comments: I am a former racer. My history is extensive but not relevant. I'm hoping that you have a connection to Greg and that you will send him my sincerest disappointment that he has chosen to make totally unfounded accusations regarding drugs and Lance Armstrong. I raced during the Lemond era and am horrified that Greg would stoop, out of jealousy, to make the negative comments that he did. Shame Shame Shame Totally unfounded.....as we've seen the French tried as hard as they could to prove a drug history with Lance and were ultimately unsuccessfull. Shame on Greg.....Go away.....

Dear Sirs,

I bought my first Trek bike in 1982. Since then I have amassed quite collection of road and mountain bikes. But starting today and as lone as Greg Lemond is associated with TREK and spews his Lance bashing drivell is the media, I will boycotting your products. I will continue to support Lance in other ways, but I refuse to give a dime to any company that has a thing to do with LeMond.

LeMond: "Armstrong threatened my life"

Former Tour de France champion Greg LeMond has given French L'Equipe newspaper an exclusive interview, published on Sunday, June 25, 2006, in which the American has taken a stand against Lance Armstrong, the UCI and the Vrijman report. LeMond said that Lance Armstrong has threatened him for having criticised the seven-time race winner's collaboration with Italian sports doctor Michele Ferrari. LeMond, who won the Tour de France in 1986, 1989, 1990, said that he was pressured by Armstrong in 2001 after saying that he was disappointed at the Texan's association with the controversial preparatore.

"Lance threatened me," he said. "He threatened my wife, my business, my life. His biggest threat consisted of saying that he (Armstrong) would find ten people to testify that I took EPO."

In the interview, LeMond continued by holding the UCI responsible for their failure to deal with the problem of doping. "This problem goes beyond Armstrong," he said. "The Spanish scandal is another example, the entire system is corrupt, the UCI is corrupt."

LeMond also referred to the Vrijman report, named after the expert commissioned by the UCI to probe the L'Equipe allegations of doping against Armstrong. "The report should have come from WADA or the French Ministry of Health," he said. "But it doesn't change anything if you catch a rider because Lance is now retired and it continues."

LeMond added that Armstrong as a person was consumed with ambition: "He needs power - with money, or with women. He will never find happiness."

Comments: There was a time when LeMond was my hero, I wore his team kit proudly [ADR] and even met him on several occasions to get autographs. He paved the way for many and brought attention to the sport. But, it's was a sad day for U.S. cycling [and me] several months ago when Greg LeMond stated he thought Lance Armstrong was using band substances to get the performances he was achieving. I thought we were on the same team, The United States of America. Since when do we condemn someone is guilty before having a jury, trial or proof, none of which has happened. Then to state the ridiculous statements in the press about his life being threatened [true or not], and taking EPO, again with no proof. These statements made him look insecure and envy of Armstrong. Lance Armstrong has done more the sport of cycling and more importantly, finding a cure for cancer than Lemond ever did. It's time LeMond takes a good look at reality and realizes that he is not the American king!

of cycling and putting down other American cyclist is very childish. For the good of the sport Greg LeMond needs to keep is mouth shut. I have since burned my ADR kit and will never buy a LeMond product.

Dear Mr. Burke,

Thank you for a few moments of your time. Before I share some thoughts with you, permit me to tell you a little about my purchasing habits. I tend to have a very strong brand loyalty and Trek has been one of those companies.

I have two Trek road bikes, a Trek mountain bike and a Trek tandem. Over the years I have purchased many items, i.e. shirts, gloves, jerseys, caps, water bottles, etc., with a Trek label in preference to other cycling brands.

I am a Lance Armstrong fan and have been extremely disappointed with the negative comments regarding Armstrong made by Greg Lemond, whose line of bikes and merchandise you also produce.

I get the impression that there is some resentment on the part of Lemond towards Armstrong. It's almost as if Lemond resents another American cyclist stealing some of the limelight. Just the opposite should be true.

Armstrong's accomplishments do not diminish Lemond's record. Lemond established some milestones in American cycling that he should be proud of, the first American to win the Tour de France, the one who introduced aero bars into the Tour and had an incredible comeback from an injury after his first Tour win to win two more Tours, one by only eight seconds!

I have been in the market for a new road bike since the Tour last year and have been eyeing the Trek Madone 5.9SL, but have recently decided to wait until the new models become available. Then came Lemond's comments. I now find it difficult to consider purchasing merchandise from a company associated with Lemond, whose statements regarding suspicions and unproven allegations on Armstrong diminish his own stature and show a lack of sportsmanship. It definitely gives the impression that Lemond is acting like a spoiled child.

