COMPLAINT

CLASS ACTION

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

Civ. A. No. _____

CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT AND JURY DEMAND

Plaintiff Dmitriy Shirokov (“Plaintiff”), on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, by his undersigned attorneys, states and alleges as follows:

INTRODUCTION

1. This is a class action brought by Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and 4,576 other similarly-situated victims of settlement fraud and extortion (collectively, the “proposed Class”), against DUNLAP, GRUBB & WEAVER PLLC (“DGW”); US COPYRIGHT GROUP (“USCG”); THOMAS DUNLAP (“Dunlap”); NICHOLAS KURTZ (“Kurtz”); GUARDALEY, LIMITED (“GuardaLey”); and ACHTE/NEUNTE BOLL KINO BETEILIGUNGS GMBH & CO KG (“Achte”) (collectively, “Defendants”).
2. Defendant DGW is a law firm whose attorneys (including Defendants Dunlap and Kurtz) have developed a lucrative trade in monetizing copyright infringement allegations. DGW has filed multiple civil complaints in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia in 2010, alleging mass online infringement of its clients' film copyrights. On those allegations, DGW has subpoenaed Internet Service Providers ("ISPs") to provide contact information for the alleged infringers—almost 20,000 so far,¹ including all 4,577 members of the proposed Class.

3. DGW has used that private information to send to Plaintiff and thousands of others virtually identical "litigation settlement" demand letters containing fraudulent claims and coercive statements. In those letters, DGW threatens to sue but offers to "settle" its claims in exchange for sufficient money, fraudulently inducing settlement payments and unwarranted legal expenses.
4. DGW does not genuinely intend to pursue most, if any, of these thousands of claims to trial. Operating through its alias USCG (a collaboration with Defendant GuardaLey), DGW advertises its copyright business model to prospective clients in the film industry stating one overriding goal: to "obtain settlement"—not judgments, which would require litigating and proving its allegations. With only thirteen attorneys on staff, DGW has issued a volume of demand letters that far surpasses its ability to litigate this volume of claims case by case. USCG tells prospective clients that civil prosecution of copyright claims has not been “practical,” in light of the financial status of individual infringers.

5. Settlement fraud has proven far more practical for Defendants. Defendants use the demand letters and other means to coerce settlements, routinely demanding $1,500 from each recipient, increasing to $2,500 if not sent promptly, under deceptive threats of impending (and even more expensive) litigation.
6. Defendants have made baseless threats in the demand letters Defendant Kurtz sent to members of the proposed Class on behalf of DGW’s client Defendant Achte (the “Letters”). The Letters falsely claim that the law allows Achte to seek extraordinary forms of relief, namely statutory damages and attorney’s fees (collectively, the “Ineligible Remedies”), for infringing Achte’s copyright for the motion picture Far Cry, despite fatal defects in its copyright registration and the express provisions of the Copyright Act.
7. The Far Cry copyright registration, which Defendant Dunlap intentionally obtained under false pretenses, provides a patina of legitimacy to Defendants’ multi-million dollar extortion scheme.
8. The proposed Class consists of a total of 4,577 individuals, including Shirokov, and contains two proposed Subclasses. Defendants allege that the members of the proposed Class violated Achte’s copyright in Far Cry. Title 17 of the United States Code (the “Copyright Act”), specifically 17 U.S.C. § 412 (“Section 412”), expressly forbids the Ineligible Remedies that Defendants attempt to enforce against members of the proposed Class.

9. The first proposed subclass (“Subclass I”) consists of 917 individuals, by whom Defendants alleged infringements that commenced prior to November 24, 2009, which Dunlap claimed in the registration application as the date of Far Cry’s first publication.
10. Under 17 U.S.C. § 412(1), no award of statutory damages or of attorney’s fees may be made for infringements that commence before the registration of an unpublished work. Yet Defendants allege that each Subclass I members’ infringement of Far Cry commenced when the motion picture was as yet unregistered and (they claim) unpublished. Each claim by Defendants to obtain Ineligible Remedies from members of Subclass I contravenes the law and is fraudulent.
11. The second proposed subclass (“Subclass II”) consists of 3,644 individuals, including the 917 in Subclass I and 2,727 other individuals including Plaintiff, by whom Defendants alleged infringements that commenced prior to January 19, 2010, the effective date of copyright registration (the “Effective Date”). Far Cry’s actual first publication date was at least as early as April 14, 2009, more than nine months before the Effective Date.
12. Under 17 U.S.C. § 412(2), no award of statutory damages or of attorney’s fees may be made for infringements that commence after a work’s first publication, but before the registration’s effective date, unless the registration is made within three months of the first publication. Yet the only infringements that Defendants allege by members of the proposed Subclass II commenced prior to the Effective Date, which was more than three months after the first publication of Far Cry. Each claim by Defendants to obtain Ineligible Remedies from members of Subclass II contravenes the law and is fraudulent.

13. Overall, the proposed Class consists of all 4,577 individuals whom Defendants accuse of infringing Far Cry prior to May 12, 2010, including each member of Subclass I and Subclass II. Achte knew the actual publication history of its own film on (and at all relevant times prior to) January 19, 2010, the Effective Date, when Dunlap's registration application was completed. Dunlap, Achte's lawyer, knew that Section 412 would bar any claims for Ineligible Remedies against earlier infringers if he stated the truth. So where the application form requests the film's date and nation of publication (as required by Section 409(8)), Dunlap did not fill in:

- October 2, 2008 and Germany (the global theatrical premiere);
- December 17, 2008 and the United States (the domestic theatrical premiere); or
- April 14, 2009 and the Netherlands (the first publication of the Far Cry DVD).

Instead, he claimed that Far Cry's first publication took place on November 24, 2009, in the United States: the date the DVD was commercially released in America.

14. This knowing misstatement of material information was made to maximize the damage awards that Defendants could pursue, the claims for Ineligible Remedies they could threaten in demand letters, and the volume and amount of extorted "settlements" that would result.
15. Under 17 U.S.C. § 410(b), the Register of Copyrights must refuse registration to any claim that she determines is invalid. Under its Office Practices, the Copyright Office will not accept an applicant's bare statement as to date or nation of first publication if it has contrary information. Under 17 U.S.C. § 411(b), a registration certificate that contains inaccurate information does not satisfy the requirements of Section 412, and thus cannot support an award of Ineligible Remedies, if (A) that information was included on the application with knowledge that it was inaccurate, and (B) its inaccuracy, if known, would have caused the Register of Copyrights to refuse registration.

16. If Achte and Dunlap had not withheld the truth about this material information, the Copyright Office would have known that the claimed date was invalid, and would have refused to issue a registration showing the false date, according to its Office Practices. The registration that Achte and Dunlap obtained by knowing misstatements of material information relied on by the Copyright Office—in short, by fraud—is invalid. Each claim by Defendants to obtain Ineligible Remedies from members of the proposed Class based on that registration contravenes the law and is, like the registration, fraudulent.
17. None the less, Defendants have sought to coerce settlements from the proposed Class members through the Letters and other communications on the basis of these expressly barred claims. Many members of the proposed Class and its proposed subclasses, responding to Defendants' false claims, have been successfully extorted. They have paid settlements of $1,500 or more and/or made other expenditures (including retaining counsel), unaware of the fraudulent registration scheme and the deception critical to the Letter's impact. Absent Defendants' threats of Ineligible Remedies, these four-figure "settlements" would not have happened.

18. The Letters sent to the proposed Class are predicated on fraud—upon Plaintiff and the proposed Class, and upon the ISPs, the United States Copyright Office, and the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.
19. DGW and its fellow Defendants are directly involved in perpetrating, conspiring to commit, and/or aiding and abetting this massive scheme of fraud, extortion, abuse of process, fraud upon the court, copyright misuse, and misappropriation of funds.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

20. This Court has original jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331, 1338(a) and (b), and 1367 (a) because this action arises under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States. Specifically, this action arises under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961 et seq.; the Copyright Act, 17 U.S.C. §§ 101 et seq.; and the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, 18 U.S.C. §§ 1030 et seq.
21. This Court also has supplemental jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1367, because all other claims are so related to those claims over which the Court has original jurisdiction as to form part of the same case or controversy under Article III of the United States Constitution.
22. This Court has original jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1332.
23. The amount in controversy in this case satisfies the jurisdictional requirements of 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a). Each Letter sent to members of the proposed Class states an intention to seek statutory damages “in the amount of $150,000 per infringement, attorneys’ fees and costs.” Achte’s recovery cannot exceed its actual damages, which would be some fraction of the $26.99 list price for the Far Cry DVD, plus any costs awarded in the court's discretion. Therefore, for each member of the proposed Class, the amount in controversy is greater than the difference: $149,974.01.

24. The parties satisfy the diversity requirements of 28 U.S.C. § 1332. Plaintiff Shirikov is domiciled in Massachusetts, while Defendants are domiciled and/or have their principal place of business in Virginia, Germany and/or the United Kingdom.
25. This class action satisfies the jurisdictional requirements of 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d). Plaintiff Shirokov is a citizen of Massachusetts, while Defendants include citizens of Virginia, 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2)(A), the United Kingdom and Germany, 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2)(C). The amount in controversy exceeds $5,000,000 in aggregate, 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d), as Defendants collectively, and specifically Achte, USCG, DGW, Dunlap and Kurtz, have sought settlements of $1,500 or greater from the members of the proposed Class; and upon information and belief, members of the proposed Class have spent more than $5,000,000 in aggregate in coerced settlement payments, attorney's fees, and other costs as a direct result of Defendant's wrongful acts.
26. Personal jurisdiction comports with due process under the United States Constitution and the long-arm statute of Massachusetts, Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 223A, § 3. Defendants, either directly or through other Defendants as agents, have monitored the Internet usage of, and/or sent Letters to, members of the proposed Class including Plaintiff Shirokov and others in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, establishing the requisite minimum contacts with the Commonwealth and purposefully availing themselves of its courts' jurisdiction for purposes of this action. Under the circumstances, it is fair and reasonable to require Defendants to come to the court to defend this action.

27. Venue is proper in this District under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(2) because a substantial part of the events that give rise to the claim occurred in this District.
28. Defendants have no legitimate basis for claiming that jurisdiction would be appropriate in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. Plaintiff does not have the requisite minimum contacts with the District of Columbia,² nor has he purposefully availed himself of jurisdiction therein.

PARTIES

29. Plaintiff Dmitriy Shirokov (“Plaintiff”) is a citizen of Middlesex County, Massachusetts.
30. Defendant Dunlap, Grubb & Weaver PLLC (“DGW”) is a Virginia law firm with its main office at 199 Liberty Street SW, Leesburg, Virginia 20175, and offices at 1200 G Street NW, Washington, DC 20005 and 1934 Old Gallows Road, Vienna, Virginia 22182.
31. Defendant US Copyright Group (“USCG”) is a Virginia corporation with a principal office at 199 Liberty Street SW, Leesburg, Virginia 20175.
32. Defendant Thomas Dunlap (“Dunlap”), an attorney, is a managing partner at DGW.
33. Defendant Nicholas Kurtz (“Kurtz”) is an attorney at DGW.

² Fishing for jurisdiction in its complaint and subsequent filings, Achte (through its counsel, DGW) has argued that some of the 4,577 alleged infringing acts may have taken place in that District, an insufficient ground for jurisdiction over any particular allegation. See, e.g., Omnibus Motion & Memorandum to Quash Subpoena Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(C)(3) and Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(B)(2) at pp. 12-18, No. 10-453 (D.D.C. Sep. 10, 2010); Plaintiff's Statement of Good Cause in Response to Court Order at pp. 9-10, No. 10-10453 (D.D.C. Sept. 28, 2010) (offering speculative bases for possible jurisdiction); Memorandum of Amici Curiae in Response to Plaintiffs' Statement of Good Cause in Response to Court Order Regarding Personal Jurisdiction at p. 3, No. 10-453 (D.D.C. Oct 15, 2010) (“Plaintiffs have failed to allege specific facts connecting [defendants] to this forum.”)

34. Defendant GuardaLey, Limited (“GuardaLey”) is a German company incorporated in England and Wales with its principal office at 5 Jupiter House, Calleva Park, Aldermaston, Reading, Berkshire, RG7 8NN, United Kingdom.
35. Defendant Achte/Neunte Boll Kino Beteiligungs Gmbh & Co KG (“Achte”), a motion picture creator and/or distributor, is a Kommanditgesellschaft, or German Limited Partnership, with its principal place of business at Wormserstrasse 173, D-55130 Mainz, Germany.

LEGAL BACKGROUND

36. Under United States law, copyright attaches to original works of authorship, including artistic works such as movies, upon their creation.³
37. Copyright law grants copyright holders certain exclusive rights, including the right to reproduce, distribute, and publicly perform the work, violation of which may constitute copyright infringement.⁴
38. The United States has a voluntary system of copyright registration, allowing the owner of a copyright or any exclusive right in a work to submit an application to the Copyright Office. Registration is permissive, but it is not a condition of copyright protection.⁵
39. The Copyright Act establishes remedial incentives to encourage copyright holders to register their works.⁶ In case of copyright infringement litigation, properly registered works enjoy statutory benefits, including:

³ 17 U.S.C. § 102.

⁴ 17 U.S.C. § 106.

⁵ 17 U.S.C. § 408(a).

⁶ Reed Elsevier v. Muchnick, 559 U.S. ____, 130 S. Ct. 1237, 1241 n. 1 (2010).

- Enforcement in federal court is available for “United States works.”⁷
- Statutory damages awards of between $750 and $30,000 are available for each infringed work.⁸
- Statutory damages awards of up to $150,000 are available for each infringed work if the infringement was committed willfully.⁹
- The prevailing party in litigation may recover attorneys’ fees and court costs.¹⁰
- An injunction may be imposed against a copyright infringer.¹¹

40. The Copyright Act provides more limited remedies in certain circumstances. When an infringement commences prior to registration, statutory damages and attorneys’ fees are not available as remedies for infringement of any copyrighted work that was published more than three months prior to its registration.¹²

41. Section 412 of the Copyright Act provides in full:

17 U.S.C. § 412: Registration as prerequisite to certain remedies for infringement

In any action under this title, other than an action brought for a violation of the rights of the author under section 106A(a), an action for infringement of the ⁷ 17 U.S.C. § 411(a). “Works first published outside the United States ... are exempt from the registration requirement, § 411(a), unless the copyright holder seeks statutory damages and attorney’s fees.” Rudnicki v. WPNA 1490 AM, 580 F. Supp. 2d 690, No. 04-C-5719 (N. D. Ill. July 24, 2008).

