MIDDLE DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA

AUDUBON REAL ESTATE
ASSOCIATES, L.L.C.

CIVIL ACTION

VERSUS

15-115-SDD-SCR

RULING

Before the Court is a *Motion to Dismiss*¹ filed by Defendant, Audubon Realty, L.L.C., to which is the Plaintiff, Audubon Real Estate Associates, L.L.C., filed a *Memorandum in Opposition*². For the reasons which follow the motion is denied.

I. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

This case arises from a dispute over the use of the word “Audubon” in connection with real estate sales and services. The Defendant, Audubon Realty, L.L.C. is a Louisiana company whose principal place of business is New Orleans, Louisiana. The name “Audubon Realty, L.L.C.” is a trade name registered under Louisiana law which has been in use since 2003.³ Audubon Real Estate Associates, L.L.C., whose principal place of business is Baton Rouge, Louisiana, was formed in 2014 and assumed the business activities of what was formerly known as Beau Box Residential Real Estate, L.L.C. In February of 2015, Audubon Realty, L.L.C. made written demand on Audubon Real Estate Associates, L.L.C. to cease and desist using the name “Audubon” in connection with real estate sales and services. Thereafter, Audubon Real Estate Associates, L.L.C. brought this Declaratory Judgment action seeking a determination of trademark rights.

Defendant, Audubon Realty, L.L.C., moves to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction or, alternatively, for lack of venue.⁴

II. LAW AND ANALYSIS

A. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

The Defendant argues that that there is no federal question jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331 or 28 U.S.C. 1338.⁵ Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) governs challenges to a court's subject matter jurisdiction. "A case is properly dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction when the court lacks the statutory or constitutional power to adjudicate the case."⁶ The plaintiff bears the burden of demonstrating that subject matter jurisdiction exists. "Courts may dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction on any one of three bases: (1) the complaint alone; (2) the complaint supplemented by undisputed facts in the record; or (3) the complaint supplemented by undisputed facts plus the court's resolution of disputed facts."⁷ The court may consider matters outside the pleadings, such as affidavits, to resolve a factual challenge to subject matter jurisdiction.

⁴ Rec. Doc. 8.

⁵ The Lanham Act, provides:

The district and territorial courts of the United States shall have original jurisdiction and the courts of appeal of the United States (other than the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit) shall have appellate jurisdiction, of all actions arising under this chapter, without regard to the amount in controversy or to diversity or lack of diversity of the citizenship of the parties. 15 U.S.C. §1121.

28 U.S.C. § 1338(a) provides:

The district courts shall have original jurisdiction of any civil action arising under any Act of Congress relating to patents, plant variety protection, copyrights and trade-marks. No State court shall have jurisdiction over any claims for relief arising under any Act of Congress relating to patents, plant variety protection, or copyrights.

⁷ Clark v. Tarrant County, 798 F.2d 736, 741 (5th Cir.1986) (citing Williamson v. Tucker, 645 F.2d 404, 413 (5th Cir.1981).

Defendant challenges the Court's subject matter jurisdiction on two grounds. First, Defendant maintains that because the trade name at issue is not federally registered there is no Lanham Act case and, thus, no federal jurisdiction under either 28 U.S.C. § 1331 or 28 U.S.C. 1338. Secondly, Defendant maintains that the Complaint is devoid of allegations of any significant effect on interstate commerce, which is a necessary element of a Lanham Act cause of action. Because the challenge to the Court's jurisdiction presents a question as to the existence of a cause of action under the Lanham Act, the Court evaluates it as a factual attack.⁸

The Declaratory Judgment Act provides, "in a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction ... any court of the United States, upon the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought."⁹

As in this case, declaratory judgment actions asserting intellectual property rights are often brought by potential infringers seeking a declaration of non-infringement or invalidity.¹⁰ Defendant contends that, since there is no cause of action under the Lanham Act, there is no federal jurisdiction. Although the Defendant does not specifically argue the absence of a case or controversy required to support Article III jurisdiction, it is the ultimate issue to be decided.

⁸ "Where the defendant's challenge to the court's jurisdiction is also a challenge to the existence of a federal cause of action, the proper course of action for the district court (assuming that the plaintiff's federal claim is not immaterial and made solely for the purpose of obtaining federal jurisdiction and is not insubstantial and frivolous) is to find that jurisdiction exists and deal with the objection as a direct attack on the merits of the plaintiff's case." Williamson v. Tucker, 645 F.2d 404, 415 (5th Cir. 1981).

¹⁰ See, e.g., Lang v. Pac. Marine & Supply Co., Ltd., 895 F.2d 761, 763 (Fed.Cir.1990); Young v. Vannerson, 612 F. Supp. 2d 829, 838 (S.D. Tex. 2009).

