Civil No. TMD 19-1328

MEMORANDUM OPINION GRANTING DEFENDANT’S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Plaintiff William H. seeks judicial review under 42 U.S.C. § 405(g) of a final decision of the Commissioner of Social Security (“Defendant” or the “Commissioner”) denying his application for disability insurance benefits under Title II of the Social Security Act. Before the Court are Plaintiff’s Motion for Summary Judgment and alternative motion for remand (ECF No. 8) and Defendant’s Motion for Summary Judgment (ECF No. 9).² Plaintiff contends that the administrative record does not contain substantial evidence to support the Commissioner’s decision that he is not disabled. No hearing is necessary. L.R. 105.6. For the reasons that follow, Defendant’s Motion for Summary Judgment (ECF No. 9) is GRANTED, Plaintiff’s

² The Fourth Circuit has noted that, “in social security cases, we often use summary judgment as a procedural means to place the district court in position to fulfill its appellate function, not as a device to avoid nontriable issues under usual Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56 standards.” Walls v. Barnhart, 296 F.3d 287, 289 n.2 (4th Cir. 2002). For example, “the denial of summary judgment accompanied by a remand to the Commissioner results in a judgment under sentence four of 42 U.S.C. § 405(g), which is immediately appealable.” Id.

Motion for Summary Judgment (ECF No. 8) is DENIED, and the Commissioner's final decision is AFFIRMED.

I

Background

On October 30, 2017, Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") Bonnie Hannan held a hearing in Washington, D.C., where Plaintiff and a vocational expert ("VE") testified. R. at 137-64. The ALJ thereafter found on April 13, 2018, that Plaintiff was not disabled from his alleged onset date of disability of December 17, 2014, through the date of the ALJ's decision. R. at 68-84. In so finding, the ALJ found that Plaintiff had not engaged in substantial, gainful activity since December 17, 2014, and that his spine disorder was a severe impairment. R. at 73. He did not, however, have an impairment or combination of impairments that met or medically equaled the severity of one of the impairments listed in 20 C.F.R. pt. 404, subpt. P, app. 1. R. at 73-74.

The ALJ then found that Plaintiff had the residual functional capacity ("RFC") to perform sedentary work as defined in 20 CFR 404.1567(a) except he can occasionally reach overhead bilaterally. He can occasionally climb ramps and stairs, but never climb ladders, ropes, and scaffolds. He can occasionally balance, stoop, kneel, crouch, and crawl. He can occasionally push and pull. [Plaintiff] can have moderate exposure to noise. [Plaintiff] must be able to change positions every thirty minutes, but [he] would remain on task.

R. at 74.³ In light of this RFC and the VE's testimony, the ALJ found that, although he could not perform his past relevant work as an assistant service manager, Plaintiff could perform other work in the national economy, such as an information clerk, appointment clerk, or order clerk.

³ "Sedentary work involves lifting no more than 10 pounds at a time and occasionally lifting or carrying articles like docket files, ledgers, and small tools." 20 C.F.R. § 404.1567(a). "Although a sedentary job is defined as one which involves sitting, a certain amount of walking and standing is often necessary in carrying out job duties. Jobs are sedentary if walking and standing are required occasionally and other sedentary criteria are met." Id.

R. at 77-78. The ALJ thus found that Plaintiff was not disabled from December 17, 2014, through April 13, 2018. R. at 78-79.

After the Appeals Council denied Plaintiff's request for review, Plaintiff filed on May 6, 2019, a complaint in this Court seeking review of the Commissioner's decision. Upon the parties' consent, this case was transferred to a United States Magistrate Judge for final disposition and entry of judgment. The case then was reassigned to the undersigned. The parties have briefed the issues, and the matter is now fully submitted.