⁸ 17 U.S.C. § 504(c)(1).

⁹ 17 U.S.C. §§ 504(c)(2). However, a court may reduce a statutory damages award to as little as $200 in a case of “innocent infringement”—that is, where the infringer was not aware and had no reason to know that his or her acts constituted infringement of copyright. Id.

¹⁰ 17 U.S.C. § 505.

¹¹ 17 U.S.C. § 502.

¹² 17 U.S.C. § 412(2).

copyright of a work that has been preregistered under section 408(f) before the commencement of the infringement and that has an effective date of registration not later than the earlier of 3 months after the first publication of the work or 1 month after the copyright owner has learned of the infringement, or an action instituted under section 411(c),¹³ no award of statutory damages or of attorney's fees, as provided by sections 504 and 505, shall be made for—

(1) any infringement of copyright in an unpublished work commenced before the effective date of its registration; or

(2) any infringement of copyright commenced after first publication of the work and before the effective date of its registration, unless such registration is made within three months after the first publication of the work.

42. The Copyright Act defines the “publication” of a work as follows:

Publication is the distribution of copies or phonorecords of a work to the public by sale or other transfer of ownership, or by rental, lease, or lending. The offering to distribute copies or phonorecords to a group of persons for purposes of further distribution, public performance, or public display constitutes publication. A public performance or display of a work does not of itself constitute publication.¹⁴

43. The Copyright Office further explains that, “when copies or phonorecords are offered for sale or lease to a group of wholesalers, broadcasters, or motion picture theaters, publication does take place if the purpose is further distribution, public performance, or public display.”¹⁵

¹³ The statutory exceptions to Section 412 are not applicable to Defendants' claims, because the civil action DGW filed on behalf of Achte was not (a) brought under Section 106A(a) (the Visual Rights Act of 1990, Pub. L. No. 101-650); (b) based on a preregistered work under Section 408 (f); nor (c) instituted under Section 411(c) (which allows claims on behalf of live televised broadcasts).

¹⁴ 17 U.S.C. § 101.

¹⁵ U.S. Copyright Office, Circular 1, Copyright Basics, p. 4, available at <http://www.copyright.gov/circs/circ01.pdf>.

44. There are several grounds for protection of published works (including motion pictures) under the Copyright Act, including if “the work is first published in the United States or in a foreign nation that, on the date of first publication, is a treaty party.”¹⁶
45. An application for a registration of copyright in a published work requires a statement of the date of first publication; the nation of first publication should also be given.¹⁷ Specifically, under the Copyright Office’s guidelines an application covering a work first published outside the United States should state the date of first publication there, and should be accompanied by a copy or phonorecord of the foreign edition as first published.¹⁸
46. The Copyright Office’s manual of practices and procedures states its general practices with respect to publication, including that,

Where the applicant is uncertain as to which of several possible dates to choose, it is generally advisable to choose the earliest date, to avoid implication of an attempt to lengthen the copyright term, or any other period prescribed by the statute.

U.S. Copyright Office, Compendium II: Copyright Office Practices, Section 904.

47. The Copyright Office ordinarily does not make findings of fact with respect to publication.¹⁹ Instead, it will generally accept without question the date and nation of first publication given by the applicant:

¹⁶ 17 U.S.C. § 104(b)(2).

¹⁷ 17 U.S.C. § 409(8); U.S. Copyright Office, Compendium II: Copyright Office Practices (“Compendium II”) §§ 621, 910.

¹⁸ Compendium II § 910.09.

¹⁹ Id. § 108.05.

- The Office will correspond with the applicant if it has information inconsistent with the statement used by the applicant as the basis for the date given. Similarly, the Copyright Office will generally accept the statement of the applicant on nation of first publication, unless it appears to be clearly inconsistent with the facts stated by the applicant or the information which the Office has with respect to the place of first publication.²⁰
48. However, if the Copyright Office has information (whether provided by the applicant or not) clearly inconsistent with the applicant's statement, it will not generally accept the statement.²¹
49. The Copyright Office will not register an invalid claim.²²
50. In short, the Copyright Office will not register a claim if it has information that the date and nation of first publication listed on the application are incorrect.
51. A certificate of registration from the United States Copyright Office is prima facie evidence of a copyright's validity.²³
52. However, such evidence may be rebutted with evidence that the registration was obtained through fraud or material misrepresentations or omissions.
53. An applicant who knows that the copyright certificate of registration contains inaccurate information cannot use it as a basis for a civil action for infringement if the inaccuracy would have caused the Register of Copyrights to refuse registration.²⁴

FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

A. DGW Purports to Have Special Expertise in Copyright Law.

54. Defendant law firm DGW holds itself out as having special expertise in intellectual property law, and in copyright law specifically. This is not limited to its self-branded alias as “US Copyright Group” (“USCG”).
55. The home page of the DGW website declares, “We are a boutique law firm that handles intellectual property prosecution, litigation and business law matters on a national and international scale.”²⁵ DGW’s web page detailing the firm’s copyright services declares its lawyers “uniquely qualified” in the field, emphasizing the firm’s proximity to the U.S. Copyright Office, its practice “counseling clients to obtain protection and rights to use and profit from copyrighted material,” and its “extensive experience negotiating and drafting agreements involving copyrighted works.”²⁶ Announcing one of its film copyright lawsuit filings this year, the firm declared on its blog page, “we have a team of intellectual property lawyers who are experienced in prosecuting these cases.”²⁷ True and correct copies of these DGW web pages are attached as Exhibit A.
56. DGW specifically portrays itself as well-versed in copyright law, including the law regarding copyright registration. Advertising the firm’s copyright registration services, the DGW website includes two separate forms (an “intake form” and a “questionnaire”);

²⁵ See <http://www.dglegal.com> (last visited Nov. 21, 2010).

²⁶ See <http://www.dglegal.com/services/intellectual-property/copyright> (last visited Nov. 21, 2010).

a prospective client may fill out either to authorize DGW to handle their copyright registration.²⁸

57. The intake form assures prospective clients of DGW's intellectual property specialization:

We are confident that you will find our online application process easy to use, and be assured that your application will be submitted by actual intellectual property attorneys who can and will be there for you in the future to assist with the registration process, as the need arises.

See Exhibit B.

B. DGW and Its Partner Dunlap Have Demonstrated an Acute Awareness of the Significance of Section 412 of The Copyright Act.

58. The intake form also recognizes that the date and nation of a work's first publication are material information in a copyright registration, asking of applicants:

If the material has been published or publicly distributed, please give the date of the first publication or earliest distribution and the nation of the first publication or earliest distribution.

See Exhibit B, Section 8.

59. The questionnaire poses the question of first publication more elaborately:

Have copies of this work been publicly distributed or given to another for purposes of distribution to the public? If so, please describe the circumstances, and give the date (month/day/year) when this first occurred, and the location.

See Exhibit C.

²⁸ See http://www.ustrademarkgroup.com/DGW_-_File_A_Copyright.html (last visited Nov. 14, 2010) (the "intake form"); and http://ustrademarkgroup.com/uploads/DGW_Copyright_Engagement__350_or__1_000_.pdf (last visited Nov. 14, 2010) (the "questionnaire"). True and correct copies of the intake form and questionnaire are attached as Exhibits B and C, respectively.

60. This questionnaire suggests DGW's acute awareness of how Section 412 affects the value of a copyright claim against infringers. Atop the questionnaire, DGW informs potential clients, Substantive rights may be established as of the filing date of a US copyright application, particularly within ninety days of publication or before actual infringement occurs.

Id. This passage references the statutory benefits to registering copyright before any infringement occurs, or within the Section 412 safe harbor, which allows a copyright owner to seek the full range of remedies against infringers even if the work has already been published, as long as it is registered within three months after publication.

61. For years, Defendant Dunlap has been personally aware of the bar on statutory damages imposed by Section 412.
62. In 2009, Dunlap posted the following comment in the "Free Legal Advice" section of the website Avvo.com:

Under the Berne Convention (the US joined in 1989) you have a common law right to protection, however in order to potentially recover statutory and punitive damages you need to register your copyright immediately (happy to help) as you generally only have 90 days from the date of the infringing publication to do so (17 USC 412). Get to a lawyer today and register that copyright with the US Copyright Office ASAP!²⁹

²⁹ Posting of Thomas M. Dunlap, tdunlap@dglegal.com, to <http://www.avvo.com/legal-answers/lyrics-dspute--134378.html> (last visited Nov. 8, 2010). A true and correct copy of the posting is attached as Exhibit D.

63. In 2007, Dunlap discussed the significance of Section 412 at length in an online article entitled, “Intellectual Property Primer for CEOs, Managers, and Corporate Counsel” (“Primer”).³⁰ A true and correct copy of the Primer is attached as Exhibit E.
64. In the Primer, Dunlap generally sought to distinguish copyrights and trademarks under American law and discuss the benefits of registration.³¹ Discussing copyright law, Dunlap wrote in the Primer, “[w]ith out registration you can be awarded actual damages and lost profits only.” See Exhibit E.
65. At several points in the Primer, Dunlap focused on an issue that USCG would later make a selling point to its prospective clients: the possibility of settlements far in excess of actual damages.
66. In describing the value of copyright registration, Dunlap highlighted details of the only specific case law discussed in his Primer:

Other advantages of registering [a copyright], just like trademark there is a public notice of the ownership of the work. You can’t collect your attorney’s fees and statutory damages (of up to $150,000 per incident!) if you have not registered. A good example of that is the case where someone wrote a thesis as part of a doctoral program [] didn’t publish it, filed it with his University. Another person copied the thesis word for word, punctuation for punctuation, published it with a book publisher and sold it at Barnes and Noble, Amazon, every large bookseller you could think of about ten years later. The person waited too long after the infringing publication to copyright the work and was reduced to making common law claims. It turns out the profits from the sales of that book were about a thousand dollars, well under the amount of the tens of thousands of dollars in

Though the byline above the article states that the article was written by DGW, the author bio below the article specifically identifies Dunlap as the author.

attorneys fees required to enforce the matter. So the registration was really important there, as a practical matter.

See Exhibit E.

67. Dunlap reiterated the value of registration toward the end of the Primer:

You have common law right as soon as you use a trademark in Commerce, or as soon as you put the original work of authorship in a tangible medium. However, until you have actually gone through the registration process, until you have vetted the trademark to make sure that you are not infringing, the common law rights are practically worthless as the exercise of this protection often fails a cost benefit analysis....

We recommend that businesses protect anything they can get their intellectual property claws on. The cost of litigation are high. If you haven't registered your trademark or copyright, then you're eating that cost of enforcement even if you win. Ten dollars of prevention is worth ten thousand dollars in legal fees.

Id.

68. Soon after publishing this Primer, Dunlap, Weaver, and others at DGW developed a new way for businesses to “get their intellectual property claws on” alleged infringers.

C. DGW's US Copyright Group Facilitates a Business Model Based on Volume Settlements of Alleged Copyright Infringement.

69. DGW does business under the alias “US Copyright Group.” Documents on file with the Virginia State Corporation Commission indicate that DGW registered “US Copyright Group” as a fictitious name.³² Jeffrey Weaver, a name partner at DGW, filed the application for trademark registration for the service mark “US Copyright Group.” On LinkedIn.com, Dunlap's public profile page identifies him as a USCG partner and co-founder, and features a hyperlink to one of USCG's settlement websites, www.savecinema.org, under the heading “Company Website.”³³ The USCG page on LinkedIn lists DGW’s DC office as USCG’s headquarters with Dunlap as its main contact.³⁴

70. Under its USCG moniker, DGW has “turned P2P prosecution into revenue generation in order to ‘SAVE CINEMA.’”³⁵
71. In the face of increasing concern over Internet infringement, USCG offers the film industry a new revenue stream: a share of the proceeds from “litigation settlement” demand letters with accusations that the recipient has engaged in peer-to-peer copyright infringement online and threats to pursue damages awards of up to $150,000 if the accused doesn’t settle within a few weeks.
72. DGW/USCG has actively solicited film production and distribution companies to join in its scheme to turn infringement claims into a windfall. “The model couldn’t be simpler: find an indie filmmaker; convince the production company to let you sue individual ‘John Does’ for no charge; send out subpoenas to reveal each Doe’s identity; demand that each person pay $1,500 to $2,500 to make the lawsuit go away; set up a website to accept checks and credit cards; split the revenue with the filmmaker.”³⁶

73. USCG outlined each step of its business model in an online solicitation to potential clients posted on one of its websites, www.savecinema.org:

... AT NO COST TO OUR CLIENTS, THE US COPYRIGHT GROUP WILL:

IDENTIFY ILLEGAL DOWNLOADERS BY ISP ADDRESS

SUBPOENA IDENTIFYING CONTACT INFORMATION

SEND A CEASE & DESIST LETTER TO DEMAND PAYMENT OF DAMAGES

OBTAIN SETTLEMENT OF APPROXIMATELY $500 - $1,000 PER INFRINGER & PROMISE TO CEASE FUTURE ILLEGAL DOWNLOADING

PROCESS SETTLEMENTS & PROVIDE RECORDS TO THE CLIENT

DISBURSE CLIENT'S PORTION OF THE DAMAGES

ALL SERVICES PROVIDED ON A CONTINGENCY OR FLAT-FEE BASIS AT NO COST TO THE CLIENT³⁷

74. As this solicitation shows, USCG and its clients envision the relationship as one in which USCG will "obtain settlement" from alleged infringers and "process settlements," splitting the proceeds with the client, who is charged nothing.

