Comments: Hi! I'm a big Trek fan and consumer. I have to express my disappointment though Mr. Lemond and his accusations and speculation to the media regarding Lance Armstrong. I am sure Trek is concerned as well, since Lance is a great symbol for Trek Bicycles superiority. I hope Trek officials will speak with Mr. LeMond and let him know that his comments do nothing but harm his image and the image of LeMond bicycles as well as have negative implications on Trek bicycles as well. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Geoff Feil

comments: I purchased my first LeMond earlier this summer and have been very pleased with the performance. Unfortunately, I opened the Tour de France page today to see the comments of Greg LeMond regarding Lance. I understand Greg's comments regarding doping but feel the timing is inappropriate. Why try to break down American cycling during the Tour? From my viewpoint, the only thing it has done for me is tarnish the image of the LeMond company and will cause me to take a second look when I get ready for next years bike. Thank you for your consideration.

comments: I am very disappointed to own a Lemond Bicycle. I understand that Greg Lemond has nothing to do with this company anymore, but as I consider purchasing a new bicycling this fall, I WILL NOT PURCHASE ANOTHER LEMOND simply because I don't want to have the name of Lemond on anything I own due to his unfounded criticism of Armstrong. I hope many other people feel this way.

Comments: Dear Trek Bicycles:

I, and a lot of other people that I know and ride and race with, were very dismayed at hearing Greg Lemond's remarks about Lance Armstrong yesterday that were reported on many different cycling websites. While it is Mr. Lemond's prerogative to speak his mind when asked questions doesn't he also realize that he might be harming the sport he makes part of his living in, and also in which many of us participate and enjoy? Being the parent company of Lemond Bicycles, and being one of the sponsors of Lance Armstrong, I would think that there might be some harsh words coming from Waterloo to Mr. Lemond. Even if in his heart he does believe that Mr. Armstrong is on a doping regimen, his business acumen is not very astute. I've heard and see mention from many different sources and newsgroups now on the net that people will refuse to purchase a Lemond product because of the words he said.

As a concerned cyclist and racer, I thought you might like to know about the incredibly negative face Mr. Lemond has now put onto himself, and subsequently products that carry his name, and subsequently Trek Bicycles because you are the parent company.

Kind Regards,
Tom Arsenault

It is one of the worst examples of a once great athlete adapting poorly to being out of the limelite that I have ever seen. I have been considering buying a LeMond for a few months, but now would rather buy anything else. Shame on Greg.

Comments: I am DISGUSTED at the recent comments of Greg LeMond regarding Lance Armstrong. I was writing a letter to his Cycle company, when I saw that you own them? How awkward must that be for you, the best thing to ever happen to the sport and Trek, attacked by the namesake of one of your brands? PLEASE issue a public statement, via OLN distancing your company from the BITTER, misguided statements of this poorly aging and sad past champion. It is sad as hell that he has gotten down in the gutter like this. I hold your company partly responsible however if you let the slander stand without comment. I will never buy a LeMond and hope that Greg keeps the Karma that he deserves.

HE HAS DECIDED TO COME DOWN FROM THE TROPHY RACK OF HISTORY AND INSERT HIMSELF BY HIS COMMENTARY WHERE HE MAY ONLY SPECULATE. IT IS SHAMEFUL OF HIM TO TRASH LANCE ARMSTRONG WITH NOTHING MORE THAN HIS (PAST FADING ) OLD GLORY AS CREDIBILITY.

I suggest you bring pressure to bear and tell Greg Lemond to put a sock in it. He's an embarrassment to the sport and a smear on his own brand of bikes. Leave it to the opportunists and sketchy journalists to make (unproven) charges of doping regarding armstrong. It is NOT the place of a former champion who now merely appears bitter and sadly in need of a brief dose of notoriety. You can bet i will NEVER consider a LeMond bicycle after this whining public display.