The chance of my purchasing a Trek bike at this time is only about 50%. Prior to Lemond's pronouncements, it would have been 200%. Additionally, I have a local colleague, who feels the same way, and commented that he would never purchase anything with Lemond's name on it.

1309 WEST FLETCHER AVE. TAMPA, FLORIDA 33612 TELEPHONE (813) 960-5540

TREK000508

In short, Lemond is hurting his name and your business. If just two of us in this town feel the way I do, multiple that by the number of Trek dealers around the country to get some idea of Lemond's negative impact on Trek.

I'm not suggesting that you eliminate Lemond bicycles from your line, but if I were you, I would ask Lemond to refrain from making derogatory comments about Armstrong unless irrefutable proof is presented, Armstrong is sanctioned by the UCI or Armstrong's wins are deleted from the record books.

If I hear one more unsubstantiated negative comment by Lemond regarding Armstrong, my next bike will definitely not be a Trek. Thank you for letting me vent and share my thoughts.

Cordially,

John P. Longmire, III, D.D.S., F.I.C.D., F.A.C.D.

Comments: I will never again buy a Trek product so long as your firm is associated with Greg Lemond.

The man is destroying the sport by immediately assuming that no one other than him could win a TdF without being a serial doper.

His comments about Armstrong and now Landis prove that the man has extreme mental issues. His damage to the sport can never be undone. By keeping him involved in bike building you are giving him a bully pulpit and enabling this.

I hope and pray the brands of Trek and Lemond fade into obscurity. I have retired my old Trek 1400 (many a great century on that one) am selling my wife's 1200 and will soon sell my 2300.

When is Trek going to drop its Lemond line? Greg Lemond helped put U.S. cycling on the map and has since become a disgrace to American cycling and Americans in general. His loud mouth and unwarranted actions towards American cyclists is an atrocity. Sirs,

I am as appalled as anyone regarding doping in cycling and I hope that with the strong stand that the UIC is taking, someday soon we will not have to worry about it.

I firmly believe that there needs to be a common, non-biased lab in perhaps Iceland or the USA that will handle samples without the problems that have been encountered with the lab in France.

Until then, I wish Greg Lemond would withhold his comments and stop throwing his bombs around. If I hear one more reference to Lance (you can see it if you read between the lines) out of his mouth, I will scream.

Honestly no one cares what Greg thinks about anything regarding cycling. He is just having a tough time no longer being the greatest American cyclist and with Floyd's successes, he is at risk to fall to #3 on the list.

I wish he and Paris Hilton would just go away. I don't want to see them or hear anything they have to say.

I am still trying to figure out what it will take to have Trek dump him and his line of bikes (that may fit Greg, but are horrible for the rest of us).

Regards,

Scott Berry

Comments: Tell Lemond to keep his whining comments to himself. He has been very quick to blast every American since him at the first opportunity. We all are innocent until proven guilty. Lance has always passed the test. Tyler failed. Floyd we do not know. But Lemond always is ready to put his mouth in gear before the facts are known. I had been interested in LeMond 2 years ago but bought a Look, because I felt that Greg a 20 year ago hero, was trying to rain on any other American who was successful. He comes across as sour grapes, what a shame, we all deserve our day in court. He also seems quite non judgemental of the european riders. So that is why I think it is his fat ego.

Hey guys,

I'm sure you've already seen this, but I'm forwarding it anyway. I'm sure you also know that I bleed Trek to the core and that saying this kills me. I'm pretty much burning every piece of clothing that I have that has any reference to Greg LeMond. When will this guy realize that his attempts to remain relevant are transparent and pathetic. It took every ounce of willpower for me NOT to say anything derogatory to him at the Century Club event, mainly because I'd heard he was cleaning up his act. And now he feels the need to shoot his mouth off regarding Floyd before the final results are even in. LeMond isn't Lance, either with respect to talent or class.

I realize that he's attacking someone who doesn't have the same financial impact on Trek's bottom line this time, but he's being a grade A dick just because he knows it will get him camera time. Could you tell him to go back to his hotel in Arizona and start nailing his assistant again? I disliked him less when I never heard any garbage spewing out of his mouth.

Sorry for the negative E-mail...we'll see you at Draft Night!

Hello Greg,

If this is indeed you... I was at a momentary loss for words or reply because I did not expect a response to my "emotional" email.