II

Disability Determinations and Burden of Proof

The Social Security Act defines a disability as the inability to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment that can be expected to result in death or that has lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than twelve months. 42 U.S.C. §§ 423(d)(1)(A), 1382c(a)(3)(A); 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1505, 416.905. A claimant has a disability when the claimant is "not only unable to do his previous work but cannot, considering his age, education, and work experience, engage in any other kind of substantial gainful work which exists . . . in significant numbers either in the region where such individual lives or in several regions of the country." 42 U.S.C. §§ 423(d)(2)(A), 1382c(a)(3)(B).

To determine whether a claimant has a disability within the meaning of the Social Security Act, the Commissioner follows a five-step sequential evaluation process outlined in the regulations. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520, 416.920; see Barnhart v. Thomas, 540 U.S. 20, 24-25, 124 S. Ct. 376, 379-80 (2003). "If at any step a finding of disability or nondisability can be made, the [Commissioner] will not review the claim further." Thomas, 540 U.S. at 24, 124 S. Ct. at 379; see 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4), 416.920(a)(4). The claimant has the burden of production and proof at steps one through four. See Bowen v. Yuckert, 482 U.S. 137, 146 n.5, 107 S. Ct. 2287, 2294 n.5 (1987); Radford v. Colvin, 734 F.3d 288, 291 (4th Cir. 2013).

First, the Commissioner will consider a claimant's work activity. If the claimant is engaged in substantial gainful activity, then the claimant is not disabled. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(i), 416.920(a)(4)(i).

Second, if the claimant is not engaged in substantial gainful activity, the Commissioner looks to see whether the claimant has a "severe" impairment, i.e., an impairment or combination of impairments that significantly limits the claimant's physical or mental ability to do basic work activities. Pass v. Chater, 65 F.3d 1200, 1203 (4th Cir. 1995); see 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(c), 404.1522(a), 416.920(c), 416.922(a).⁴

Third, if the claimant has a severe impairment, then the Commissioner will consider the medical severity of the impairment. If the impairment meets or equals one of the presumptively disabling impairments listed in the regulations, then the claimant is considered disabled, regardless of age, education, and work experience. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(iii), 404.1520(d), 416.920(a)(4)(iii), 416.920(d); see Radford, 734 F.3d at 293.

Fourth, if the claimant's impairment is severe, but it does not meet or equal one of the presumptively disabling impairments, then the Commissioner will assess the claimant's RFC to determine the claimant's "ability to meet the physical, mental, sensory, and other requirements" of the claimant's past relevant work. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(iv), 404.1545(a)(4), 416.920(a)(4)(iv), 416.945(a)(4). RFC is a measurement of the most a claimant can do despite his or her limitations. Hines v. Barnhart, 453 F.3d 559, 562 (4th Cir. 2006); see 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1545(a)(1), 416.945(a)(1). The claimant is responsible for providing evidence the Commissioner will use to make a finding as to the claimant's RFC, but the Commissioner is responsible for developing the claimant's "complete medical history, including arranging for a consultative examination(s) if necessary, and making every reasonable effort to help [the claimant] get medical reports from [the claimant's] own medical sources." 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1545(a)(3), 416.945(a)(3). The Commissioner also will consider certain non-medical evidence and other evidence listed in the regulations. See id. If a claimant retains the RFC to perform past relevant work, then the claimant is not disabled. Id. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(iv), 416.920(a)(4)(iv).

Fifth, if the claimant's RFC as determined in step four will not allow the claimant to perform past relevant work, then the burden shifts to the Commissioner to prove that there is other work that the claimant can do, given the claimant's RFC as determined at step four, age, education, and work experience. See Hancock v. Astrue, 667 F.3d 470, 472-73 (4th Cir. 2012). The Commissioner must prove not only that the claimant's RFC will allow the claimant to make an adjustment to other work, but also that the other work exists in significant numbers in the national economy. See Walls, 296 F.3d at 290; 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(v), 416.920(a)(4)(v). If the claimant can make an adjustment to other work that exists in significant numbers in the national economy, then the Commissioner will find that the claimant is not disabled. If the claimant cannot make an adjustment to other work, then the Commissioner will find that the claimant is disabled. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4)(v), 416.920(a)(4)(v).