I hope he is prepared to take the consequences for his ridiculous assertions in the French press. I like many can define my love of cycling with Greg's climatic Paris win of the Tour, but as of now I think that all of my assumptions regarding him and his character seem to have been completely misguided. Comments: Hi There,

As a Trek customer and competitive cyclist I now have concerns about Trek and will think twice when I make my next bike purchases. This is because of the recent unqualified statements issued by Greg LeMond against Lance Armstrong (<http://www.lemonde.fr/web/article/0,1-0@2-3248,36-372691,0.html>). I know that Trek distributes LeMond bikes and I know that Greg has his rights of free speech, but I disagree with his serious and unfounded approach to the allegations. Though they may be true, I subscribe to American legal doctrine of "Innocent until proven guilty". And because of his statements I am boycotting LeMond Bikes, which is affiliated with your company. Likewise, saddly, I am also considering boycoting Trek.

Thank you for your time consideration. I would appreciate your company addressing this issue.

comments: Dear Email Tech Support:

Please forward my comments to company executives. I will no longer buy or support Lemond Bikes because of the irresponsible way the company's namesake, Greg Lemond, is behaving with respect to his comments towards Tour De France riders, namely Lance Armstrong. My point is not so much whether Greg's comments are true or false, but rather that Greg has made comments seemingly without basis, clarification, and without support. My opinion and attitude toward your company will forever be tainted because of Lemond's reprehensible comments.

comments: Since Mr. Lemond continues to voice his suspicions and accusations towards Lance Armstrong without providing the proof, I have no choice but to sell my Zurich and purchase another brand bike. If Greg puts forth the proof he seems so convinced is there I will reconsider but until that time I will never purchase another Lemond product. This feeling is shared by my teammates as well. It is unfortunate as Greg was my idol through the 80's and there are so few great American made bikes. We all know Greg would have won many more TDF's had the circumstances been different but he needs to let it go.

comments: As I can't find an email link on Trek's website, I'm using this one.

I own a Trek 5900 which I purchased from a buddy. Quite happy with the bike. However, if you (Trek inc.) do not put your foot down and publicly tell Greg Lemond to shut the hell up (not in so many words), this will be the LAST Trek I EVER own. He was a great cyclist, and his attempts at defamation of Lance should be EXTREMELY humiliating to you as the Manufacturer of Lemond Bikes and the Manufacturer of the bikes Lance rides. I am so disgusted at his remarks, that I'd like to ride my 5900 right up his butt.

DO SOMETHING (PUBLICLY) ABOUT HIS UNNECESSARY, SPITEFUL COMMENTS!!!

Nothing against you guys, but, how many Treks have you sold due to Lance's performance on those bikes? Greg is going to hurt your bottom line. We all know who makes Lemond bikes.

comments: I am sending this to you at this department because I found no other email on the site. Please pass to customer's service, better yet, directly to Greg LeMond.

I am shocked that you, without any evidence at all, accuse Lance Armstrong of using performance drugs. I have a question Mr. LeMond? When you won your three tours, and blew half your foot off, did you use performance drugs to get back into shape? You can only deny with the same mouth you accuse Armstrong of with. So, we have to TAKE YOUR WORD just as we do Armstrong, don't we? I own a Cannondale six13 bike and a Trek Madone 5.9. I was looking at a LeMond top of the line bike or a Trek 5900. I guess I will go with the Trek. Your mouth has cost you a sale. you probably don't care because you use your mouth to detract from someone else's accomplishments while whining about what could have been if not for your injuries. Right. And Mickey Mantle could have broken Babe Ruth's HR record if he had healthy legs and not drank so much also couldn't he? Grow up Greg. Accept the fact you won three, was once what I considered a hero. You brought me to love cycling.
You won!

in a country that hates America. Now you join the same leftist French press in trying to destroy Lance Armstrong. You are a sad individual for what you said with NO EVIDENCE WHATSOEVER! If you have it, PRODUCE IT GREG SO THAT WE ALL CAN SEE IT! But, alas, you don't do you?

comments: Please pass this message onto Mr. LeMond if you can.

