Oh, ok. Sorry, I guess I missed it. I'm so used to quoting up your events I think I hardly look at anything but the dates and the details of the event. I will be sure to pay more attention in the future. I have forwarded your email to the carrier.

Thank you,

CSI INSURANCE GROUP
Entertainment & Hospitality Specialists

CSI Insurance Group places coverage for some of the top names in entertainment and events across the nation. Our clients include some of the country's largest events such as Lollapalooza, Austin City Limits Festival, and The Barack Obama Inauguration. Just because we cover these large events doesn't mean that's all we do. In 2008 CSI placed coverage for over 3000 events including small art shows, concerts, community events and hundreds of others types of events.

Thanks. With regards to the inflatable question on the cover page of the application we did check that inflatable's would be in use for the event. However, I think it is a mute point as the individual was not participating on the inflatable, rather he was in the environment and the inflatable tipped on top of him.

I will turn this into the carrier, however, inflatable's are excluded on the policy you purchase from us. Whoever owns the inflatable's are to carry insurance on them and name you as Additional Insured's on their policy. I don't believe I've ever seen you indicate on your applications that inflatable's are at your events, but please note, the exclusion is listed on the quotes we send over to you.

At our Cleveland Indians Kids Fun Day on June 12, 2010 we had an incident with the inflatable slide. Our events manager wrote the attached incident report and provided it to the Cleveland Indians and State of Ohio. We were informed this afternoon by the Cleveland Indians director of marketing, that the gentleman involved in the incident had passed away.

National Pastime Sports is unaware of the process and wanted to inform you as soon as we were provided this information.

Please call David or myself with any questions.