75. Under the heading "Capital Recovery," USCG's website further explained to potential clients the logic behind its avoidance of actual prosecution of individual claims:

Copyright infringement and the Federal and state laws surrounding its enforcement are complex and difficult to implement, which means that the solutions are complex and the legal fees are expensive. More than any other industry, the film and entertainment industry loses prodigious amounts of revenue to the world of illegal downloading, uploading and file-sharing. As a practical matter each individual infringer lacks the assets, net worth and earning capacity *to make civil prosecution practical ... until the SaveCinema.org efforts of the US Copyright Group.*³⁸

76. USCG promotes a cost-benefit analysis in which alleged infringers are generally not worth suing. USCG steers film studios away from litigation and toward mass settlements.

77. On its LinkedIn page, USCG further expands upon its goals:

Our unique partnerships allow us to monitor filing sharing [sic], uploads and downloading. Then, we obtain the infringers' identities through ISP subpoenas, finally resulting in "cease & desist" letters with a demand for payment of damages being sent to the illegal downloaders on a massive scale. Research suggests that once a copyright infringer is forced to pay settlement damages far in excess of the actual cost of the stolen content, he will never steal copyrighted material again.³⁹

78. In this mission statement, USCG explains that its business model is predicated on settlements far in excess of any actual damages suffered.

79. In practice, the USCG mass settlement business model proceeds by these steps:

- (1) monitor file sharing, logging incidents of alleged infringement of client copyrights,
- (2) file suit against unnamed accused infringers ("John Doe defendants") en masse,
- (3) obtain court approval to issue third-party subpoenas to ISPs,
- (4) collect contact information for John Doe defendants from ISPs,
- (5) send letters to John Doe defendants threatening damages, and
- (6) collect and distribute settlement payments.

80. Defendants have systematically executed the mass settlement business model advertised by USCG against thousands of John Doe defendants.
81. The monitoring work is conducted by Defendant GuardaLey.
82. At least one of the managers of USCG, Benjamin Perino, is a managing director of GuardaLey.⁴⁰
83. Upon information and belief, USCG is managed by DGW and GuardaLey.
84. GuardaLey compiles the IP addresses of purported infringers of the copyright in DGW/USCG's client's films,⁴¹ identifying the ISP of each accused infringer, the date and time of each alleged copyright infringement, and the film each one allegedly uploaded or downloaded.⁴²
85. The ISP addresses GuardaLey provides include sufficient identifying information to allow Defendants to determine the home states of those they accuse, even without the aid of subpoenas.⁴³

86. Upon information and belief, DGW is aware that few of those it accuses of infringement reside in or near Washington, D.C.
87. Upon information and belief, DGW is aware that filing suit in the District of Columbia is likely to induce many of the accused to settle even unfounded claims, rather than bear the expense of fighting litigation in a remote jurisdiction.
88. Nevertheless, beginning in January of 2010, DGW has filed suit against thousands of John Doe defendants in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia on behalf of its clients, including Achte, seeking discovery of those defendants' contact information regardless of their jurisdiction.
89. By filing each complaint in the same federal District Court, despite the jurisdictional shortcomings of the approach, DGW seeks to maximize efficiencies and reduce costs for itself and for its clients, if not for their targets.
90. Dunlap's Primer was addressed to "CEOs, Managers, and Corporate Counsel" who might have copyrights and trademarks to register. Dunlap offered such prospective clients a theme that also features in USCG's client recruitment materials: that infringement trials are expensive but rare, while settlements are fast and common:

These matters often resolve prior to a final trial in the form of a settlement agreement or licensing agreement. Federal courts like settlement, judges don't want to hear cases that can settle. Failing that, you have to go through the litigation process. ...

Typically speaking to prosecute or defend a trademark or copyright claim, you are looking at spending anywhere from fifty to a hundred thousand dollars at the typical simple end of the spectrum. A complex more valuable trademark could cost more to prosecute and defend, because of the value of the mark defendant may be willing to spend more to defend its actions and plaintiffs may be willing to spend more to enforce. It is a cost benefit analysis on both sides - is the mark is an essential part of the business? How much has the company spent on the mark and making it known to the public or in the industry? What happens if the business suddenly loses the mark?

Can it cost less? Certainly, you could file a complaint and have a licensing agreement or settlement two weeks later, or you could send an infringement letter, and have a license agreement or settlement letter without even filing a complaint. Facts often win cases in advance and there is a lot less risk to both parties in settlement. In fact it is rare when parties don't settle outside of court.⁴⁴

91. Tactics that Dunlap promoted (encouraging settlement and discouraging litigation) also benefit DGW in the USCG cases, as per the cost-benefit analysis it promotes to clients.
92. DGW's direct stake in USCG's proceeds gives it a financial incentive to maximize its reward by obtaining as many settlements as possible for as much money as it can get.
93. DGW is not built to handle, as individual claims, anywhere near the volume of copyright litigation it has threatened this year. DGW lists a total of thirteen attorneys on its website.⁴⁵ The small number of attorneys at DGW belies any claim that it honestly intends to pursue full-blown litigation against any more than a small fraction of the John Doe defendants.
94. Defendants also seek to achieve economies of scale and minimize costs through a cookie-cutter litigation model: DGW uses form texts for complaints, motion papers, third-party subpoenas, and threatening letters sent to thousands of defendants across its film copyright infringement cases, inserting case-specific information into template documents.

⁴⁴ Exhibit E.

D. Achte's Failure to Timely Register Its Copyright for Far Cry Posed a Problem for the USCG Business Model, Which Dunlap Sought to Mask Through Fraud.

95. Defendants' cookie-cutter litigation tactics are not appropriate in cases that do not raise identical issues. But as Defendants knew, the Achte case was not the same as their other cases.
96. To date, Far Cry is the only foreign film to serve as the basis for DGW/USCG litigation. Achte is a German film production company that has made over twenty feature-length motion pictures. Upon information and belief, the copyright for each of those motion pictures prior to Far Cry had been duly registered with the U.S. Copyright Office.
97. Achte was one of the producers of Far Cry, a movie based on a video game of the same name. Uwe Boll, the director of Far Cry, has directed several other films based on video games. Upon information and belief, Uwe Boll is a partner in Achte.
98. No application for copyright registration had been submitted to the Copyright Office for Far Cry at the time Achte first retained DGW and USCG.
99. DGW submitted the Far Cry copyright registration application for Achte. Upon information and belief, it has not handled the copyright registration process for films underlying its copyright litigation other than Far Cry.
100. Far Cry had been published more than three months before its U.S. copyright registration.
101. As a result, by operation of Section 412, infringements prior to that date are not subject to the Ineligible Remedies of statutory damages (including damages for willful infringement) or attorney's fees. Remedies that DGW routinely seeks on behalf of other plaintiffs in its copyright litigation campaign are Ineligible Remedies in the Achte case as to members of Subclass II.

102. Despite these unusual aspects of the Achte case, DGW tried to make it fit the mold.

103. Far Cry was filmed in Canada in the summer of 2007, with dialogue in English.

104. Far Cry was first released in theaters in Germany on October 2, 2008.⁴⁶ It premiered on over 200 different screens in its first week of release.

105. Far Cry was first released in United States theaters on December 17, 2008.⁴⁷

106. The first publication of the film on DVD was no later than April 14, 2009, when the DVD was offered for sale to the public by commercial release in the Netherlands. See Exhibit H.

107. The DVD was again published in the United Kingdom, where it was offered for sale to the public by commercial release on September 7, 2009.⁴⁸

108. Again, in Italy, on October 14, 2009, the DVD was offered for sale to the public by commercial release.⁴⁹

109. The film was commercially released on DVD in both the United States and Canada on November 24, 2009. See Exhibits H and I.

110. That history posed a problem for DGW/USCG when it was first retained by Achte. Dunlap was aware that filing a copyright registration so long after publication would prevent Achte from obtaining the Ineligible Remedies for any pre-registration infringements. An honest registration would have cut into the potential settlement proceeds that Achte and USCG could share.
111. In its USCG work, DGW attempts to maximize its intake of settlement proceeds, while minimizing protracted legal battles that will require significant time investments and legal risk.
112. Because Far Cry was first published outside of the United States, Achte would have standing to bring claims for copyright infringement even absent a registration. But such claims would be limited to actual damages.
113. USCG's business model is not as lucrative if the Ineligible Remedies are not available. As Dunlap stated in his Primer, "until you have actually gone through the registration process ... the common law rights are practically worthless as the exercise of this protection often fails a cost benefit analysis." See Exhibit E.
114. The registration certificate would not support Achte's claim for Ineligible Remedies if it accurately represented the Far Cry publication history.
115. Dunlap sought to resolve this problem by perpetrating fraud upon the Copyright Office.
116. Dunlap submitted a registration application for Far Cry that falsely claimed a first date of publication of November 24, 2009.

117. The Copyright Office issued a registration certificate for the copyright of Far Cry. A true and correct copy of the registration certificate is attached as Exhibit J. The certificate, based on information in Dunlap's filing, discloses the following:
- (1) the registration number, PA 1-658-618;
 - (2) the motion picture was created in 2007;
 - (3) the motion picture was first published on November 24, 2009, in the United States;
 - (4) the motion picture had not been previously published;
 - (5) no material in the motion picture was excluded from the copyright claim as previously registered or published;
 - (6) the Effective Date of registration was January 19, 2010;⁵⁰
 - (7) neither the registered work nor any earlier version was registered prior to the Effective Date;
 - (8) Achte claimed authorship of the work, the entire motion picture, as "employer-for-hire"; and
 - (9) Dunlap listed his contact information for any parties seeking rights and permissions.
118. Material falsehoods in the copyright registration that Dunlap secured for Far Cry are fatal to DGW's claims that Achte is entitled to seek Ineligible Remedies in litigation to enforce that copyright.
119. When DGW began soliciting film studios as USCG in late 2009, Achte had already missed out on the benefits of Section 412. The motion picture had been published through theatrical release no later than October 2, 2008. The DVD of the motion picture had been released no later than April 14, 2009. Neither version had been registered with the Copyright Office.

120. Upon information and belief, Defendants knew that the Far Cry DVD had been previously published in at least one foreign country more than three months before Dunlap filed a copyright registration application on behalf of Achte, in which he claimed that the domestic release date of the DVD was its first date of publication, and that the United States was its first nation of publication.
121. Upon information and belief, Dunlap knew that he was required to state the earliest actual publication date worldwide on the Copyright Office registration form.
122. Dunlap—an attorney who holds himself out as an expert in copyright law—should have known that he was required to state the earliest actual publication date worldwide on the Copyright Office registration form.
123. The intake form on DGW’s web page includes a request that prospective copyright applicants provide the following information:

If the material has been published or publicly distributed, please give the date of the first publication or earliest distribution and the nation of the first publication or earliest distribution.⁵¹

124. In applying for the Far Cry copyright, Dunlap made statements that were false in precisely the manner proscribed by DGW when instructing its prospective clients on how to apply for copyright registration.
125. Copyright Office registration forms include a recitation of 17 U.S.C. § 506(e), and require applicants to sign a certification as follows:

⁵¹ See http://www.ustrademarkgroup.com/DGW_-_File_A_Copyright.html (last visited Nov. 14, 2010) (the “intake form”). See Exhibit B. (emphasis in original).

17 U.S.C. § 506(e): Any person who knowingly makes a false representation of a material fact in the application for copyright registration provided for by section 409, or in any written statement filed in connection with the application, shall be fined not more than $2,500.

I certify that I am the author, copyright claimant, or owner of exclusive rights, or the authorized agent of the author, copyright claimant, or owner of exclusive rights, of this work, and that the information given in this application is correct to the best of my knowledge.

U.S. Copyright Office, Form CO, Application for Copyright Registration. A true and correct copy of Form Co is attached as Exhibit K.

126. Despite the false statements in his application, Dunlap made this certification on behalf of Achte on January 18, 2010.
127. In practice, the Copyright Office typically accepts an applicant's statement as to the date and nation of first publication.⁵² It is this practice that Dunlap relied on when he falsified the registration.
128. Dunlap was well aware of this practice prior to the Far Cry registration. In his Primer, Dunlap contrasted the review of examining attorneys at the United States Patent and Trademark Office for trademarks with what he depicts as an absolute lack of examination for copyrights:

Copyright registration is a simpler and much less expensive process. Unlike trademark registration, a copyright filing is not examined by anyone. As long as the proper procedures are followed the copyright is registered and the filing party gets federal copyright protection.

... Copyright is a little bit different then trademark, in that the copyright office just registers your copyright. They don't look at other copyrights to see if you are infringing on something that is already registered, or if you are plagiarizing something, they just register it. ... The copyright office just takes registration [sic] and registers it.⁵³

⁵² Compendium II § 108.09.

E. Defendants Have Used the False Copyright Registration to Provide Illusory Support for their Application of USCG's Standard Mass Settlement Strategy Against Alleged Far Cry Infringers.

129. Dunlap obtained Achte's copyright registration for Far Cry by making false representations of material facts to the U.S. Copyright Office.
130. Upon information and belief, Dunlap made a false assertion to the Copyright Office of a publication date within three months of the date of application, seeking to obtain for Achte rights that are unavailable under the law for tardy applicants, including the right to seek statutory damages and attorney's fees in subsequent infringement actions.
131. Absent this falsehood, Defendants could not have plausibly claimed that infringers of Far Cry are subject to any Ineligible Remedies, due to the automatic effect of Section 412.
132. By its plain language, Section 412(2) prohibits any "award of statutory damages or of attorney's fees, as provided by sections 504 and 505" for "any infringement of copyright commenced after first publication of the work and before the effective date of its registration, unless such registration is made within three months after the first publication of the work."
133. Far Cry was first published no later than April 14, 2009, and registered effective on January 19, 2010, more than nine months later.
134. Because Achte failed to register the copyright for Far Cry within three months of its publication, Section 412(2) of the Copyright Act prohibits it from obtaining the Ineligible Remedies "for any infringement of copyright commenced after first publication of the work and before the effective date of its registration”—that is, any infringement commenced between April 14, 2009 and January 19, 2010.