Mr. Lemond:

That a man of your name and stature (among cyclists like myself) who as done so much for american cycling and racing, would throw mud on a man that currently is doing so much for american cycling, american cycling fans and much more is perplexing to me and hit's to the bone. You held the torch in the 80's and early 90s for american cycling and racing .. and now that someone else holds it, you trash him and question his integrity? What is wrong with you, sir? And in an interview with a French publication that is knowingly always seeking dirt against him?? What is your problem?

As I can recall, you hold (or held) the record for fastest TDF TT average speed. Tell me, were you doping sir? After all, the scrutiny of the peloton at that time was not what it was today. I now question that record of your wheras in the past I never did .. but maybe it should be questioned.

I have zero respect for you now, and used to hold you in high regard. I have a Lemond Ti bike (circa 93) .. which is now going to be sold. I will never buy another Lemond product in my life, as it reminds me of the name of the person behind the bike, tainted, sour and of little consequence, class, and without the knowledge of the damage he is doing to american cycling and cycling fans.

comments: Any bike with the Lemond name must suck. The guy is a total loser due to what he says about Lance. Why don't you guys move to France, because you are no better than the idiots from that useless country. You all hate Lance because you really can't ride a bike. WHO wouyd want your junk. I'll stick with my Waterford bikes, because they are not idiots.

Thank you

comments: Please forward this e-mail to Mr. Lemond.

Mr. Lemond, I am disappointed in the comments about Mr. Armstrong you gave to the French newspaper. If you have proof of the drug use by Mr. Armstrong then produce it. But, comments made to the reporter as quoted in the U.S. media implying that Mr. Armstrong has something to hide does little but detract from your image as a respected spokesperson for the U.S. cycling community.

I will never, ever buy a LeMond bicycle though I was looking at one at the bike store last

I am very sad to hear that Greg Lemond has been so vocal in public criticism/doubt about the issues of Lance Armstrong's alleged drug use. I thoroughly enjoy Lemond bikes (amongst my favorites) and have had the utmost respect for Greg Lemond and his accomplishments, but, as two American riders who have dominated the Tour De France, I really wish he would not take such a vocal stand unless there is actually proof of doping allegations. Because of this, I will definitely NOT BUY A LEMOND BIKE, even though I believe both brands (Lemond & Trek) are under one parent company. I've said my piece.

-you are out to "ruin cycling" with your comments about Lance to the French paper Le Monde - Get real you jerk! Remember how the french treated you???? Now you are just like them- I guess you still haven't gotten over being Bernard Hinault's little whipping boy- how did it feel knowing you could win but weren't allowed to??? It must have cut vey deep - Lance is the greatest AMERICAN cyclist that we will ever know-and probably the best ever in the entire world- Keep your ignorant comments to yourself- I think you are just jealous because he has far surpassed anything you have done- Your comments have made you look like an ass! especially when the person you are bad mouthing has said many times that you were an inspiration to him- It is sad to see someone of your calibre stooping so low- I feel sorry for you -

Comments: Why is Greg Lemond speaking out against Armstrong? All I have to say is the purchase of the Lemond framset I was planning is now on hold. It must be a great comfort to the great people at Trek who sponsor Lance Armstrong (which builds and distributes Lemond bicycles) that they also represent a jerk in Greg Lemond. I admire Lance Armstrong, his support of cancer research and his pursuit of the sixth and maybe a seventh yellow jersey. But I will not support a company by purchasing a bike or framset.

comments: Hey. Why do you bother designing a bike for a piece of crap human being like Greg LeMond? I remember him at the Tour d'France... always whining about who was cheating him or how unfair people were at certain stages. Now Lance Armstrong has eclipsed him and all he can do is feed into France's innendos of drug use. That would be the first thing LeMond would think of. Remember how his father misappropriated funds from his first company? The apple doesn't fall far from the tree. As for Trek being involved with such a self-centered, nonsupportive human being... well, I just want to say that I won't be looking at any of your products anymore when I purchase my next bike. There are lots of quality products on the market at a comparable price and I'll be shopping elsewhere and so will the rest of my family. Best of luck with your business relationship with LeMond. Hope you have a lawyer and everything in writing. You'll need it!