III

Substantial Evidence Standard

The Court reviews an ALJ's decision to determine whether the ALJ applied the correct legal standards and whether the factual findings are supported by substantial evidence. See Craig v. Chater, 76 F.3d 585, 589 (4th Cir. 1996). In other words, the issue before the Court “is not whether [Plaintiff] is disabled, but whether the ALJ’s finding that [Plaintiff] is not disabled is supported by substantial evidence and was reached based upon a correct application of the relevant law.” Id. The Court’s review is deferential, as “[t]he findings of the Commissioner of Social Security as to any fact, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive.” 42 U.S.C. § 405(g). Under this standard, substantial evidence is less than a preponderance but is enough that a reasonable mind would find it adequate to support the Commissioner’s conclusion. See Hancock, 667 F.3d at 472; see also Biestek v. Berryhill, 587 U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1148, 1154 (2019).

In evaluating the evidence in an appeal of a denial of benefits, the court does “not conduct a de novo review of the evidence,” Smith v. Schweiker, 795 F.2d 343, 345 (4th Cir. 1986), or undertake to reweigh conflicting evidence, make credibility determinations, or substitute its judgment for that of the Commissioner. Hancock, 667 F.3d at 472. Rather, “[t]he duty to resolve conflicts in the evidence rests with the ALJ, not with a reviewing court.” Smith v. Chater, 99 F.3d 635, 638 (4th Cir. 1996). When conflicting evidence allows reasonable minds to differ as to whether a claimant is disabled, the responsibility for that decision falls on the ALJ. Johnson v. Barnhart, 434 F.3d 650, 653 (4th Cir. 2005) (per curiam).

IV

Discussion

Plaintiff contends that the ALJ erroneously assessed his RFC contrary to Social Security Ruling⁵ (“SSR”) 96-8p, 1996 WL 374184 (July 2, 1996). Pl.’s Mem. Supp. Mot. Summ. J. 3-11, ECF No. 8-1. Plaintiff maintains that the ALJ failed to perform properly a function-by-function assessment of his ability to perform the physical and mental demands of work. Id. at 5. In particular, he contends that the ALJ “failed to set forth a narrative discussion setting forth how the evidence supported each conclusion, citing specific medical facts and nonmedical evidence.” Id. at 6 (citing Thomas v. Berryhill, 916 F.3d 307, 311-12 (4th Cir. 2019); Woods v. Berryhill, 888 F.3d 686, 694 (4th Cir. 2018)). He also contends that the ALJ erroneously evaluated his occipital headaches. Id. at 7-10. Plaintiff further asserts that the ALJ erroneously evaluated his treating physician’s opinions. Id. at 10-11. Plaintiff finally argues that the ALJ erroneously evaluated his subjective complaints. Id. at 11-13. For the following reasons, Plaintiff’s contentions are unavailing.

A. ALJ’s Credibility Determination

The Court turns first to Plaintiff’s argument that substantial evidence does not support the ALJ’s assessment of his credibility.

Under the regulations implementing the Social Security Act, an ALJ follows a two-step analysis when considering a claimant’s subjective statements about impairments and symptoms. First, the ALJ looks for objective medical evidence showing a condition that could reasonably produce the alleged symptoms.

⁵ Social Security Rulings are “final opinions and orders and statements of policy and interpretations” that the Social Security Administration has adopted. 20 C.F.R. § 402.35(b)(1). Once published, these rulings are binding on all components of the Social Security Administration. Heckler v. Edwards, 465 U.S. 870, 873 n.3, 104 S. Ct. 1532, 1534 n.3 (1984); 20 C.F.R. § 402.35(b)(1). “While they do not have the force of law, they are entitled to deference unless they are clearly erroneous or inconsistent with the law.” Pass, 65 F.3d at 1204 n.3.