135. Defendants cannot seek statutory damages or attorney’s fees from anyone whose infringement “commenced” between those dates.
136. Aided by the falsely obtained registration, Defendants have claimed to be eligible for the same sort of remedies allowed in other USCG cases.
137. In the Achte case, Defendants have filed a complaint, motions, and declarations, and employed subpoenas and threatening Letters, that recite verbatim language Defendants use in their other cases.
138. Achte engaged USCG, and in turn, USCG retained GuardaLey, to document instances of purported infringement of Achte’s copyright in the motion picture Far Cry.
139. On March 18, 2010, DGW filed suit in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia on behalf of Achte against 2,094 anonymous individuals (“John Doe defendants”), alleging infringement of the motion picture Far Cry.⁵⁴ That case (the “Achte case”) has been assigned Civil Action No. 1:10-cv-00453-RMC (D.D.C.).
140. The original complaint was not signed, but the signature block named Defendants Dunlap and Kurtz,⁵⁵ and included Dunlap’s phone number and email address.

⁵⁵ The signature block on the original Achte complaint also included former DGW associate Ellis Bennett and current DGW associate David Ludwig.

141. On the same date, DGW sought leave of court to serve subpoenas on ISPs across the country, to determine the John Doe defendants' names and contact information.⁵⁶ The court granted permission on March 23, 2010, and DGW began to serve subpoenas on ISPs soon thereafter.
142. DGW's subpoenas to the ISPs seek contact information (including names, addresses, phone numbers, and email addresses) of ISP subscribers whom DGW claims infringed its clients' copyrights.⁵⁷
143. When an ISP provides DGW the subpoenaed private subscriber contact information, DGW sends a Letter to the ISP subscribers, describing their status as John Doe defendants and the potential consequences that DGW contends they face.
144. Among the 2,094 John Doe defendants in the spreadsheet exhibit to Defendants' original complaint were 1,006 individuals listed with an alleged date of infringement prior to November 24, 2009 (i.e., members of Subclass I), and an additional 984 individuals listed with an alleged date of infringement prior to the Effective Date, January 19, 2010. Overall, the 2,094 targets of the original complaint filed on behalf of Achte by DGW, Dunlap, and Kurtz, included 1,990 members of Subclass II.
145. Plaintiff was one of the members of Subclass II whom Defendants sought to identify in the spreadsheet exhibit to the original complaint. The exhibit identified Plaintiff as "Doe 1910," listed his Host IP Address as 72.93.84.75, named his ISP (Verizon Internet

⁵⁶ Motion for Leave to Take Discovery Prior to Rule 26(f) Conference, No. 10-453 (D.D.C. Mar. 18, 2010).

Services), and alleged an infringement at 3:26:18 AM on December 11, 2009. Later communications from Defendants to Plaintiff, including the Letter, stated that plaintiff's ISP had identified him as the subscriber with that IP address.

146. The original complaint indiscriminately staked a right to pursue statutory damages and attorney's fees from each of the 2,094 John Doe defendants, whether they were among the 95% of alleged infringers within Subclass II (as to whom those were Ineligible Remedies), like Plaintiff, or among the less than 5% of alleged infringers whom Achte claimed infringed after the Effective Date.
147. The original complaint fails to distinguish between its allegations against pre-registration and post-registration infringers when stating the remedies Achte can seek, as well as in its prayer for judgment.
148. The original complaint states, "As a result of each Defendant's infringement of Plaintiff's exclusive rights under copyright, Plaintiff is entitled to relief pursuant to 17 US.C. § 504 and to its attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to 17 US.C. § 505." Exhibit L ¶ 14 (emphasis added).
149. The original complaint states a prayer for judgment "against each Defendant" that includes "actual damages or statutory damages pursuant to 17 U.S.C. § 504, at the election of [Achte]" and "[Achte's] reasonable attorney's fees." Exhibit L, pp. 5-6.
150. On May 12, 2010, DGW filed a First Amended Complaint for Copyright Infringement ("Amended Complaint") on behalf of Achte, raising to 4,577 the alleged number of infringers of the motion picture Far Cry. Dunlap signed the Amended Complaint. A true and correct copy of the Amended Complaint is attached as Exhibit M.

151. The Amended Complaint included an Exhibit (“Class List”) identifying an ISP and IP address, and the alleged date and time of infringement, for each of the 4,577 alleged infringers in the proposed Class.
152. Of the 4,577 proposed Class members, the Class List lists 917 (the proposed members of Subclass I) with an alleged infringement date prior to November 24, 2009. Approximately 20% of the alleged infringers listed are in the proposed Subclass I, by virtue of the dates on which Defendants allege they committed infringing acts.
153. The Amended Complaint fails to distinguish between its allegations against pre-registration and post-registration infringers when stating the remedies Achte can seek, as well as in its prayer for judgment.
154. The Amended Complaint states, “As a result of each Defendant’s infringement of Plaintiff’s exclusive rights under copyright, Plaintiff is entitled to relief pursuant to 17 U.S.C. § 504 and to its attorneys’ fees and costs pursuant to 17 U.S.C. § 505.” Exhibit M ¶ 14 (emphasis added).
155. The Amended Complaint states a prayer for judgment “against each Defendant” that includes “actual damages or statutory damages pursuant to 17 U.S.C. § 504, at the election of [Achte]” and “[Achte’s] reasonable attorney’s fees.” Exhibit M, pp. 5-6.
156. Those remedies are legally unfounded pursuant to Section 412, which bars Achte from obtaining Ineligible Remedies from any of the 3,644 members of the proposed Subclass II, including Plaintiff.

157. In both the original complaint and the Amended Complaint, the identification of Ineligible Remedies as remedies available to Defendants from members of Subclass II is fraudulent.
158. Even if Defendants' infringement claim were valid, Achte could not recover the Ineligible Remedies, as a matter of law, from any member of either proposed Subclass.
159. Any settlement obtained by Defendants from members of either proposed Subclass on the basis of threats of liability for Ineligible Remedies is fraudulent.
160. Upon information and belief, Defendants have never had a genuine intention of filing suit in any case where the relief available would be limited to actual damages.
161. Upon information and belief, Defendants did not intend to name members of Subclass II as defendants in full-blown litigation at the time the Amended Complaint was filed.
162. DGW employed the court's third-party discovery procedures without regard to Section 412. From certain ISPs, DGW obtained discovery even though it made no allegation that any customer used those ISPs to infringe rights that would justify more than actual damages.
163. For example, on information and belief, DGW sent a subpoena to SBC Internet Services upon receiving leave of court.
164. Appendix A to DGW's Amended Complaint shows that all 386 acts of infringement that Defendants have alleged in connection with SBC Internet Services transpired between September 25 and December 28, 2009—all before the January 19, 2010 Effective Date.

F. Defendants Have Used Complaints and Subpoenas Supported by False Claims to Make More False Threats Directly to The Members of The Proposed Class.

165. The false claims in Achte's copyright registration and court filings share one purpose: to enable DGW/USCG to obtain the contact information of alleged infringers. Using that information, Defendants have been able to make further fraudulent claims and extortionate threats directly to the proposed Class members, through their Letters and their settlement websites.
166. Upon information and belief, Defendants had no genuine intention of litigating the claims made in the Letters at the time they were sent to members of Subclass II. The Letters, which threaten litigation against each person addressed, fraudulently conceal Defendants' true intent.
167. On or about May 19, 2010, Defendant Kurtz sent a Letter to Plaintiff, accusing him of infringing Achte's film Far Cry at 3:26:18 AM on December 11, 2009. A true and correct copy of the Letter is attached as Exhibit N.
168. Upon information and belief, DGW sends virtually the same demand letter to the defendants in each of its lawsuits on behalf of its film clients, and the Letter Kurtz sent to Plaintiff is but one instance of a form demand letter sent to thousands of John Doe defendants, substantially identical in all but certain factual allegations specific to each defendant, including: the subscriber's name, address, ISP, and IP address; the name of the motion picture allegedly infringed; the date and time of the alleged infringement; the peer-to-peer software that DGW alleges the subscriber used; a file hash factor allegedly associated with the subscriber; and the date by which DGW demands payment.⁵⁸

169. Therefore, upon information and belief, beyond those specific factual allegations, substantially all statements made in the Letter addressed to Plaintiff has been repeated in each Letter DGW has sent to members of the proposed Class.

170. The Letter was sent to Plaintiff via first class mail by DGW. It was signed by Kurtz on behalf of DGW. It was printed on DGW letterhead. See Exhibit N.

171. The Letter informed Plaintiff that DGW had already filed suit in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia on behalf of its client Achte against John Doe Defendants, and that the ISP had supplied DGW with Plaintiff's contact information, identifying him "as one of the Defendants who has illegally obtained or shared our client's copyrighted motion picture through a peer-to-peer network [Gnutilla, BitTorrent etc.]." Id.

172. Specifically, the Letter informed Plaintiff that, "[a]ccording to our records, you have placed a media file which contains the copyright-protected film content for our client's motion picture entitled Far Cry in a shared folder enabling others to download copies of this content." Id. It further claimed, "[w]e have also obtained the file name of the movie, the file size and the GUID, all corresponding to an IP address that was assigned to your ISP account at the time the infringing activity occurred." Id.

⁵⁸ Compare the virtually identical Letter from DGW sent to Jon Harrison, Sr. of Irving, Texas dated May 21, 2010, as published by CNET News at http://news.cnet.com/2300-1023_3-10003610-6.html, http://news.cnet.com/2300-1023_3-10003610-7.html, and http://news.cnet.com/2300-1023_3-10003610-8.html (last visited November 1, 2010). A true and correct copy of that published Letter is attached as Exhibit O.

173. DGW frames its Letters as mere settlement offers. For example, the Letter sent to Plaintiff bore several claims that it was “for settlement purposes only” and inadmissible as evidence. The Letter closed by stating, “we look forward to resolving our client’s claim against you in an amicable fashion, through settlement.” Id.
174. The Letters offer not just a means of prompt resolution of the claim, but threats of severe consequences if the recipient fails to cooperate: “[w]e are sending you this letter as a courtesy before we are required to take more formal legal action which would involve adding you as a named Defendant to the lawsuit.” Id.
175. The Letter Kurtz sent to Plaintiff, dated May 19, 2010, offered a release of all legal claims for $1,500, but allowed Plaintiff only until June 11 (23 days later) to comply, at which point the price of settlement would increase to $2,500:

In exchange for a comprehensive release of all legal claims which will enable you to avoid becoming a named defendant, our firm is authorized to accept the sum of $1,500 as full settlement for its claims. This offer will expire at 5pm EST on June 11, 2010. Thereafter, our client will accept no less than the sum of $2,500 to settle this matter, but this increased settlement offer will expire on June 30, 2010.

Exhibit N (emphasis in original).

176. The Letter warned that if Plaintiff did not “settle by June 30th, we may add you to the list of defendants to be served with a lawsuit. ... So essentially, you can avoid being named a Defendant in the lawsuit if you act before June 30th.” Id.
177. Upon information and belief, each Letter afforded its recipients only a similarly short window of time to assess the factual and legal merits of the claims and threats.
178. Upon information and belief, each Letter specifically and repeatedly links its demand for payment to threats for Ineligible Remedies:

[I]f you do not comply with the above requests we may be forced to name you as a Defendant to the lawsuit and proceed directly against you on behalf of our client. If forced to do so, our client will be seeking to recover the maximum amount of fees provided under the Copyright Act for copyright infringement, which is up to $30,000 per illegally downloaded film, plus attorneys' fees and costs of litigation.

Id.

179. Upon information and belief, each Letter claims that the alleged infringement “requires deliberate action,” and claims that this subjects the accused to enhanced statutory damages penalties: “In the event we are able to prove the infringement was intentional, our client will be seeking the maximum statutory damages allowed by the Copyright Act in the amount of $150,000 per infringement, attorneys’ fees and costs.” Id.
180. Defendants go to great lengths to raise the specter of large statutory awards and attorney’s fees. To justify their demands, the Letter makes extensive reference to one recent copyright infringement case in which statutory damages were awarded:

We feel that in light of the verdicts awarded in recent cases, our client’s $1,500 settlement offer is extremely reasonable. For example, in the case of Sony BMG Music Entertainment v. Tenenbaum (D. Mass.) [1:07-cv-11446], a $675,000 jury verdict against a Boston University graduate student for illegally downloading and sharing 30 songs was recently upheld. This means that the jury awarded $22,500 per illegally-shared song. We think that by providing our Doe Defendants an opportunity to settle our client’s claim for $1,500 instead of having to incur thousands of dollars in attorneys’ fees and being at risk for a high jury verdict, our client is acting reasonably and in good faith.

Id. (emphasis added).

181. This Court subsequently held that the Tenenbaum damages award was in violation of the Due Process Clause, and reduced the award by 90 percent, to $67,500, or $2,250 per song infringed (three times the statutory minimum of $750). Sony BMG Music Entertainment v. Tenenbaum (D. Mass.), Civ. A. No. 1:03-cv-11661-NG (filed July 9, 2010).

182. Having warned Plaintiff, and other recipients of the Letter, that the Tenenbaum damages award “was recently upheld,” Kurtz has failed to clarify that his prime example of a typical recent verdict has since been found unconstitutionally excessive and decimated.
183. Defendants have thereby fostered the false impression that the original Tenebaum award was legitimate and relevant to the Letter’s recipients.
184. Because the Tenenbaum award was for statutory damages, it has never been relevant to the allegations and threats Defendants have made to the members of Subclass II.
185. The Letters’ identification of statutory damages and attorney’s fees as remedies available to Defendants from the proposed Subclass II is fraudulent.
186. No member of the proposed Subclass II is “at risk of a high jury verdict” like the one initially awarded against Tenenbaum, because the Ineligible Remedies are categorically off limits.
187. The Letters’ frequent irrelevant and misleading references to statutory damages, including their multiple citations to the statutory maximums and uncorrected references to unconstitutionally excessive jury awards, were, however, directly relevant to their implicit purpose: frightening and intimidating Letter recipients into hasty settlements under false pretenses.
188. Each Letter misdirects its recipients in citing the relevant law. The Copyright Act is found at Title 17 of the United States Code, Sections 101 through 1332, inclusive. However, the Letter mentions the Act only once, and then only mentions a few Sections, as follows:

The law provides protection for copyright owners through the Federal copyright statute found at 17 U.S.C. §§ 501-506, which allows the copyright owner to impound your material, recover their attorney’s fees, and seek damages of $750 - $150,000 per work, depending on the circumstances of the infringement.

