Re: Amgen Inc. v. F. Hoffman-La Roche Ltd., et al.
05-CV 12237 WGY (D. Mass)

Dear Deborah:

I write regarding Amgen's blatant attempt to circumvent the court's December 29, 2006, January 22, 2007, and March 2, 2007, orders regarding the scope of discovery. The court ruled three times that information regarding post-April 16, 2006 clinical trials is irrelevant to this lawsuit, beyond the scope of discovery, and would be unduly prejudicial and potentially disruptive to the ongoing discussions and negotiations between Roche and the FDA. This is true whether Amgen seeks the information through Roche or through unwitting third-parties. Roche will not disregard the court's orders nor waive DaVita's confidentiality obligations. In short, Roche will not provide the requisite approval for DaVita to produce the information discussed in your letter of today to me.

Similarly, Roche will not disregard the court's orders nor waive DaVita's confidentiality obligations at Monday's DaVita deposition. I was amazed to learn that one week after the third and final order on this issue, you subpoenaed DaVita (but did not serve Roche), seeking "DaVita's actual or planned participation in any trial, research, or other study sponsored or conducted by or on behalf of ROCHE, scheduled to commence after April 18, 2006." (emphasis added). Such information is clearly beyond the scope of the court's orders and Roche will oppose any effort by Amgen to elicit testimony on this subject.