Second, the ALJ must evaluate the intensity, persistence, and limiting effects of the claimant's symptoms to determine the extent to which they limit the claimant's ability to perform basic work activities. The second determination requires the ALJ to assess the credibility of the claimant's statements about symptoms and their functional effects.

Lewis v. Berryhill, 858 F.3d 858, 865-66 (4th Cir. 2017) (citations omitted); see 20 C.F.R. § 404.1529(a)-(c).

According to Plaintiff, the ALJ applied an improper standard in evaluating his subjective complaints, referring only to the objective medical evidence to support the ALJ's rejection of his subjective complaints. Pl.'s Mem. Supp. Mot. Summ. J. 12-13, ECF No. 8-1 (citing Hines, 453 F.3d at 563). Indeed, a claimant's "subjective evidence of pain intensity cannot be discounted solely based on objective medical findings." Lewis, 858 F.3d at 866 (citing 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1529(c)(2), 416.929(c)(2)). As the court in Hines further noted, however, while objective evidence is not mandatory at the second step of the test, [t]his is not to say, however, that objective medical evidence and other objective evidence are not crucial to evaluating the intensity and persistence of a claimant's pain and the extent to which it impairs her ability to work. They most certainly are. Although a claimant's allegations about her pain may not be discredited solely because they are not substantiated by objective evidence of the pain itself or its severity, they need not be accepted to the extent they are inconsistent with the available evidence, including objective evidence of the underlying impairment, and the extent to which that impairment can reasonably be expected to cause the pain the claimant alleges she suffers.

Hines, 453 F.3d at 565 n.3 (alteration in original) (quoting Craig, 76 F.3d at 595). Thus, Plaintiff reads Hines too broadly. See Young v. Colvin, Civil Action No. WGC-15-3295, 2016 WL 6433181, at *9 (D. Md. Oct. 31, 2016).

In any event, the ALJ found that Plaintiff's "medically determinable impairments could reasonably be expected to cause some of the alleged symptoms." R. at 75. "[H]owever, [Plaintiff's] statements concerning the intensity, persistence and limiting effects of these symptoms are not entirely consistent with the medical evidence and other evidence in the record for the reasons explained in this decision.” R. at 75 (emphasis added). The ALJ reviewed Plaintiff’s testimony in her decision. R. at 74-75, 76-77; see R. at 142-57. “[T]he ALJ cited [Plaintiff’s] daily activities for purposes of the credibility determination and not as examples of the functions [he] could perform for an entire day.” Ladda v. Berryhill, 749 F. App’x 166, 173 n.4 (4th Cir. 2018). “Instead, [the ALJ] used [his] reported activities to assess the credibility of [his] statements concerning the intensity, persistence, or limiting effects of [his] symptoms consistent with the applicable rules” Burmester v. Berryhill, 920 F.3d 507, 510 (7th Cir. 2019). The ALJ also considered the type, dosage, effectiveness, and side effects of Plaintiff’s medication and his other treatment (R. at 75, 76-77). See 20 C.F.R. § 404.1529(c)(3)(iv), (v). Because “the ALJ cited adequate evidence from the record to support [her] conclusion that [Plaintiff’s] statements were not entirely credible,” Plaintiff’s contention that substantial evidence does not support the ALJ’s determination of his credibility is without merit. Ladda, 749 F. App’x at 171 n.3; see Johnson, 434 F.3d at 658 (“The ALJ logically reasoned that the ability to engage in such activities is inconsistent with [the claimant’s] statements of excruciating pain and her inability to perform such regular movements like bending, sitting, walking, grasping, or maintaining attention.”); Gross v. Heckler, 785 F.2d 1163, 1166 (4th Cir. 1986) (per curiam).