I never mentioned the recent article you mentioned below in your email, but yes, it was one of the most recent articles that prompted my email. Maybe, I have let media, hasten me into wrongful assumptions. The following excerpt probably prompted my email to info@lemondfitness.com:

In a veiled reference to seven-time winner Lance Armstrong, long dogged by doping allegations, LeMond added: "I hope that (Landis) won't do what another American did: Deny, deny, deny."

I have read many other articles on the web or even in print, that suggest a severe falling out between yourself and Lance Armstrong. Of course, I do not know either one of you personally, but it seemed, one American, you, were personally sore of someone seemingly lessening your phenomenal Tour de France achievements. Maybe, it was Lance's printed comments, saying how he idolized you and you publicly turned on him, calling him a doper... I believe this was stated in an extended interview in Playboy magazine.

I believe Lance definitely had EPO and other blood enhancers for recuperation following his bout with Cancer, maybe even to his advantage in 1999. However, I feel he was the MOST tested man in sports history, and would not DARE to cheat in the following Tour de France races.

I live in the Bay Area, and see quite a few LeMond bikes, especially on century rides. I have carried some animosity toward you, because of blurbs in the media.

in behalf of Greg, or you could be the real deal. Regardless, I have learned a valuable lesson, and may have jumped to conclusions from other writers opinions and comments that may have been taken out of context...

What you have written below makes sense in these troubled times, for a sport that I am passionate. Cycling is a huge part of my life. Who knows, if I have a chance to hear more of your thoughts, I just might be your next biggest supporter. There are others that share my thoughts and it would be quite interesting if I could offer a firsthand rebuttal in your behalf.

Heck, Chain Reaction Bicycles, in Los Altos carries your bikes and I'm in the market with an old Kestrel that needs replacing. Do you have a favorite bike shop in the San Francisco area, that carries your line? Now I'm curious to look and try one out.

I will gladly provide my address and phone number.

PS Floyd supposedly has synthetic testosterone in the sample B test. I suppose his victory will be revoked. Maybe you could tell me your response, before i read it on the web.

PSS my nickname madjap, is not because of the rage i carry, but is more of a reference of my craziness, such as the madhatter in Alice in Wonderland.
Cheers...

Landis Doping Charge Gives LeMond a Chance to Rip Lance Armstrong

By Jim Roberts
Jul 31, 2006

The Floyd Landis doping charge brought three-time Tour de France champion Greg LeMond out to rip on seven-time winner Lance Armstrong.

Lance Armstrong Refuses to Take the Bait (Image: ABC)

While telling Landis that if he is confirmed positive, he hopes he has the courage to tell the "truth," in an interview with French weekly Le Journal du Dimanche released on Saturday LeMond takes a shot at Lance.

LeMond's cheap shot: "I hope that [Landis] won't do what another American did: Deny, deny, deny."

Jealous anyone?

That American that LeMond is referring to is of course Lance Armstrong and he refused to take the bait to stoop to LeMond's level. He did take LeMond to school telling "This Week with George Stephanopoulos" this Sunday:

"I mean, you can get Greg Lemond to go on the air and speculate. I'm not going to do that. But I'm not going south like Greg does. I believe in the sport. I love it, been a fan of it, and I'm going to support it."

Armstrong stayed above the fray but LeMond had more:

"It is cycling as a professional sport that represents the problem. It can transform someone into a liar," LeMond said.

What a sad statement. Greg LeMond has turned into Greg who?

Using the doping charges against Floyd Landis and calling Lance Armstrong a liar with his ludicrous "deny, deny, deny" did nothing more than cheapen LeMond's legacy.

Spare me the lecture. Lance owns the sport that Greg once did. Take it like a man. Records were meant to be broken.

--Commentary by Jim Roberts

I agree with Mr. Roberts' thinking. And sadly, it's not the first time that Mr. LeMond has tried to verbally pillory Lance Armstrong, having soured me on looking at one of the innovative steel splined, carbon tubed model LeMond branded bicycles when they were introduced several years ago.

He needn't make these kinds of comments. They accomplish nothing positive.

Thank you and best regards,

Fritz Bader

Dear Mr. Lemond,

I am honored by your reply – and its rapidity. (Guess you do everything quickly!)