I just wanted to let Greg LaMond and anybody else know that I feel his comments regarding Lance Armstrong using drug enhancements was in very poor taste and showed extremely bad sportsmanship and if anybody is tarnishing the sport of cycling, it is Greg. I would encourage Greg to issue a public apology before this serves only to defame himself any further. How does one make such accusations without some proof?

The timing of his comment is terribly sad, right when Lance is in the middle of the TDF, poised to take control and win a record breaking 6th victory.

By the way, in all honesty, I do hope Greg is doing well health-wise, considering his having to deal with the muscle disease he was diagnosed with.

comments: To say I am disappointed with Greg Lemond's recent comments regarding Lance Armstrong and drug use would be the biggest understatement I have ever made. Lemond saying he was a supporter of Lance the first time he won the tour is a load of crap. Lemond has never supported Armstrong, presumably because he cannot handle not being America's only cyclist to win the tour. The fact is, Lance has never tested positive and until he does, everyone has no room to talk. Going by Lemond's (and a great deal of journalists') assumptions; we can all assume the Lemond took drugs when he won the Tour. After all, riders were not tested then like they are today.

The sad thing is I WAS a huge Lemond fan and because of his success, I began bike racing. Admittedly, my riding has lately turned to more towards touring than racing, although I still closely follow professional racing and recently, I have been looking to buy a new bike. However, with Lemond's recent comments with regards to Lance, there is no way I will ever buy a Lemond bike. My decision was down to a Trek 5900 or a Lemond, and I can say after reading Lemond's comments, I plan on being proud owner of a Trek.

Lemond's comments have also caused me to doubt his stories with regards to Bernard Hainault. In Lemond's book, he talks of extreme frustration because his director would not let him attack Hainault in the 1985 Tour; even going so far as to say he would have won if he was allowed to attack. However, from what I can tell of Lemond's character, I must say that I now support Hainault over Lemond, something I would have never considered a few years ago. It is evident to me that Lemond is an egotistical jackass who cannot handle other people's success. I mean come on! Lance recovered from cancer and he came back to win the Tour, something Lemond should be able to at least remotely relate to because of his own hunting accident.

We also know that Lance's trains much harder than Lemond could have ever imagined. Maybe this is the reason why Lemond cannot handle Lance's success. Lemond had the physical gifts, although his lack of determination and motivation caused him to be a good rider instead of a great one. Lance on the other hand, while physically gifted, also has the mental strength which has made him one of the (if not the) greatest cyclist to ever ride a bike. In writing this letter, I do not mean to be disrespectful to Lemond, especially since he helped pave the way for American riders and since his career was cut short because of disease. However, Lemond should be supporting Lance and be happy for him, not resentful and bitter. Given the choice of meeting Lance or Lemond, I would choose Lance any day.

Dear Greg,

I have been a fan of yours for many years now. I am grateful to you for the increased awareness that you brought to Americans of the sport of cycling.

However, your recent criticism of Lance Armstrong in the absence of credible evidence seems most inappropriate. If you have evidence, please bring it forward - we need to know. Yet in the absence of support for your allegations, the negativity has the effect of adding a certain unpleasantness to the sport.

As things currently stand, you can count on me to never purchase any LeMond bicycles or equipment in the future.

I highly encourage you to consider a retraction - and to make it a powerful one, of which I'm sure you're very capable.

comments: After hearing about Greg Lemond's comments about Lance Armstrong. He can count me as one of the people who will not buy another Lemond. Matter of fact put my Maillot Jaune up for sale yesterday. Don't want to ride a bitter mans bike. Fred Paoletto comments: I am an American living in Paris for eleven years. I played professional sports in the 80's. Have a good job today in the business world. Greg Lemond lighted my interest in cycling, a sport I did not know existed until his performances in the Tour de France. I respect him. He was a champion. Could you please pass my email to him and tell him that he does not have to tear down Lance Armstrong to remain a champion. If he has nothing positive to say then he should remain quiet and be at peace with himself. His bickering lacks dignity, appears to be self-serving and serves no higher purpose. I do not know Lance Armstrong's intimate past but there is no better story than his present. The guy is sensational. Give him the respect he deserves.