B. ALJ’s RFC Assessment

The Court next addresses Plaintiff’s contention that the ALJ erred in assessing his RFC. Pl.’s Mem. Supp. Mot. Summ. J. 3-11, ECF No. 8-1. SSR 96-8p, 1996 WL 374184 (July 2, 1996), explains how adjudicators should assess RFC and instructs that the RFC

“assessment must first identify the individual’s functional limitations or restrictions and assess his or her work-related abilities on a function-by-function basis, including the functions” listed in the regulations. “Only after that may [residual functional capacity] be expressed in terms of the exertional levels of work, sedentary, light, medium, heavy, and very heavy.” The Ruling further explains that the residual functional capacity “assessment must include a narrative discussion describing how the evidence supports each conclusion, citing specific medical facts (e.g., laboratory findings) and nonmedical evidence (e.g., daily activities, observations).”

Mascio v. Colvin, 780 F.3d 632, 636 (4th Cir. 2015) (alteration in original) (footnote and citations omitted). The Fourth Circuit has held, however, that a per se rule requiring remand when the ALJ does not perform an explicit function-by-function analysis “is inappropriate given that remand would prove futile in cases where the ALJ does not discuss functions that are ‘irrelevant or uncontested.’” Id. (quoting Cichocki v. Astrue, 729 F.3d 172, 177 (2d Cir. 2013) (per curiam)). Rather, remand may be appropriate “where an ALJ fails to assess a claimant’s capacity to perform relevant functions, despite contradictory evidence in the record, or where other inadequacies in the ALJ’s analysis frustrate meaningful review.” Id. (quoting Cichocki, 729 F.3d at 177). The court in Mascio concluded that remand was appropriate because it was “left to guess about how the ALJ arrived at his conclusions on [the claimant’s] ability to perform relevant functions” because the ALJ had “said nothing about [the claimant’s] ability to perform them for a full workday,” despite conflicting evidence as to the claimant’s RFC that the ALJ did not address. Id. at 637; see Monroe v. Colvin, 826 F.3d 176, 187-88 (4th Cir. 2016) (remanding because ALJ erred in not determining claimant’s RFC using function-by-function analysis; ALJ erroneously expressed claimant’s RFC first and then concluded that limitations caused by claimant’s impairments were consistent with that RFC).

Plaintiff first contends that, by failing to set forth a narrative discussion while assessing his RFC, the ALJ did not comply with SSR 96-8p. Pl.’s Mem. Supp. Mot. Summ. J. 3-6, ECF No. 8-1. In assessing his RFC, however, the ALJ considered the treatment records, opinion evidence, hearing testimony, and his credibility (R. at 74-77). See Shinaberry v. Saul, 952 F.3d 113, 123 (4th Cir. 2020) (“We hold that the ALJ’s decision is supported by substantial evidence in the record. The ALJ exhaustively reviewed [the claimant’s] testimony, her treatment records, and the evaluations by the SSA physicians. The ALJ generally credited the SSA physicians’ opinions that [the claimant] was capable of performing work at the light exertional level, with occasional postural limitations, but found additional physical limitations to be in order based upon [the claimant’s] treatment records. . . . We have carefully reviewed the record and the ALJ’s findings in this regard, and we are satisfied that the ALJ built ‘an accurate and logical bridge from the evidence to [her] conclusion’ that [the claimant’s] testimony was not fully credible.” (alteration in original) (quoting Brown v. Comm’r Soc. Sec. Admin., 873 F.3d 251, 269 (4th Cir. 2017))); Ladda, 749 F. App’x at 172 (“[T]he ALJ in this case used evidence from the record to explain his finding that [the claimant] was capable of light work. For example, the ALJ noted that [the claimant] claimed that he could walk for only ten to fifteen minutes at a time and could not lift ten pounds, but he explained that the other evidence in the record, such as medical records and opinion evidence, did not fully substantiate these claims. The ALJ also explained the relative weight he assigned to the statements made by [the claimant], [the claimant’s] treating physician, and the state agency medical consultants. The ALJ provided a sufficiently thorough discussion for us to agree that his conclusion that [the claimant] was limited to light work was supported by substantial evidence.”). Plaintiff’s contention in this regard thus is unavailing.

