common law, constitutional, and/or statutory rights of privacy. Apple further objects to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is compound and contains discrete subparts which exceed the allowable number of Interrogatories pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 33.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Apple responds as follows: Apple's component suppliers test the cycle life of batteries used in the iPhone. In addition, Apple tested the batteries before the iPhone was launched and confirmed that the batteries met specification.

- Standard Shipping: This option is free on all qualifying products. Products shipped via standard service are normally delivered within five business days after shipment.
- 2-Day Shipping: For an additional charge, Apple offers this expedited shipping option for most products. Products shipped via two-day service prior to 5:00 p.m. EST are normally delivered by 4:30 p.m. local time two business days after shipment.
- 2-3 Day International Shipping: For an additional charge, Apple offers this expedited shipping option on products shipped from international locations. Products shipped prior to 5:00 p.m. EST are normally delivered by 4:30 p.m. local time two to three business days after shipment.
- Overnight Delivery: For an additional charge, Apple offers this expedited shipping option on most of Apple's products. Products shipped prior to 5:00 p.m. EST via overnight service are normally delivered by 3:00 p.m. local time one business day after shipment. Overnight delivery is not available for orders shipping to Alaska and Hawaii.

Remember that these estimates are for time in transit only, and that they do not apply until the product leaves Apple's facilities. As the delivery of your order is beyond Apple's control once your order leaves Apple's facilities, Apple cannot assume liability for late deliveries, regardless of the delivery method you specify.

Signature is required for delivery: Most of Apple's shipments contain valuable computer equipment. If you will not be at the shipping address to accept delivery of your product, consider shipping the item to an address where someone you trust will be available to sign for your package. Please note that Apple is not able to adjust the shipping address once a package has left Apple's warehouse. Title and risk of loss to all products will pass to you on delivery. Please note that, if you are willing to assume the risks of delivering your order without a signature, you may authorize Apple to arrange for a delivery that does not require anyone to be at the delivery address. Click here for details and the applicable terms and conditions.

Undeliverable Packages: Occasionally packages are returned to Apple as undeliverable.

When the carrier returns an undeliverable package to Apple, please contact Apple to make arrangements for reshipment.

Failed Delivery Attempts: Most of Apple's carriers make three attempts to deliver a package. After three delivery attempts, the carrier will return the package to Apple.

Order Processing

The estimated shipment date on your order is based on product availability, payment processing time, and warehouse processing time and does not include transit time. Apple does not begin payment processing until Apple receives all the information that it needs and full payment or a full authorization, in the case of credit card, Apple Credit, and lease orders.

Apple will begin payment processing for orders placed on weekends or holidays on the next business day. Business days are Monday through Friday, excluding federal holidays.

Your order for in-stock items that are eligible for same-day shipping must be received before your local time of 2:00 p.m., pending payment processing, for there to be adequate remaining time in the day for your order to be dispatched.

Apple ships some products from locations outside the United States.

Overnight shipping is not available on products shipped from outside the United States.

Please review the Product Availability section below for more information regarding order processing and product availability times.

Prices

The Apple Store endeavors to offer you competitive prices on current Apple products, selected Sale and Apple Certified Reconditioned products, and third-party products. Your total order price will include the price of the product on the day of shipping plus any applicable sales tax and shipping charges. Apple reserves the right to change prices for products displayed at the Apple Store at any time and particularly to correct pricing errors that appear on the Store.

Should Apple reduce its price on any shipped product within 14 calendar days of shipment, you may contact Apple Sales Support at 1-800-676-2775 to request a refund or credit of the difference between the price you were charged and the current selling price. To receive the refund or credit you must contact Apple within 14 calendar days of the price change.

Product Availability

Apple makes every effort to ship your product according to the estimated lead times provided by the Apple Store at checkout. The estimated lead times are in business days (Monday through Friday, excluding federal holidays). Lead times quoted on the checkout page are for orders that are partially shipped, meaning that items ship as soon as they are available. If you have requested a complete shipment, please add three to four additional days for transportation and order consolidation processing.

Although Apple makes every effort to ship your order according to the lead-time provided, shipping dates may change due to changes in supply. If the lead-time changes, Apple will contact you via email and provide a revised shipping estimate.

Apple encourages you to contact Apple Store Sales Support at 1-800-793-9378 for order status information or visit <http://www.apple.com/orderstatus>.

Given the popularity of some products, Apple may restrict the number of such items that you may purchase. Apple will post limitations on quantity on the Apple Store web site or will inform you of product purchase limits at the time it processes your order. Apple reserves the right to change quantities available for purchase at any time.

Apple makes every effort to supply you with the products you order, but there may be occasions when Apple confirms orders but learns that it cannot supply the ordered products, either at all or in the quantities ordered. These occasions can include when Apple learns that the products no longer are being manufactured or they otherwise become unavailable to Apple, when Apple cannot source components for the configuration you ordered, or when there was a pricing error at the Apple Store when you ordered. In those circumstances, Apple will contact you to inform you and, if you are interested, Apple may suggest alternative products that might meet your needs. If you do not wish to order alternative products, Apple will cancel your order for products Apple cannot supply and for any other products that you no longer wish to order as a result, and will refund your purchase price for those products.