Exhibit N.

189. That limited statutory citation was intentionally misleading as used in the Letter, because it omits any reference to the extensive limitations stated in the Copyright Act, including the limitations on Ineligible Remedies set out in Section 412. The Copyright Act states that statutory damages, and “a reasonable attorney’s fee to the prevailing party,” respectively, are available “[e]xcept as otherwise provided by this title,” i.e., by the Copyright Act.⁵⁹ The Letter misleadingly omitted reference to the limitations “otherwise provided” in Section 412.
190. Moreover, the Letter’s bare statement that the Act “allows the copyright owner to impound your material” threatens the accused with an unwarranted invasion of privacy, making no reference to the Fourth Amendment’s limitations on such seizures. Exhibit N.
191. Any harm Defendants might claim to justify this threat of impoundment is undercut elsewhere in the Letter. The Letter conditions “settlement” on its demand that “you must remove the file from the shared folder or location where our client’s film can be shared or copied within three (3) days of paying a settlement.” Id.
192. But in the meantime, the Letter emphatically demands that no files be removed until settlement is finalized:

Please consider this letter to constitute formal notice that until and unless we are able to settle our client’s claim with you, we demand that you not delete any media files from your computer.

Id. (boldface and italics in original). The Letter threatens that as part of litigation, “we will most certainly have a computer forensic expert inspect your computer,” and further threatens that, upon evidence suggesting premature removal of media files, Achte “will amend its complaint to add a spoliation of evidence claim against you. Be advised that if we were to prevail on this additional claim, the court could award monetary sanctions, evidentiary sanctions and reasonable attorneys’ fees.” Id.

193. The Letter claimed that Plaintiff had placed an infringing file “in a shared folder enabling others to download copies.” Id. But by insisting that accused infringers retain any infringing files in such folders until released by Defendants, obligating the accused to leave the files available to others for up to three days, the Letter mandated that the alleged infringement would continue. Thus, the Letter seeks to perpetuate and multiply any harms from the alleged ongoing infringement, obligating recipients to allow further infringing downloads. By inducing the harm it claims to prevent, each Letter affords Defendants opportunities to later amend their complaints to target subsequent downloaders (who could then be sent similar Letters mandating further open access to infringing files, ad infinitum).

194. DGW’s settlement demand letters do not include the underlying complaints as enclosures. Rather, they direct the accused to one of several claim settlement websites that feature a USCG logo, including among others <http://www.farcry-settlement.com> (the “Far Cry website”), <http://www.copyrightsettlement.info> and <http://www.savecinema.org> (collectively, the “USCG websites”), where the complaint may be viewed, and where the accused may obtain a release from legal claims by entering their credit card information.

195. The complaints on the USCG websites cannot be viewed without a password. Each website displays a phone number and hyperlinks to email DGW for login information. Each USCG website prominently notes, “All Major Credit Cards Accepted.”

196. The Letter directed Plaintiff and others in the proposed Class to the Far Cry website, specifically its FAQ section:

You should visit the Frequently Asked Questions web page we have posted at www.farcry-settlement.com, which will provide additional information and hopefully answer many of the questions you have.

True and correct copies of pages from the Far Cry website, as they appeared on August 27, 2010, are attached as Exhibit P.

197. Though the John Doe defendants have not yet been named as defendants, the FAQ section of the Far Cry website informs them that they have been sued:

2. I have received a letter in the mail about a lawsuit. Why did I get this letter?

This letter is a demand letter. A lawsuit has been filed against you in the United States Federal District Court for the Federal District of Columbia for copyright infringement as a result of information about your infringing download of a motion picture. If you pay the settlement amount and accept the terms of the settlement agreement proposed on your case then you will be dismissed from the lawsuit and your information will remain anonymous. If you do not accept the settlement agreement you may subsequently be served with the lawsuit and expected to defend the claim of copyright infringement as alleged in the complaint.

Exhibit P (emphasis added).

198. The FAQ section of the Far Cry website also informs the accused that a $1,500 settlement would “almost always” cost less than defending the claim. As in the Letters, DGW/USCG couches its coercive tactics on its settlement websites as financial and procedural benefits to the accused:

5. Are there potential benefits to settling this claim?

We are not your attorneys and we are not providing you legal advice. We strongly recommend that you seek advice from an attorney. There are several aspects of settling the copyright infringement claim against you that you might find beneficial. Settling the claim allows you to pay a relatively nominal, one-time lump sum payment to completely resolve the claim, without having to defend yourself in court. The legal fees incurred in defending a copyright infringement claim will almost always exceed the settlement amount demanded by our client. Second, your settlement, identity and contact information will remain private, in that we will not release your information to any third party unless legally required to do so. Third, by settling, you will avoid the potential for a jury verdict against you that could exceed the amount of the settlement (up to $150,000, for willful infringement) and include an award of our client's attorneys' fees, which will certainly be several thousand dollars more. Finally, settling allows you to resolve the claim quickly and easily, over the Internet or by mail.

Id. (emphasis added).

199. The FAQ section, like the Letter, misleadingly emphasizes Ineligible Remedies, as if they were pertinent to members of Subclass II directed to the Far Cry website:

4. What are the consequences or damages that can be awarded in a copyright infringement case?

Statutory damages are available to the owner of a registered work under Title 17, Section 504 of the United States Code in an amount of between $750 and $30,000 per infringed work, if the infringement was not willful. If the infringement was willful, as asserted in the Complaint filed in this case, damages may be as much as $150,000 per infringed work.

Id. (emphasis added). USCG's limited statement to proposed Class members, that "the consequences or damages that can be awarded" are statutory damages, omitted any reference to actual damages.

200. The FAQ section restated the Letter's threat that not accepting the demands could lead to "a jury verdict against you that could exceed the amount of the settlement (up to $150,000, for willful infringement) and include an award of our client's attorneys' fees, which will certainly be several thousand dollars more." Id.

201. That threat is legally baseless and therefore fraudulent as to Plaintiff and each other member of the proposed Subclass II, who Defendants accuse of infringing Achte's Far Cry copyright prior to its registration date.

202. The complaint DGW filed on behalf of Achte was also posted on the Far Cry website.

203. Each member of the proposed Subclass II who viewed the complaint there was subjected to its fraudulent misrepresentations of liability for Ineligible Remedies, which served to reinforce the falsehoods raised in the Letter.

G. Defendants Have Attempted to Keep Alleged Infringers in a State of Legal Limbo Until They Settle.

204. Achte, through its legal counsel DGW, has repeatedly maneuvered to extend the pending litigation in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, in which the members of the proposed Class have been designated (but not named) as defendants.

205. To date, Defendants have not named as defendants in the Achte case any of the 4,577 members of the proposed Class as threatened.

206. Achte filed its original complaint on March 18, 2010, and its Amended Complaint on May 12, 2010. Ordinarily, a civil action must be dismissed if plaintiffs fail to serve a summons on the defendant within 120 days of the complaint.⁶⁰ Achte obtained from the court an extension of time to serve defendants, until November 18, 2010. Achte then sought a second extension that would have allowed it up to 58 months to name as defendants any member of the proposed Class (even those whose contact information was supplied to Defendants by ISPs months ago).

207. Upon information and belief, Defendants have sought to keep members of the proposed Class in a state of legal limbo, extending the deadline by which Defendants must identify the infringement claims it will in fact pursue in the District of Columbia, if any.
208. Upon information and belief, each Achte maneuver that perpetuates the tenuous legal status of members of the proposed Class makes settlements more likely: not owing to any merits of Defendants' legal position, but as a means of resolving the nuisance effect of Defendants' litigation.
209. Achte's motion for a second extension was denied as "patently unfair and prejudicial to all John Does who have been identified by an ISP."⁶¹ The Court ordered Achte to (1) file and serve a Second Amended Complaint by December 6, 2010, naming any members of the proposed Class whom it wishes to sue in that court, upon a reasonable belief that it has jurisdiction; and (2) notify the court as to which identified John Doe defendants Achte reasonably believes the court has (or concedes the court lacks) jurisdiction. The Court also granted a three-month extension of Achte's deadline to serve the few John Doe defendants whose contact information has not yet been provided by an ISP.
210. To date, Defendants have not named as defendants, in any of their actions in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, any of the almost 20,000 individuals they have accused and targeted for settlement revenue collection this year.

⁶¹ Order, No. 10-453 (D.D.C. Nov. 19, 2010).

H. Achte's True Remedy for any Infringement of its Copyright prior to Valid Registration Is Limited to Some Fraction of $26.99.

211. Defendants have threatened to seek statutory damages of up to $150,000, and attorney's fees, from 3,644 individuals (the proposed Subclass II) whom they allege infringed Achte's copyright prior to January 19, 2010, and whose alleged infringements therefore commenced prior to that date.
212. Because Achte cannot seek statutory damages for any of the copyright infringements it alleges by members of the proposed Class, the most Achte can hope to recover for any such alleged pre-registration infringement would be actual damages.
213. Upon information and belief, the actual damages available to Achte for the infringement alleged in the Complaint would be some fraction of the retail list price of a DVD, as a measure of Achte's lost profits.
214. Upon information and belief, the list price of a new DVD of Far Cry is $26.99.
215. USCG, DGW, and Achte have a direct financial incentive to avoid settling claims in the amount of any actual damages Achte may have incurred, which (at some fraction of $26.99) would be more than 50 times lower than the settlement offer it has presented to members of the proposed Class.
216. Upon information and belief, if the Letters had honestly informed members of the proposed Subclass II that no more than a fraction of $26.99 was at stake, none would have entertained a settlement offer anywhere near $1,500.
217. $26.99 is a far cry from $1,500.
218. Upon information and belief, if the Letters had honestly informed members of the proposed Subclass II that the statutory damages award amounts it references (up to $150,000) were irrelevant, none would have entertained a settlement offer anywhere near $1,500.

219. $26.99 is a far cry from $150,000.

220. The false elements of Defendants' claims predominate the Letters. Kurtz repeatedly referred to exorbitant penalties to which Achte has no legal right; but Kurtz never mentioned actual damages, Achte's true remedy.

CONCLUSION

221. The DGW revenue model does not require that each individual claim is meritorious. Even when its allegations have no basis in the copyright law, or when particular accused individuals are wholly innocent, there is still money to be made by Defendants.

222. DGW is well aware of the extremity of the damages awards it claims in its demand Letters, and that its "settlement offer" is less expensive than attorneys would charge merely to begin a litigation defense.

223. Nonetheless, DGW capitalizes on fear and aims to intimidate, such that even non-infringers will be likely to pay up rather than risk higher fees and damages.

224. Upon information and belief, Defendants have already collected millions of dollars in settlements from members of the proposed Class, much of it on the basis of false claims that Defendants knew, or should have known, to be false.

225. Plaintiff has not acceded to Defendants' demands and has not paid to settle the claims. However, he has incurred costs in retaining counsel. The costs of counsel that Plaintiff has borne, in reliance on the false allegations of the Letter, are directly attributable to Defendants' fraudulent activity. Plaintiff would have avoided those costs had the Letter been truthful.

226. Upon information and belief, members of the proposed Class have paid Defendants millions of dollars in extortion money, spent untold further sums on legal counsel, and borne other incidental costs in reliance on Defendants' fraudulent statements.
227. Upon information and belief, members of the proposed Class would have avoided those expenses if not for Defendants' fraudulent statements.
228. Upon information and belief, members of the proposed Class who accepted Achte's demands agreed not to disclose the terms of settlement, and further agreed that breaching the settlement agreement's confidentiality would subject the member of the proposed Class to $15,000 in automatic liquidated damages, attorney's fees, and costs.
229. Defendants have colluded to implement the USCG business model indiscriminately, extorting thousands of alleged infringers without due regard for the legal foundation of their threats.
230. Defendants have sought to paper over the missing foundation for their threats to the proposed Class by perpetrating fraud on the U.S. Copyright Office, obtaining a certificate of registration under false pretenses that lists false information, without which those threats would have rung hollow.
231. Fraud has infected each stage of Defendants' actions since that false registration, tainting their complaints, subpoenas, coercive demand Letters and websites—all the tools of Defendants' conspiracy.

CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS

232. Plaintiff brings this action on behalf of a class of all other persons or entities similarly situated, pursuant to Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Plaintiff seeks to certify the following class and subclasses:
- (a) a class of all 4,577 persons (the “proposed Class”) who Defendants allege infringed the Achte copyright prior to May 12, 2010, the date on which Defendants filed their Amended Complaint;
 - (b) a subclass of all 917 persons (“Subclass I”) who Defendants allege infringed the Achte copyright prior to its claimed date of publication, November 24, 2009; and
 - (c) a subclass of all 3,644 persons (“Subclass II”) who Defendants allege infringed the Achte copyright prior to its effective date of registration, January 19, 2010.
233. The putative Class is so numerous as to make it impracticable to join all members of the class as plaintiffs.
234. The class period is limited to the applicable statute of limitations for the claims at issue.
235. There are questions of law and fact that are common to all members of the purported class, which questions predominate over any questions affecting only individual class members.
236. The principal common issues include the following:
- (a) whether Defendants wrongfully asserted rights to statutory damages and attorney’s fees for acts of alleged infringement;
 - (b) whether the copyright registration certificate is valid;

- (c) whether Dunlap committed fraud on the Copyright Office that invalidates the copyright registration Achte has used to support its claims;
- (d) whether Achte, through its agents USCG, DGW, Dunlap and Kurtz, wrongfully threatened proposed Class members on the basis of fraudulent and/or negligent omissions and/or misrepresentations;
- (e) whether acts by some or all Defendants constitute fraud, extortion, abuse of process, copyright misuse, and/or misappropriation of funds from the proposed Class members;
- (f) whether settlements obtained by Defendants from members of the proposed Class were obtained on the basis of Defendants' fraudulent and/or negligent omissions and/or misrepresentations;
- (g) whether acts by some or all Defendants constitutes a conspiracy; and
- (h) the form and amount of damages and costs, if any, that Achte could legitimately seek in a copyright infringement action against any proposed Class members.