I was merely reacting to an article I had read – and forwarded it to you. It seems the media – or at least some writers including the one quoted – also misunderstood you, as they said that your "deny" remarks were directed to Armstrong rather than Hamilton. You might want to clarify this misunderstanding. I fully agree with you that we must expose any doping/drug problems in cycling: I think having you and Armstrong "on the same page" on this issue – presenting a united front – is our best chance for achieving such a solution.

Best regards,
Andrew Chaveriat

PS: I was riding my hybrid around Central Park last night (probably when you replied to my message) drafting behind a road-bike rider wearing a yellow "Greg Lemond" shirt. Since he had the faster machine, I appreciated the tow (all the way from 72nd St to 59th St). How ironic is that!

This is Greg LeMond. I have just read your email to LeMond Fitness and I would love the chance to discuss with you my position on drugs and cycling. Somehow you have misunderstood an interview that I gave to a French newspaper. The reference to the denial part had nothing to do with Lance Armstrong but another American that has received a two year ban and has been implicated in a drug scandal in Spain, his name is Tyler Hamilton. I understand this is a very emotional period for you given the state of cycling. I love this sport and it saddens me that the sport has such a big drug problem. I hope that Floyd Landis is not confirmed positive and that he will keep his Tour de France title. This sport has a much deeper problem that is not going to go away. It is not by keeping quiet about doping that this problem will be solved, but by seeking the truth about what is going on. I have quite a bit of first hand knowledge of what is going on in this sport and there is no easy solution.

Regards,
Greg LeMond

Like it or not, we are all colored by the company we keep. Two years ago when your boy Lemond trashed Lance I dumped my brand new top of the line spine bike. I thought sure Trek had learned its lesson. Now your boy Lemond trashed Landis with horse crap and innuendo so dropped off my Madone SSL 6.9 a bit ago and told my dealer to dump it for me. I am done with Trek. I bought a Merlin. At least they keep quiet and don't try to trash people. If Landis is guilty he will pay the price but no one needs some jealous, insane jerk blowing smoke and trying to hurt others.

In closing my wife and I were going to book some Trek Travel next week but I have trashed that as well. We will do the Butterfield option instead.

Let's face it, the only way we can vote is with our dollars and I hope lot's of other disappointed cyclists do the same. Lance made Trek, Lemond will destroy it!

Here is my message for Mr. Lemond -- stop sullyng the yellow jersey and attacking every great American cyclist that has won the Tour de France after you. As far as I am concerned I will never purchase a Lemond bike as you are a selfish, self-aggrandizing liar. My family owns 5 road bikes, one track bike, one cross bike and 5 mountain bikes (Colnago, Litespeed, Cannondale).

Your need to ruin every rider who came after you only reflects poorly on your character. Grow up. You claimed to retire because your body was filled with buckshot which interferred with the uptake of oxygen into the cells. Now everyone is a drug cheat. In my view, your business is only as good as your character, and that is not good.

I, for one, am sick of your trying to get publicity July. My son watched videos of your epic Tour rides when he was a junior rider. He threw away the tapes. You are not honorable.

Cordially,

Audrey Lind Lessinger

A "LeMond Contact Us" request has been made:

Name: K. Frank.

Email: mtbkrl@mchsi.com

Comments: I recently purchased a Lemond bike and am having an unusual problem. When I place it in the garage next to my Specialized and Trek bicycles it begins to whine and complain that the other bikes are cheaters and that it is the only true \"American Champion\". I was wondering, if maybe Greg himself would stop being a whining asshole, maybe this piece of shit bike would also stop. Please have him do it publicly so I can bring the bike in to watch it on TV. I suppose this is not covered under warranty.

I think you should stop making Greg Lemond bicycles. Everyone in the TDF to him is a dooper. Last year it was Armstrong, this year it was Landis and now its Alberto Contador for the Disco Team on a TREK bicycle. Lemond is hurting the sport !!! And the team you help sponsor. I think your new road bike is a winner but I think I'll buy something else because of Lemond. All he cares about is keeping his name in the news. Thanks Allan King

From: Roger Sherron <rsherron3@comcast.net> Some time ago I decided that I would never buy a LeMond bicycle because of his comments about Armstrong. I made this clear to our local Santa Rosa dealer as well. I believe it was a good decision disassociate from LeMond, champion though he was.

Thank you for taking a stand and ending your relationship with LeMond. I am a huge Trek fan and have been very dissappointed with Greg's attacks on Lance. From a business standpoint, he left you no choice. Thanks for taking the high road. By the way, I love my Madone 5.2 more each day I ride it!
