Although I have no specific recall, given that Jerry Williams was already serving a life sentence, I assumed that a plea agreement would have included testifying against the remaining defendant (Montemarano's client).

Tony:

In her Sentencing Memorandum for Hilton Thomas, Ms. Newberger cites you (at pp. 2, 3) for the point that the government offered a 30-year plea to your client prior to his trial. There is no reference to anything in writing, so she seems to be talking about a conversation with you. Do you recall that any such 30-year offer was premised on cooperation?