237. In this case there is no question as to the identification of class members because the proposed Class is limited to the 4,577 John Doe defendants whom Defendants contend infringed Achte's copyright, and Defendants have a database identifying each proposed Class members whose contact information they have obtained and employed. There is also no issue as to the amount of the Class members' damages because the amount of each wrongful settlement is contained within Defendants' records, and the Class members can demonstrate the amount of any additional damages suffered individually, including attorney's fees and other legal costs associated with resolving exaggerated claims.

238. The claims of Plaintiff are typical of the claims of all the members of the purported class because all claims are based on the same legal and remedial theories.
239. Plaintiff will fairly and adequately protect the interests of all purported class members in the prosecution of this action and in the administration of all matters relating to the claims stated herein. Plaintiff is similarly situated with, and has suffered similar injuries as, the members of the purported class that he seeks to represent. Plaintiff believes that he has been wronged, wishes to obtain redress of the wrong and wants Defendants stopped from reaping ill gotten gains. To that end, Plaintiff has retained counsel knowledgeable in copyright law and experienced in trial work in general. Neither Plaintiff, nor counsel, have any interest that may cause them to not vigorously pursue this action.
240. Plaintiff brings this action under Rule 23(b)(3) because common questions of law and fact (identified in paragraph 237 above) predominate over questions of law and fact affecting individual members of the Class. Indeed, the predominant issues in this action are whether Defendants are violating and have violated the law by pressing illegitimate claims in the United States Copyright Office, the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, and in coercive communications with purported Class members nationwide. In addition, the expense of litigating each Class member's claim individually would be so cost-prohibitive as to deny Class members a viable remedy.
241. Certification under Rule 23(b)(3) is appropriate because:
- (a) the individual class members may not be aware that they have been deceived and are thus unable to prosecute individual actions;

- (b) the amount of money Defendants have wrongfully collected from each Class member who assented to settlement, sums likely no greater than $2,500, does not justify individual lawsuits;
- (c) Defendants have sought discovery from third-party ISPs regarding all proposed Class members on the basis of the Achte complaint and supporting documents filed in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and have threatened to further litigate its claims against proposed Class members, but have not yet named any Class member as a defendant individually, in that Court or any other;
- (d) concentration of the litigation concerning this matter in this Court is desirable;
- (e) the claims of the representative Plaintiff are typical of the claims of the members of the purported class;
- (f) a failure of justice will result from the absence of a class action; and
- (g) the difficulties likely to be encountered in the management of this class action are limited.

242. Plaintiff also brings this action under Rule 23(b)(2) because Defendants have acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to all members of the Class, thereby making final injunctive relief concerning the Class as a whole appropriate. In the absence of appropriate injunctive and/or declaratory relief, Defendants will continue to gather contact information for alleged infringers, threaten them with illegitimate claims, and collect settlements stemming from the same activity. Defendants' uniform conduct towards Plaintiff and the other members of the Class makes certification under Rule 23(b)

(2) appropriate, including but not limited to:

- (a) GuardaLey has uniformly accessed proposed Class members' IP addresses and other data;
- (b) Achte, through its agents DGW, Dunlap, and Kurtz, has uniformly employed data compiled by GuardaLey to justify claims for statutory damages and attorney fees, in courtroom filings and in uniform letters Kurtz addressed to the purported Class members individually;
- (c) Dunlap falsified information on the copyright registration that obscured the fraudulent aspects of Achte's claim against each proposed Class member;
- (d) Kurtz sent fraudulent Letters to members of the proposed Class, threatening Ineligible Remedies to secure wrongful settlements.
- (e) DGW and Dunlap developed USCG, an alias for DGW, which facilitated, aided, abetted, and/or conspired with DGW and Achte's pursuit of fraudulent settlements from each proposed Class member.

243. Defendants' wrongful acts are unlikely to be remedied absent a class action. Many Proposed Class members who paid to settle Achte's claims may not yet be aware of the extent of Defendants' wrongdoing. Moreover, members of the proposed Class who accepted DGW's demands agreed not to disclose the terms of settlement, and further agreed that breaching the settlement agreement's confidentiality would subject the member of the Proposed Class to $15,000 in automatic liquidated damages, attorney's fees, and costs.

244. In contrast, on a class-wide basis, Defendants have reaped huge monetary gains by uniformly and systematically collecting settlements on the basis of fraud and extortion.

CLAIMS

FIRST COUNT FOR RELIEF

Extortion under the Hobbs Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1951

245. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in this Complaint.

246. Defendants DGW, USCG, Dunlap, Kurtz, and Achte extorted and/or attempted to extort money from Plaintiff and each other member of the proposed Class.

247. The Defendants committed mail fraud in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1951. Specifically, Defendants verbally and by written communication, maliciously and improperly coerced members of the proposed Class into entering settlement agreements under the threat of fraudulent claims for statutory damages and financially burdensome legal and settlement fees to defend against claims that Defendants never intended to file.

248. The Defendants made the threats with the intent that members of the proposed Class would rely on them.

249. Members of the proposed Class did rely on Defendants' threats, which were material to their decision to settle. Had they known that these threats were unsubstantiated, the proposed Class members would not have settled.

250. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' threats, and the proposed Class members' reliance on those threats, the proposed Class members suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.

251. Members of the proposed Class are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

SECOND COUNT FOR RELIEF

Extortion

252. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in this Complaint.
253. Defendants DGW, USCG, Dunlap, Kurtz, and Achte extorted and/or attempted to extort money from Plaintiff and each other member of the proposed Class.
254. Defendants, verbally and by written communication, maliciously and improperly coerced members of the proposed Class into entering settlement agreements under the threat of fraudulent claims for statutory damages and financially burdensome legal and settlement fees to defend against claims that Defendants never intended to file.
255. The Defendants made the threats with the intent that members of the proposed Class would rely on them.
256. Members of the proposed Class did rely on Defendants' threats, which were material to their decision to settle. Had they known that these threats were unsubstantiated, the proposed Class members would not have settled.
257. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' threats, and the proposed Class members' reliance on those threats, the proposed Class members suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.

258. Members of the proposed Class are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

THIRD COUNT FOR RELIEF
Conspiracy to Commit Extortion

259. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.
260. The Defendants each knowingly and willfully conspired and agreed to engage in the scheme to extort described in this Complaint.
261. The Defendants committed and caused to be committed one or more overt and unlawful acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, including but not limited to the acts described in this Complaint.
262. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' conspiracy to commit extortion, the proposed Class members suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.
263. The proposed Class members are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

FOURTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Fraudulent Omissions/Nondisclosure

264. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.

265. The Defendants failed to disclose to and concealed from the proposed Class members, and engaged in a scheme to keep the proposed Class members ignorant of, pertinent and material information regarding the falsity of certain claims made by Defendants, Defendants' knowledge of that falsity, and their intent to not pursue any unsettled claims. Specifically, the Defendants failed to disclose and concealed from the proposed Class members pertinent and material information that includes but is not limited to the following:

- (a) Dunlap, as part of DGW and USCG, on behalf of Achte, when he filed for to register the copyright for the motion picture Far Cry, concealed, omitted and failed to disclose material information concerning its date of first publication.
- (b) Dunlap, Kurtz, and DGW, on behalf of Achte, when they filed suit against the proposed Class and served discovery requests on the proposed Class members' ISPs, concealed, omitted and failed to disclose the falsity of the registration and the bar against statutory damages and attorney's fees (the Ineligible Remedies) for works published more than three months prior their copyright registration;
- (c) Defendants then threatened members of the proposed Class, including Subclass I and Subclass II, with claims for Ineligible Remedies, concealing, omitting and failing to disclose that they were, in fact, limited to actual damages.
- (d) Defendants concealed, omitted and failed to disclose that they never intended to file suit against members of the proposed Class individually, whether they settled or not.

266. The Defendants had superior knowledge and information about that pertinent and material information, which knowledge and information was not reasonably available to the proposed Class members and could not have been discovered through ordinary diligence. The Defendants therefore had a duty to speak and to inform the proposed Class members of the truth about the nondisclosed, omitted, and concealed facts.
267. By failing to disclose to, omitting, and concealing from the proposed Class members the true facts regarding the scope of Achte's copyright, the falsity in its registration, and its lack of intent to fully litigate its claims, the Defendants intended to create a false impression of the actual facts in the minds of the proposed Class members.
268. The Defendants sought to ensure that members of the proposed Class would not discover the truth by:
- (a) filing a materially misleading application to register the copyright for Far Cry, and using that registration as a license to claim Ineligible Remedies from members of Subclass II;
 - (b) intimating, in the FAQ section of the Far Cry settlement website, that the fees for representation by counsel to defend the claim "will almost always exceed the settlement amount"; and
 - (c) filing a single complaint in the District of Columbia against thousands of John Doe defendants nationwide, though Defendants knew that would be a remote location for most Class members.

269. The Defendants' nondisclosures, omissions, and concealments were material because, had the members of the proposed Class known the truth, they would not have agreed to Defendants' terms for settlement and would not have entrusted funds to the Defendants.
270. The Defendants knew that: (1) this information would have been highly material to the members of the proposed Class decision of whether to settle; (2) the members of the proposed Class were ignorant of this material information; and (3) the members of the proposed Class were not in a position to discover the truth about DGW and USCG's operations.
271. The members of the proposed Class relied on the Defendants' fraudulent nondisclosures, omissions, and concealments when the proposed Class members made settlement payments and other expenditures that they would have avoided had they been aware of the truth.
272. The proposed Class members' reliance was reasonable and justified under the circumstances, and they had a right to rely on the facts as they believed them to be absent knowledge of the fraudulent nondisclosures, omissions, and concealments.
273. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' fraudulent nondisclosures, omissions, and concealments, and the proposed Class members' reliance on the assumption that the concealed and undisclosed facts did not exist or were different from what the facts actually were, the proposed Class members suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.

274. The proposed Class members are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

FIFTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Fraudulent Misrepresentations

275. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.

276. The Defendants made numerous false representations, both orally and in writing, to the proposed Class members, including:

- (a) threatening to name members of the proposed Class as defendants in lawsuits that Defendants did not genuinely intend to file;
- (b) threatening to file suit against members of the proposed Subclass I to pursue claims for Ineligible Remedies, despite the absolute bar of Section 412(1);
- (c) threatening to file suit against members of the proposed Subclass II to pursue claims for Ineligible Remedies, despite the absolute bar of Section 412(2);
- (d) claiming that the copyright registration for Far Cry is valid despite material misrepresentations made by Defendants in the application;
- (e) threatening to file suit against members of the proposed Class to pursue claims for Ineligible Remedies on the basis of a certificate of registration that does not satisfy Section 411(b);

277. At the time Defendants made these representations, the proposed Class members did not know that they were false and fraudulent.

278. These false representations were material to the proposed Class members' decision to settle. Had the proposed Class members known that these representations were not true, they would not have agreed to Defendants' terms for settlement.
279. The Defendants made the false representations knowing them to be false or being aware that the proposed Class members did not know whether the representations were true or false.
280. The Defendants willfully and consciously disregarded the truth of these false representations.
281. The Defendants made the false representations with the intent that the proposed Class members would rely on the false representations. In order to ensure that reliance, the Defendants kept plaintiffs ignorant of the material misrepresentations in Achte's copyright registration.
282. The proposed Class members relied on the Defendants' false representations by settling when they would not have done so had they known the truth about Achte's copyright registration.
283. The proposed Class members' reliance was reasonable and justified, and they had a right to rely on the false representations.
284. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' false representations, and the proposed Class members' reliance on those false representations, the proposed Class members suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.

285. The proposed Class members are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

SIXTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Mail Fraud, 18 U.S.C. § 1341

286. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in this Complaint.

287. The Defendants committed mail fraud in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1341. Specifically, the Defendants engaged in an intentional scheme to defraud and obtain money from the proposed Class members through false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, and promises. It was reasonably foreseeable to each Defendant that the mails would be used in furtherance of the scheme, and the mails were in fact used to further and execute the scheme to defraud.

288. For the purpose of furthering and executing the scheme to defraud, the Defendants regularly caused matters and things to be placed in a post office or authorized depository, or deposited or caused to be deposited matters or things to be sent or delivered by a private or commercial interstate carrier (the "mailings"). The details of the mailings are set forth above.

289. The Defendants used the mails on a daily basis for the above stated purposes to further and execute the scheme to defraud the proposed Class members.

290. Defendants have definitive knowledge that Achte has made claims that are barred by statute. Since forming that knowledge, every time that the Defendants mailed a settlement demand letter to a member of the proposed Class, pursued third-party discovery from ISPs, or filed any motion with the court other than a motion to withdraw its complaint, the Defendants furthered the false impression that their demands were legitimate.

291. At the time the mailings were made, the proposed Class members to whom they were mailed did not know that these representations contained therein were false and fraudulent.
292. These false representations were material to the proposed Class members' decision to settle. Had they known that these representations were not true, the proposed Class members would not have settled.
293. The Defendants made the false representations knowing them to be false and/or being aware that proposed Class members did not know whether the representations were true or false.
294. The Defendants made the false representations with the intent that proposed Class members would rely on the false representations.
295. The proposed Class members did rely on the false representations to their detriment. That reliance was reasonable and justified, and the proposed Class members had a right to rely on the false representations contained in the mailings.
296. Each act of mail fraud detailed in this Complaint constitutes a predicate act of fraud under RICO because each mailing furthered and executed the scheme to defraud proposed Class members.
297. The Defendants each participated in the scheme to defraud knowingly, willfully, and with a specific intent to defraud proposed Class members into entering settlement agreements under the threat of fraudulent claims for statutory damages and the threat to take legal action when none was intended to be taken.