Trademark¹¹ infringement claims are governed by the Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1051 *et seq.*¹² Under the Lanham Act, a trademark may be “any word, name, symbol, or device, or any combination thereof” that is used or intended to be used “to identify and distinguish” a person's goods “from those manufactured or sold by others and to indicate the source of the goods, even if that source is unknown.”¹³ “The protectability of unregistered marks is governed generally by the same principles that qualify a mark for registration under the Lanham Act”, and “[t]he key is whether the mark is ‘capable of distinguishing the applicant's goods from those of others.’”¹⁴ Contrary to the Defendant’s contention, a mark need not be registered in order to obtain protection under the Lanham Act because ownership of trademarks is established by use, not by registration.¹⁵ The Defendant maintains that the name or mark “Audubon Realty, L.L.C.” has been in continual use since 2003.¹⁶

It is undisputed that the Defendant demanded that Plaintiff cease and desist its use of the name in dispute.¹⁷ The cease and desist demand states “[y]our activity is actionable under federal and state law and causes you to be liable for . . . unfair competition, trademark infringement, trademark dilution, false designation of origin and unfair trade practices”¹⁸, most, if not all, of which are actionable under the Lanham Act. Defendant is correct in its assertion that the cease and desist letter does not create jurisdiction. However, the facts alleged in the Complaint substantiate subject matter jurisdiction as a case and controversy arising under federal law, namely the Lanham Act. The United States Supreme Court's reasoning in the *MedImmune*¹⁹ case informs this Court's decision. The dispute in this case is "definite and concrete".²⁰ The Plaintiff has taken "significant, concrete steps to conduct [allegedly] infringing activity."²¹ The Plaintiff is currently using a close derivation of the name in dispute. The trademark at issue need not be registered to give rise to a claim under the Lanham Act.²² A justiciable case or controversy exists "where the defendant takes a position that puts the declaratory judgment plaintiff in the position of either pursuing arguably illegal behavior or abandoning that which he claims he has the right to do."²³ In the context of trademarks, the purpose of a suit for declaratory judgment is to allow a person uncertain of his rights to avoid the risks attendant to delayed adjudication.²⁴

The Defendant further argues that subject matter jurisdiction is lacking for the reason that "plaintiff has not alleged any facts showing a substantial effect on interstate commerce."²⁵ Under the terms of the Lanham Act, the alleged infringing activity must occur "in commerce." The Act provides that:

"Any person who shall, without the consent of the registrant--
(a) use in commerce any reproduction, counterfeit, copy, or colorable imitation of a registered mark in connection with the sale, offering for

“A substantial effect on interstate commerce is present when the trademark owner’s reputation and good will, built up by use of the mark in interstate commerce, are adversely affected by an intrastate infringement.”²⁷ The affidavit of the Plaintiff’s manager, Beau J. Box, reveals that the Plaintiff conducts business interstate under the allegedly infringing trade name.²⁸ The Complaint, exhibits, and affidavit suffice to show that the allegedly infringing trade name has been used by the Plaintiff “in commerce . . . in connection with the sale, offering for sale, distribution, or advertising of any goods or services”²⁹ thereby giving rise to a cause of action under the Lanham Act and jurisdiction of this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1338(a). Therefore, the Defendant’s *Motion to Dismiss*³⁰ for lack of subject matter jurisdiction shall be denied.

B. Venue

The Defendant also moves to dismiss the Complaint on the grounds of improper venue or, alternatively, to transfer the case to any district in which it could have been brought. Neither the Lanham Act nor the Declaratory Judgment Act contains any special venue provisions. Plaintiff contends that a “substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claim occurred” in the Middle District making venue proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(2).³¹ often the critical and controlling consideration' in adjudicating transfer of venue motions."³⁷ That principle guides the Court in this case.

The commencement of the alleged infringement is unclear. The Complaint alleges Audubon Real Estate Associates ("AREA") filed its organizational documents with the Louisiana Secretary of State on January 18, 2011.³⁸ However, the affidavit of AREA's manager attests that, "[o]n November 14, 2014, the name of Beau Box Residential Real Estate, L.L.C. was officially changed to Audubon Real Estate Associates, L.L.C. ("AREA")."³⁹ Yet, the affidavit attests as to the details of numerous real estate transactions by AREA which occurred prior to the November 2014 name change. Hence, the duration and commencement of the alleged infringement is unclear. What is clear is that the majority of AREA's transactions, some of which involve out of state buyers or sellers, involve property within the Middle District. The Complaint alleges that:

Plaintiff, Audubon Real Estate Associates, L.L.C., is a real estate broker that sells real estate in the city of Baton Rouge and the parishes surrounding Baton Rouge including East Baton Rouge, West Baton Rouge, East Feliciana, Iberville, Livingston, Pointe Coupee, St Helena, West Baton Rouge, West Feliciana, St Tammany, and Tangipahoa.⁴⁰

From the allegations of the Complaint, which are taken as true, and the affidavit of AREA's manager, the Court concludes that the alleged infringing conduct occurred substantially in the Middle District. Finally, the authority relied upon by the Defendant yields the same conclusion. As argued by Defendant, "the tortious wrong of trademark Accordingly, the Defendant’s *Motion to Dismiss*⁴² for improper venue shall be denied.

C. Transfer Venue

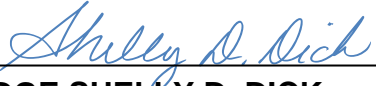

The Defendant also alternatively moves to transfer venue. However, because the Court has found that venue is proper in this district, the only grounds for transfer are pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a). The Defendant does not move for transfer on the grounds of forum non conveniens. Accordingly, the Defendant’s alternative motion for transfer of venue shall be denied.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons;

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED that the Defendant’s *Motion to Dismiss*⁴³ is DENIED.