By purchasing at the Apple Store, whether you place your order online or by telephone, you acknowledge that you have had an opportunity to review Apple's warranty terms, have done so to the degree you need to be familiar with them, and you accept their terms and conditions, including the limitations, exclusions, and disclaimers in them.

Non-Apple-branded, third-party products are, to the greatest extent permitted by law, sold "AS IS" by the Apple Store, but may be accompanied by their manufacturers' standard warranties. Apple sells "AS IS" products as is, where is, and with all faults, and without express or implied warranties from Apple. If you have questions about manufacturers' warranties that accompany such products, please see the product description page or contact Apple by writing to:

Certain state laws do not allow limitations on implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain damages. If these laws apply to you, some or all of the disclaimers, exclusions or limitations may not apply to you, and you might have additional rights.

Products sold through the Apple Store that do not bear the Apple Brand name are serviced and supported exclusively by their manufacturers in accordance with any terms and conditions packaged with the products (unless the third-party product is pre-installed in an Apple-branded computer). Apple's Limited Warranty does not apply to products that are not Apple-branded, even if packaged or sold with Apple products. Please contact the manufacturer directly for technical support and customer service.

Apple Store Software Licenses

Your use of Apple-branded software is on the terms of the license in effect for the software at the time of purchase. You will be asked to agree to the terms of the applicable license at the time that you install the software or, if your software includes a license that you can read before you break the seal or sticker on the software media packaging, through your act of breaking the software media packaging seal or sticker. You may review examples of some of Apple's licenses, including limitations, by clicking the appropriate link below. Please be aware, however, that your purchase is subject to the particular license that accompanies the software and you must agree to the terms and conditions of that license when you install the software. That license may differ from the licenses you can review here. Be certain to read the applicable license carefully before you install the software.

Return and Refund Policy

If you are not satisfied with your Apple purchase of a product, please call 1-800-676-2775 for a Return Material Authorization (RMA) request within 14 calendar days of the receipt of the product. Configure-to-order, personalized or other customized products may not be returned for refund or exchange under any circumstances unless such product is Dead on Arrival (see the section below for more detailed information on such Dead on Arrival products). If the item is returnable and you send it back to us unopened in the original box, Apple will offer you a refund based on your original method of payment. You must return the product to the Apple warehouse within 14 calendar days of the issuance of the RMA. All products must be packed in the original, unmarked packaging including any accessories, manuals, documentation and registration that shipped with the product. Apple will assess a 10% restocking fee on any opened hardware or accessory. If you purchased your order using an Apple Business Lease, Apple may ask you to provide a major credit card (Visa, MasterCard, American Express, or Discover) so Apple can assess the 10% restocking fee.

Please note that Apple does not permit the return of or offer refunds for the following products:

- Product that is custom configured to your specifications, including personalized products
- Opened memory, including storage devices such as memory sticks (but excluding disc drives)
- Opened software (Note that you may return software after rejecting the licensing terms, provided the software is not installed on a computer. However, if your software includes a license that you can read before you break the seal or sticker on the software media packaging, you may not return the software once you break the software media packaging seal or sticker.)

NOTE: Apple recommends that you (1) use a carrier that offers shipment tracking for all returns and (2) either insure your package for safe return to Apple or declare the full value of the shipment so that you are completely protected if the shipment is lost or damaged in transit. If you choose not to (1) use a carrier that offers tracking or (2) insure or declare the full value of the product, you will be responsible for any loss or damage to the product during shipping.

Dead On Arrival (DOA) Product: System Failure Out of the Box

An Apple-branded hardware product is considered DOA if it shows symptoms of a hardware failure, preventing basic operability, when you first use it after opening the box. If you believe that your product is DOA, please call AppleCare Technical Support at 1-800-APL-CARE (1-800-275-2273) within 30 calendar days of the invoice date. AppleCare Technical Support will determine whether the product is DOA and offer you the following options:

- Replacement: Apple, at its expense, will ship another of the same product . AppleCare Technical Support will put you in touch with an AppleStore Sales Support Representative who will arrange for replacement and the DOA product's return.
- Service: You may have the product repaired. However, once you choose that option, you may not request replacement of the product.

If AppleCare Technical Support determines that a returned product is not DOA, Apple will apply Apple's standard product warranty to the product. Further, if AppleCare determines that you have misrepresented a returned product's condition and that the product is not DOA, Apple may impose a $400 handling fee.

This DOA policy applies only to Apple-branded hardware products currently offered at the Apple Store. As new products are offered, Apple reserves the right to determine whether or not this policy applies. This DOA policy does not apply to third-party products that do not bear the Apple brand name. You must call the manufacturer directly with any third-party product issues.

APO/FPO Addresses: If you're an APO/FPO customer and you're outside the domestic delivery area, the standard Apple Return and Refund Policy applies — with the exception that you're responsible for shipping the product back to a state-side return address, plus handling, customs, and inventory liability. Since you're responsible for the safe delivery of any product you're returning to Apple, we recommend that you insure it against loss.