298. The Defendants' scheme to defraud the proposed Class members extended over at least a one year period, from November, 2009 to the present.
299. As a result of their misconduct and the proposed Class members' reliance on that misconduct, the Defendants are liable to the proposed Class members for their losses, in an amount to be determined at trial.
300. The proposed Class members are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

SEVENTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Conspiracy to Commit Mail Fraud

301. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.
302. The Defendants each knowingly and willfully conspired and agreed to engage in the scheme to defraud described in this Complaint.
303. The Defendants committed and caused to be committed one or more overt and unlawful acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, including but not limited to the acts described in this Complaint.
304. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' conspiracy to commit mail fraud, members of the proposed Class suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.

305. Members of the proposed Class are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

EIGHTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Wire Fraud, 18 U.S.C. § 1343

306. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in this Complaint.

307. The Defendants committed wire fraud in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1343. Specifically, the Defendants engaged in an intentional scheme to defraud the proposed Class members and to obtain money from the proposed Class members through false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, and promises. It was reasonably foreseeable to each Defendant that the wires would be used in furtherance of the scheme, and the wires were in fact used to further and execute the scheme to defraud.

308. For the purpose of furthering and executing the scheme to extort and defraud, the Defendants regularly transmitted or caused to be transmitted by means of wire communication in interstate or foreign commerce, writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds (the "wirings"). The details of the wirings are set forth above.

309. The Defendants used the wires on a daily basis for the above stated purposes to further and execute the scheme to defraud the proposed Class members.

310. Defendants have definitive knowledge that Achte has made claims that are barred by statute. Since forming that knowledge, every time that the Defendants wired a settlement demand letter to a member of the proposed Class, received payment from a member of the proposed Class via one of its settlement websites, pursued third-party discovery from ISPs via wires, or electronically filed any motion with the court other than a motion to withdraw its complaint, the Defendants furthered the false impression that their demands were legitimate.

311. At the time the wirings were made, the proposed Class members to whom they were wired did not know that these representations contained therein were false and fraudulent.
312. These false representations were material to the proposed Class members' decision to settle. Had they known that these representations were not true, the proposed Class members would not have settled.
313. The Defendants made the false representations knowing them to be false and/or being aware that proposed Class members did not know whether the representations were true or false.
314. The Defendants made the false representations with the intent that members of the proposed Class would rely on the false representations.
315. The proposed Class members did rely on the false representations to their detriment. That reliance was reasonable and justified, and the proposed Class members had a right to rely on the false representations contained in the wirings.
316. Each act of wire fraud detailed in this Complaint each constitutes a predicate act of fraud under RICO because each wiring furthered and executed the scheme to defraud proposed Class members.
317. The Defendants each participated in the scheme to defraud knowingly, willfully, and with a specific intent to defraud proposed Class members into entering settlement agreements under the threat of fraudulent claims for statutory damages and the threat to take legal action when none was intended to be taken.

318. The Defendants' scheme to defraud the Plaintiffs' extended over at least a one year period, from November, 2009 to the present.

319. As a result of their misconduct and the proposed Class members' reliance on that misconduct, the Defendants are liable to the proposed Class members for their losses, in an amount to be determined at trial.

320. The proposed Class members are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

NINTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Conspiracy to Commit Wire Fraud

321. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.

322. The Defendants each knowingly and willfully conspired and agreed to engage in the scheme to defraud described in this Complaint.

324. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' conspiracy to commit wire fraud, members of the proposed Class suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.

325. Members of the proposed Class are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

TENTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Conspiracy to Commit Fraud

326. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.
327. The Defendants each knowingly and willfully conspired and agreed to engage in the scheme to defraud described in this Complaint.
328. The Defendants committed and caused to be committed one or more overt and unlawful acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, including but not limited to the acts described in this Complaint.
329. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' conspiracy to commit fraud, members of the proposed Class suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.
330. Members of the proposed Class are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

ELEVENTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1030 et seq.

331. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in this Complaint.

332. All computers used by Defendants without authorization or in excess of authorized access, were at all relevant times used in interstate commerce and are protected computers pursuant to the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1030(e).
333. Defendants intentionally accessed the secure, protected computers of members of the proposed Class, or other protected computers, without authorization or exceeding their authorization, and thereby obtained information from those protected computers, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1030(a)(2)(C).
334. Defendants knowingly and with the intent to defraud, accessed the secure, protected computers of members of the proposed Class, or other protected computers, or caused others to access the secure, protected computers of members of the proposed Class, or other protected computers, without authorization or in excess of their authorized access, and in furtherance of the intended fraud obtained confidential information and/or other valuable information which has a value exceeding five thousand dollars ($5,000.00) in a one-year period, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1030(a)(4).
335. Defendants knowingly caused the transmission of a program, information, code, or command and/or intentionally accessed the protected computers of members of the proposed Class and/or other protected computers, and, as a result, intentionally and without authorization, recklessly caused damage and loss to the secure, protected computers of proposed Class members and/or other protected computers in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1030(a)(5)(A)-(C).
336. Defendants, through their actions in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1030(a)(2), (a)(4), and (a)(5)(A)-(C), have caused proposed Class members to incur losses for responding to and investigating Defendants' misconduct, including damage and security assessments, exceeding five thousand dollars ($5,000.00) during a one-year period in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1030(g) and (c)(4)(A)(i)(I). The investigation of such losses continues.

337. In addition to an award of compensatory damages, members of the proposed Class are also entitled to injunctive relief pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 1030(g), restraining and enjoining Defendants and all those in privity, concert or participation with Defendants from engaging in such wrongful acts in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1030(a)(2), (a)(4), and (a)(5)(A)-(C).

TWELFTH COUNT FOR RELIEF

338. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.
339. Each of the Defendants knew about the schemes used to defraud the proposed Class members that are described in this Complaint.
340. Each Defendant actively participated in the schemes to defraud by knowingly providing encouragement and substantial assistance in perpetration of the fraud, as described in this Complaint.
341. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' encouragement and substantial assistance in perpetration of the fraud, members of the proposed Class suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.
342. Proposed Class members are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

THIRTEENTH COUNT FOR RELIEF

Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (“RICO”), 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c)

343. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.
344. Each proposed Class member is a “person” under 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961(3) and 1964(c).
345. Each Defendant is a “person” under 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961(3) and 1962(c).
346. Defendants are a group of persons associated in fact for the common purposes of conducting the scheme described in this Complaint: namely, inducing proposed Class members to settle under the threat of fraudulent claims for statutory damages and the threat to take legal action when none was intended to be taken. As a result, Defendants constitute an association-in-fact enterprise within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961(4) and 1962(c) (the “Enterprise”). During all relevant times, the Enterprise was engaged in and its activities affected interstate and foreign commerce.
347. The Defendants were each employed by and/or associated with the Enterprise as detailed in this Complaint.
348. The Defendants each conducted and/or participated in the conduct of the Enterprise’s affairs, as described in this Complaint, through a pattern of racketeering activity, as that phrase is defined in 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961(1) and (5).
349. The pattern of racketeering activity consisted of extortion, mail and/or wire fraud in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1951, 1341, and 1343. Specifically, the Defendants engaged in an intentional scheme to extort and defraud the proposed Class members and to obtain money or property from proposed Class members through false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, threats and promises. It was reasonably foreseeable to each Defendant that the mails and/or wires would be used in furtherance of the scheme, and the mails and/or wires were in fact used to further and execute the scheme.

350. For the purpose of furthering and executing the scheme to extort and defraud, the Defendants regularly transmitted or caused to be transmitted by means of wire communication in interstate or foreign commerce, writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds (the “wirings”), and also regularly caused matters and things to be placed in any post office or authorized depository, or deposited or caused to be deposited matters or things to be sent or delivered by a private or commercial interstate carrier (the “mailings”). The details of the wirings and mailings are set forth above.
351. The Defendants used the wires and/or mails on a daily basis for the above stated purposes to further and execute the scheme to extort and defraud the proposed Class.
352. For example, every time that Defendants mailed or wired a settlement demand letter to a member of the proposed Class, pursued third-party discovery from ISPs, or filed any motion with the court other than a motion to complaint after forming definitive knowledge of Achte’s fraudulent claims for statutory damages, the Defendants furthered the false impression that the Enterprise’s demands were legitimate.
353. The extortion tactics, mail fraud, and wire fraud detailed in this Complaint each constitute a predicate act under RICO of (1) extortion, because each communication was a threat intended to obtain the proposed Class members’ money or property premised upon legal action that was never intended to be taken; and (2) fraud, because each mailing, phone call, and email furthered and executed the scheme to defraud the proposed Class.

354. The Defendants each participated in the scheme to extort and defraud knowingly, willfully, and with a specific intent to defraud proposed Class members into entering settlement agreements under the threat of fraudulent claims for statutory damages and the threat to take legal action when none was intended to be taken.
355. The predicate acts of extortion, mail fraud and wire fraud constitute a pattern of racketeering activity as defined in 18 U.S.C. § 1961(5). The predicate acts were not isolated events but related acts aimed at the common purpose and goal of deceptively persuading proposed Class members to settle. The Defendants were the common participants in the predicate acts; the proposed Class members were the common victims.
356. The Defendants' scheme to defraud the proposed Class members extended over at least a one year period, from November 2009 to the present. The predicate acts were the Enterprise's manner of conducting its business and pose the threat of continuing racketeering activity if left unchecked.
357. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c), the proposed Class members have been injured in their business or property within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c).
358. As a result of their misconduct, the Defendants are liable to the proposed Class members for their losses, in an amount to be determined at trial.
359. In addition, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c), the proposed Class members are entitled to recover threefold their damages, plus costs and attorney's fees from the Defendants.

FOURTEENTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Violation of RICO, 18 U.S.C. § 1962(a)

360. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.
361. Each proposed Class member is a “person” under 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961(3) and 1964(c).
362. Each Defendant is a “person” under 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961(3) and 1962(a).
363. At all relevant times, Defendants constitute an association-in-fact enterprise within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961(4) and 1962(a), which is engaged in, and the activities of which affect, interstate or foreign commerce.
364. Defendants Dunlap and Kurtz were at all relevant times agents of Defendants Achte, DGW, and USCG.
365. Defendants each received income derived, directly or indirectly, from the pattern of racketeering activity described in this Complaint. Specifically, Defendants each received income derived, directly or indirectly, from the scheme to extort and/or defraud the proposed Class members into entering settlement agreements.
366. Defendants participated as principals within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. § 2 in the pattern of racketeering activity described in this Complaint.
367. Upon information and belief, Defendants used or invested, directly or indirectly, a part of such income, or the proceeds of such income, in the acquisition of an interest in, or the establishment or operation of, the Enterprise in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(a).
368. Specifically, Defendants used or invested, directly or indirectly, the funds derived from the pattern of racketeering activity described in this Complaint to further scheme and fund their respective businesses and the Enterprise.

369. As a direct and proximate result of Defendants' violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(a), the proposed Class members have been injured in their business or property within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c).
370. Specifically, the proposed Class members' injuries were directly and proximately caused by the investment of the racketeering funds into Defendants' respective businesses and the Enterprise, because such investment made the racketeering funds permanently inaccessible to Plaintiffs.
371. As a result of their misconduct, Defendants are liable to the proposed Class members for their losses in an amount to be determined at trial.
372. In addition, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c), the proposed Class members are entitled to recover threefold their damages, plus costs and attorney's fees from Defendants.

FIFTEENTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Conspiracy to Violate RICO under 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d)

373. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.
374. Each of the Defendants conspired to violate 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c) by agreeing to conduct, and participate, directly or indirectly, in the conduct of, the affairs of the scheme through a pattern of racketeering activity. This agreement was in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d).
375. Each of the Defendants also conspired to violate 18 U.S.C. § 1962(a) by agreeing to use or invest income received, directly or indirectly, from a pattern of racketeering activity in the operation of the scheme and their respective businesses. This agreement was in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d).

376. The Defendants committed and caused to be committed a series of overt predicate acts of racketeering in furtherance of the conspiracy, including but not limited to the acts described in this Complaint.
377. As a direct and proximate result of the overt predicate acts of racketeering and of the Defendants' violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d), the proposed Class members have been injured in their business or property within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c).
378. As a result of their conspiracy in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d), the Defendants are liable to the proposed Class members for their losses, in an amount to be determined at trial.
379. In addition, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c), the proposed Class members are entitled to recover threefold their damages, plus costs and attorney's fees from the Defendants.

SIXTEENTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Negligent Misrepresentations and Omissions

380. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.
381. In the course of their business, the Defendants supplied information to the proposed Class members that was relevant and material to the Class members' determination of whether to enter into a settlement agreement.
382. The Defendants owed a duty to disclose to the proposed Class members all pertinent and material information relevant to the decision of whether to settle.
383. Due to the Defendants' failure to exercise reasonable care, the Defendants: (1) provided false and misleading information to the proposed Class members; and (2) failed to disclose to the proposed Class members pertinent and material information regarding statutory damages, attorney's fees, and Achte's copyright registration. This failure to disclose material information was tantamount to supplying false information.

384. The Defendants negligently made misrepresentations and failed to disclose material information to the proposed Class members with the intent that the proposed Class members would rely on the misrepresentations and omissions and agree to settle.

385. At the time they were made, the proposed Class members did not know that the representations were false and did not know the information that the Defendants negligently failed to disclose.

386. In deciding to enter into a settlement agreement, the proposed Class members reasonably and justifiably relied on the information, including the negligent misrepresentations, provided by the Defendants.

387. Had the proposed Class members known that these misrepresentations were not true or known the material information that the Defendants had a duty to disclose and failed to disclose, they would neither have agreed to settle nor make significant expenditures to obtain legal advice.

