Overview - In 1972, an intrepid group of teachers and students at New Trier High School (Winnetka, IL) formed the Center for Self-Directed Learning. Each student would design their own program instead of following the daily grind of standardized courses with off-the-shelf textbooks, canned lectures, and, of course, the all-important final exam. Approximately 500 students took the plunge into the unknown during the Center's 10 years. Now, more than 35 Center graduates look back on their ... See more details below