Plaintiff further argues that the ALJ erroneously evaluated his occipital headaches by failing to address the frequency and duration of these headaches, even though the ALJ considered his headaches by including noise limitations in the RFC assessment (R. at 75-76). Pl.’s Mem. Supp. Mot. Summ. J. 7, ECF No. 8-1. Plaintiff testified that he experienced twenty to thirty headaches per week and would have to close his eyes and rest his head. R. at 156. Plaintiff also testified, however, that he had been experiencing these headaches for “probably six to nine months.” R. at 157. As noted above, “disability” is, in relevant part, “the inability to do any substantial gainful activity by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment . . . which has lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than 12 months.” 20 C.F.R. § 404.1505(a). Thus, even if the ALJ had erred in considering the frequency and duration of his headaches, Plaintiff fails to demonstrate how doing so would have changed the outcome of his disability claim. See Reid v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec., 769 F.3d 861, 865 (4th Cir. 2014).

Plaintiff finally asserts that the ALJ erroneously evaluated the opinions of Aminullah Amini, M.D., his treating physician (R. at 75, 76, 1154-56). Pl.’s Mem. Supp. Mot. Summ. J. 10-11, ECF No. 8-1. The ALJ gave great weight to Dr. Amini’s opinion that Plaintiff was limited to lifting less than fifteen pounds, standing/walking for a total of three to five hours, and sitting for a total of four to six hours for thirty minutes at a time. R. at 76, 1154. The ALJ gave little weight to Dr. Amini’s opinion that Plaintiff would have more than four absences per month (R. at 1156) because he “has not required frequent monthly emergency room visits, or doctors [sic] visits with a frequency to cause him to be absent more than four days a month” (R. at 76). “Additionally, [Plaintiff] testified that he spends the majority of his day at home doing chores and tasks around the house, and not totally incapacitated.” R. at 76.

Plaintiff’s arguments regarding the ALJ’s consideration of Dr. Amini’s opinions are unavailing. He contends that the ALJ ignored Dr. Amini’s opinion that he could frequently lift a maximum of five pounds and occasionally lift five to ten pounds. R. at 1154. Plaintiff also argues that the ALJ did not account for Dr. Amini’s opinion about his ability to stand or walk without interruption for no more than thirty to forty minutes and to sit without interruption for thirty minutes for a total of four to six hours. These limitations are consistent with sedentary work, however, and the ALJ also included a sit-stand option every thirty minutes. See 20 C.F.R. § 404.1567(a); SSR 83-10, 1983 WL 31251, at *5 (Jan. 1, 1983) (“‘Occasionally’ means occurring from very little up to one-third of the time. Since being on one’s feet is required ‘occasionally’ at the sedentary level of exertion, periods of standing or walking should generally total no more than about 2 hours of an 8-hour workday, and sitting should generally total approximately 6 hours of an 8-hour workday.”). Plaintiff’s final contention that remand is warranted because the ALJ did not address Dr. Amini’s statement that he was precluded from competitive, full-time work activity on a sustained basis (R. at 1156) also fails, as a medical source’s statement that a claimant is “disabled” or “unable to work” is not a medical opinion but an opinion on an issue reserved to the Commissioner. See 20 C.F.R. § 404.1527(d). For these reasons, Plaintiff’s arguments regarding the ALJ’s consideration of Dr. Amini’s opinions fail.

In sum, substantial evidence supports the decision of the ALJ, who applied the correct legal standards here. Thus, Defendant’s Motion for Summary Judgment is GRANTED, Plaintiff’s Motion for Summary Judgment is DENIED, and the Commissioner’s final decision is AFFIRMED.

V

Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment (ECF No. 9) is GRANTED. Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment (ECF No. 8) is DENIED. The Commissioner's final decision is AFFIRMED. A separate order will issue.