388. The proposed Class members in fact relied upon the Defendants' omissions and nondisclosures by agreeing to settle and/or making significant expenditures to obtain legal advice, which they would not have done had they been aware of the true facts

389. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' negligent misrepresentations, omissions, and nondisclosures, and the proposed Class members' reliance on those misrepresentations and their reasonable belief that the concealed and undisclosed facts did not exist or were different from what the facts actually were, Plaintiffs suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.

SEVENTEENTH COUNT FOR RELIEF

Fraud upon the Court

390. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in this Complaint.
391. DGW, Dunlap and Kurtz (the “Attorney Defendants”) were at all relevant times officers of the Court.
392. The United States District Court for the District of Columbia (the “Court”) relied on the Attorney Defendants’ misrepresentations and fraudulent acts.
393. The Attorney Defendants intentionally failed to disclose to and concealed from the Court, and engaged in a fraudulent scheme to keep the Court ignorant of, pertinent and material information regarding the Attorney Defendants’ knowledge of the falsity of certain claims and the ulterior or illegitimate purposes for which they sought subpoenas.
394. Specifically, the Attorney Defendants failed to disclose and concealed from the Court pertinent and material information that includes but is not limited to the following:
- (a) the Attorney Defendants, USCG, and Achte instituted the actions as a vehicle to discover the identities and contact information of the proposed Class members;
 - (b) the Attorney Defendants, USCG, and Achte’s shared intent, at all relevant times, was to use that information to improperly coerce the proposed Class members into entering settlement agreements;
 - (c) Dunlap knowingly obtained a certificate of copyright registration for Far Cry on the basis of materially false information which, if the Register of Copyrights had known of the falsity, would have occasioned a rejection of the registration application;

(d) the Attorney Defendants never intended to name members of the proposed Subclass I and Subclass II members as defendants in its action at the United States District Court for the District of Columbia; and

(d) certain claims for relief prayed for by Achte were false, including Achte's claim for statutory damages and attorney's fees, which are Ineligible Remedies as to the members of the proposed Subclass I and Subclass II.

395. The settlement funds Defendants collected from members of the proposed Class were used to further the Enterprise, which was initiated by the Attorney Defendants.

396. In deciding to authorize the subpoenas requested by the Court reasonably and justifiably relied on the representations and misrepresentations made by the Attorney Defendants.

397. Had the Court known the truth of the Attorney Defendants' misrepresentations and the material information that the Attorney Defendants had a duty to disclose and failed to disclose, the Court would not have authorized the subpoenas.

398. As a direct and proximate result of the Attorney Defendants' fraudulent misrepresentations, omissions, and nondisclosures, and the Court's reliance on those misrepresentations and its assumption that the concealed and undisclosed facts did not exist or were different from what the facts actually were, members of the proposed Class suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.

EIGHTEENTH COUNT FOR RELIEF

Abuse of Process

399. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in this Complaint.
400. Defendants willfully misused and/or misapplied the subpoena process for an end other than that which it was designed to accomplish.
401. The Defendants intentionally failed to disclose to and concealed pertinent and material information regarding Defendants' knowledge of the falsity of certain claims raised by or on behalf of Achte, and the ulterior or illegitimate purpose for which the subpoenas were sought.
402. Specifically, the Defendants failed to disclose and concealed pertinent and material information that includes but is not limited to the following:
- (a) Defendants instituted the actions as a vehicle to discover the identities and contact information of the proposed Class members;
 - (b) upon receiving that information, Defendants threatened members of the proposed Class with claims for statutory damages and attorney's fees, though those remedies were categorically prohibited as to most Class members;
 - (c) Defendants improperly coerced members of the proposed Subclass I and Subclass II into entering settlement agreements under extortionate threats of financially burdensome lawsuits and fraudulent threats of remedies that are prohibited as a matter of law, regardless of the individual merits of each case.

403. Defendants have never intended to file suit naming any member of the proposed Subclass I or Subclass II as a defendant, and dismiss actions after they have secured whatever settlements they can.

404. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' conduct, individually and collectively, members of the proposed Subclass I and Subclass II were forced to expend a significant amount of time and money in settling and defending against frivolous claims, and thereby suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.

NINETEENTH COUNT FOR RELIEF
Fraud on the Copyright Office

405. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in this Complaint.

406. Upon information and belief, Defendants intentionally and fraudulently failed to submit the proper date of first publication in the application for copyright registration for the motion picture Far Cry.

407. Upon information and belief, Defendants intentionally and fraudulently submitted an incorrect date of first publication in the application for copyright registration for the motion picture Far Cry.

408. By submitting an incorrect date of first publication, Defendants knowingly made a misrepresentation of a material fact in the application.

409. Had the Copyright Office known of the fraud, it would not have issued a copyright registration for the movie Far Cry.

410. Defendants' actions constituted fraud upon the Copyright Office.

411. As a result of the fraud upon the Copyright Office as described above, Defendants forced members of the proposed Class to expend significant time and money in defending and settling frivolous and/or meritless claims. Proposed Class members are entitled to relief including, but not limited to, injunctive relief, actual damages (trebled, at the Court's discretion), statutory costs and attorneys' fees, and prejudgment interest.

TWENTIETH COUNT FOR RELIEF

Copyright Misuse

412. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.

413. The Defendants engaged in abusive and/or improper conduct in exploiting or enforcing Achte's copyright.

414. Specifically, when they threatened infringement penalties that exaggerated and misstated the law, Defendants misled and defrauded members of the proposed Subclasses I and II into paying settlements many times greater than the Copyright Act permits. Defendants threatened Plaintiffs with statutory damages of up to $150,000 and attorney's fees, though Achte's remedy would be limited to actual damages in any case where Defendants are able to prove their claims. Defendants attempted to extend the effect or operation of Achte's copyright beyond the scope of the statutory right by improperly coercing members of the proposed Class into entering settlement agreements with the threat of a statutory damages award and financially burdensome lawsuits, regardless of the individual merits of each case and the absolute statutory bar on the extraordinary forms of relief that Defendants have nonetheless deceptively claimed from members of the proposed Subclasses I and II.

415. The Defendants also engaged in abusive and/or improper conduct in the registration of Achte's copyright. Defendants DGW, Dunlap, and Achte misrepresented the date of first publication when Dunlap submitted the application for copyright registration for Far Cry, wrongfully secured a registration certificate that appears to permit greater protections than the Copyright Act allows.
416. Section 412(2) of the Copyright Act generally bars awards of statutory damages and attorney's fees when a published work is infringed after the first publication but before the copyright registration is effective. Far Cry was first published no later than April 14, 2009, and the registration was not effective until January 19, 2010, so infringements that commenced between those dates generally cannot obtain those extraordinary remedies. But Section 412(2) includes a three-month grace period, allowing those remedies if the work is registered within three months of publication.
417. When registering the copyright Achte, through its agents DGW and Dunlap, falsely listed November 24, 2009 as the date of first publication.
418. The certificate of copyright registration issued with that false date. On its face, it appears to qualify Achte for the statutory grace period, which would entitle Achte to seek statutory damages and attorney's fees for any acts of infringement that commenced after the fraudulently claimed date of first publication (November 24, 2009), but prior to the effective date of registration (January 19, 2010). Achte has threatened to seek those heightened remedies in litigation against Plaintiff and other members of the proposed Subclass II, whom Achte alleges infringed its copyright between those two dates.

419. Achte's bald attempt to expand its copyright monopoly by deception and avail itself of unwarranted remedies constitutes copyright misuse.
420. As a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' extortion threats and false representations, and proposed Class members' reliance on those threats and false representations, members of the proposed Class suffered injuries, damages, or losses in an amount to be determined at trial.
421. Members of the proposed Class are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive, reckless indifference to or reckless disregard for the rights of others.

TWENTY-FIRST COUNT FOR RELIEF

Unjust Enrichment

422. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in this Complaint.
423. The Defendants were enriched and benefited by appropriating payments they received from the proposed Class. The Defendants received benefits in various ways, including through direct payments.
424. The Defendants recognized, accepted, and retained all these benefits at the proposed Class members' expense and did not provide equitable recompense.
425. Because of the Defendants' actions, members of the proposed Class incurred unnecessary and unwarranted financial damages.
426. Given the circumstances described in this Complaint—including the fact that each Defendant directed, encouraged, knew of, and/or facilitated fraudulent and illegal conduct—it would be inequitable and unjust for the Defendants to retain the benefits they received at the expense of the members of the proposed Class.

427. The members of the proposed Class are entitled to all lawful and equitable remedies attendant to the Defendants' unjust enrichment, including restitution of all fees, monies, and assets unjustly retained, or converted for the Defendants' use, to the detriment of the proposed Class members, and disgorgement of profits or gains on such fees, monies, and/or assets.

TWENTY-SECOND COUNT FOR RELIEF
Money Had and Received

428. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in this Complaint.
429. Defendants received settlement payments from members of the proposed Class.
430. As described in this Complaint, the money received by Defendants was intentionally, fraudulently, and illegally appropriated for the Defendants' use.
431. The Defendants thereby received or obtained possession of money which in equity and good conscience belongs to the proposed Class members.
432. The proposed Class members are entitled to all lawful and equitable remedies attendant to the Defendants' misconduct, including restitution of all such fees, monies, or assets purchased with the monies unlawfully had and received, and disgorgement of profits generated by the fees, monies or assets.

TWENTY-THIRD COUNT FOR RELIEF

Conversion

433. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.
434. Members of the proposed Class had a right of ownership and entitlement to the immediate possession of funds they paid to Defendants under settlement agreements.
435. The funds were placed in the custody of USCG for the specific purposes of compensating the rights-holder Achte to avoid litigating its claims for awards of statutory damages and attorney's fees.
436. The Defendants diverted and misappropriated the funds for the other and different purposes of using the funds for their own use and different business interests that were in conflict with and unrelated to the purpose of deterring infringement through awards of statutory damages.
437. The Defendants' misappropriation of the funds deprived members of the proposed Class of their possessory rights to the funds.
438. As a result of the Defendants' conduct, members of the proposed Class are entitled to recover the value of the converted funds, plus interest calculated from the time of conversion.
439. Members of the proposed Class are entitled to punitive damages because the Defendants' conduct was malicious, willful, wanton, intentional, and outrageous, evidencing evil motive or reckless indifference to the rights of others.

TWENTY-FOURTH COUNT FOR RELIEF

Constructive Trust

440. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.
441. The Defendants, through their fraudulent conduct, induced members of the proposed Class into paying money and entering into settlement agreements under the threat of statutory damages that Defendants could not obtain as a matter of law.
442. The Defendants wrongfully diverted monies from members of the proposed Class in violation of statutory and common law and used the proceeds for their legitimate businesses and to further their scheme.
443. The Defendants have retained property which rightfully belongs to members of the proposed Class.
444. The proposed Class members request the Court impose a constructive trust on the Defendants' property, including accounts and real and personal property of each individual Defendant, and accounts and property owned by each entity, and order an equitable accounting of such property.

TWENTY-FIFTH COUNT FOR RELIEF

Consumer Protection Violations

445. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, incorporates by reference all allegations contained in this Complaint.
446. The Defendants knowingly and intentionally engaged in the unfair, unlawful, deceptive, and unconscionable trade practices set forth above that violate numerous state consumer protection acts.

447. Plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, asserts claims under all state consumer protection acts where the conduct underlying the violations, or the injuries, occurred. This includes, but is not limited to:
- a) District of Columbia: Defendants' practices were and are in violation of the District of Columbia Consumer Protection Procedures Act, D.C. Code §§ 28-3901, et seq.;
 - b) Massachusetts: Defendants' practices were and are in violation of the Massachusetts Unfair and Deceptive Practices Act, Mass. Gen. Laws Ch. 93A, § 1, et seq.; and
 - c) Virginia: Defendants' practices were and are in violation of the Virginia Consumer Protection Act, Va. Code Ann. § 59.1-200, et seq.
448. The Defendants' unfair, unlawful, and deceptive trade practices occurred in the course of the Defendants' scheme and the challenged practices directly caused actual damages and injury to the proposed Class.
449. The Defendants intended that the proposed Class rely on their deceptions which occurred in and affected the course of conduct involving trade or commerce.
450. The Defendants made a misrepresentation or omission of a material fact in connection with the sale of merchandise and the misrepresentation or omission proximately caused injury to the proposed Class.
451. The proposed Class relied on the Defendants' misrepresentations and deceptive acts, which acts are uncured.
452. The Defendants used or employed a deception, a fraud, a false pretense, a false promise, a misrepresentation, an unfair practice, or a concealment, suppression or omission of a material fact; the unlawful act occurred in connection with the unfair or deceptive practices in trade or commerce to the proposed Class; members of the proposed Class suffered an ascertainable loss of money as a result of the unlawful act(s); and the loss arose from the Defendants' failure to disclose and concealment from the proposed Class the true facts regarding the scope of Achte's copyright, the falsity in its registration, and its lack of intent to fully litigate its claims.

453. Plaintiffs also seek permanent injunctive relief as a result of the Defendants' ongoing violations of state consumer-protection statutes, including an order directing Defendants to provide Plaintiff and members of the Class with all material facts relating to Defendants' scheme, including any and settlements received, waiver of any and all non-disclosure terms in the settlement agreements and the identities of all proposed Class members.
454. The provision of such information will allow Plaintiff and the proposed Class members the opportunity to make informed decisions regarding their rights and prevent Defendants from perpetrating the scheme.
455. A monetary award will fail to provide full relief to the Class. Money damages will not compensate Plaintiff and proposed Class members for their current lack of information and such information and the ability to disseminate such information is in the exclusive control of Defendants. Absent a court order, Plaintiff and proposed Class members and the public will be unable to obtain the information necessary to make informed decisions regarding their rights.
456. By reason foregoing, Plaintiff and proposed Class members are entitled to treble damages, punitive damages, injunctive relief, attorney fees and costs as provided by the state consumer protection acts where the conduct underlying the violations, or the injuries, occurred.