Comments: Hello Trek,

I would appreciate this e-mail being forwarded to the appropriate department. Thank you.

Today I read Greg LeMonds' comments concerning Lance Armstrong and the Tour de France. While I believe that everyone is entitled to thier own opinion and I wouldn't want it any other way, I was extremely disappointed.

So much so, that I decided to express my displeasure with Mr. LeMond by buying a different bike. I have owned Trek bikes before and have recently (last month) purchased my wife a Trek 4500 MTB. I think Trek makes a very good line of bikes. Having always been a Mountain Biker, 2 weeks ago, I decided to try Road Biking and naturally turned to Trek. I tested both the 1200 and the 1500 (having a budget of $700-$1200). I also tested the LeMond "Reno", the Specialized "Allez", the Giant OCR2 & 3, and the Fuji "Newest". Honestly the Choice that fit me was a tie between the Lemond "Reno" and the Fuji "Newest".

After re-testing the Reno and the Newest, I was leaning slightly more in favor of the Lemond. Mainly because I like to support Trek and Lance Armstrong. I know that Trek and Lemond are produced together for the same company.

I was so displeased with Greg Lemonds' criticism of a great rider, and a trek spokesperson, without any proof whatsoever, that I changed my mind and bought a Fuji instead.

It was a tough decision because I do want to support Lance and buy the bikes of the company he rides for (Marketing works, eh?) however in this situation I would like for Trek to know just how Mr. Lemond has damaged an image that you at Trek work so hard to build up and preserve.

I am sure that you know of the importance of brand-loyalty and I have to say that in the past I have recommended almost exclusively Trek to friends wanting to purchase bikes (and 3 of them have) and furthermore, once someone gets used to a certain type frame and ride, it is often that same company that gets the repeat purchases.

I truly want to remain a Trek customer and hopefully will, as you have served my needs well in the past.

I continue to support Lance Armstrong and the Trek Teams, but would like you to know how very disappointed that I am in another (Lemond) representative of your company.

Thank you very much for your time.

Sincerely,

Jim Burckhard

comments: Hi,

Can you please forward this message to Greg LeMond:

Dear Greg: I have been riding a LeMond Zurich for 2 1/2 years, and I think it\'s a great bike, but you comment reported on the internet 2 days ago about the Lance Armstrong doping witch hunt made me want to sell it and buy a Trek.

I have learned to expect the kind of sour grape logic that seems to say \"/> comments: Please do me a favor...If you see Greg, tell him he is the biggest loser ever. It\'s a shame that the only way he can get his name in the paper is to attack Lance. He was the laughing stock at the water cooler and in the fitness center at work today. By the way, I have this little Lemond wind trainer from Target...It\'s on the side of the road now awaiting garbage pick up. You suck.

Comments: As I understand it Trek Owns Lemond Bikes... I have been a faithful owner of a Lemond Zurich for 3 years and have talked 3 of my friends into also purchasing Lemond Bikes.

But in the recent press Greg Lemond had been bad mouthing Lance Armstrong and questioning his record... When I hear Greg's comments it makes me sick!!! My first thought was how do I get the Lemond Decals off my bike.. Next thought was sending it back in 1000 pieces... Next thought was disassociate myself from anything having to do with Greg Lemond... As far as I am concerned Greg can think and do whatever he feels, but when his name is associated with a product that Trek is also associated with it also tarnishes the Trek name.

Not sure you can do anything, but as a consumer I think it is very important that you hear my views.. and I really don't want to ride another bike...

Thank You!!!

Tom
