Deposition of THOMAS FOX, taken on behalf of Plaintiff LEMOND CYCLING, INC.; Third-Party Defendant GREG LEMON, at 2049 Century Park East, Suite 3400, Los Angeles, California, beginning at 9:42 a.m., Tuesday, July 14, 2009, before Cila Meyer, No. 4914, a Certified Shorthand Reporter.

1 Q On page 2 of your expert report, in that 2 sentence again "with the action and statements" I'm 3 referring to.

4 A Uh-huh.

5 Q It ends with -- I'll just read it again.

6 "After review of these materials,
7 it is my opinion that Mr. LeMond's
8 actions and statements are at odds
9 with the very essence of what a 10 company such as Trek should expect 11 from someone with whom they have an 12 endorsement relationship, let alone a 13 licensing partnership."

14 A Right.

15 Q What did you mean by "licensing partnership"?

16 A I was making a distinction between an athlete 17 you sign to sell the product as it currently exists on 18 the shelf and a relationship you create to customize a 19 line and sell it with that person's name on it.

20 Q Had anybody ever told you that the relationship 21 between Mr. LeMond and Trek was a licensing partnership?

22 A Yes. It was very clear in the documents that I 23 read.

24 Q What documents?

25 A There's -- there are several agreements between

1 Trek and Mr. LeMond. When they started the LeMond
2 Cycling, that to me -- I'm referring to that as a
3 licensing agreement, when they started LeMond's Cycling.
4 So I looked at the documents that related to Trek and 5 Greg signing a contract to get in to business together.
6 I reviewed that. I determined that to be a licensing 7 agreement.

8 Q Okay. You determined that to be a licensing 9 partnership?

10 A Licensing partnership, yes.

11 Q Why is the fact that the relationship between 12 LeMond and Trek as a licensing partnership important to 13 your expert opinion?

14 A I think -- as I said, I make a distinction 15 between a company that signs an athlete to sell the 16 product that they're already making. In that case 17 there's very little extra work that's being done.
18 They're taking a product that's already being 19 manufactured, and they're using that athlete's name and 20 likeness either in advertising or in promotion, but 21 they're not changing the bottle. They're not changing 22 the formula. There's really very little that's going 23 into it other than creating marketing materials.

24 When I look at a licensing partnership, there 25 are branded products, specific products that are being

1 created. To me that's a much more in-depth type of 2 relationship. I think it's much more difficult to 3 unwind, but I just think it's -- there's much more 4 collaboration about the products that are getting 5 produced. So I think there's a much more involved 6 process.

7 Q If you look on the spectrum of relationships
8 between an athlete and a company, would an endorsement
9 relationship be on one end and a licensing partnership 10 be on the other?

11 A I'd say --

12 MR. WEBER: Let me -- just a second -- object 13 vague as to ends of what? I just want to make sure 14 we're clear as to what the label is --

15 MR. MADEL: I understand your --

16 MR. WEBER: What the label --

17 MR. MADEL: -- your objection is vague. I 18 understand that.

19 Go ahead and answer.

20 THE DEPONENT: Can you define your spectrum, 21 though?

22 BY MR. MADEL:

23 Q You were just about to answer. Go ahead.

24 A I want to make sure I understand what you mean.

25 Q I'm trying to get an idea of what -- you just

1 Q Here you also say, "and tell a differentiating 2 story of superior performance" --

3 A Yes.

4 Q -- "for their products because they bore the 5 name of a true innovator in the sport who won at the 6 highest level"; right?

7 A I see that, yes.

8 Q You also consider Mr. LeMond a true innovator 9 in the sport of cycling?

10 A That was his -- that was his brand, so to 11 speak, when I first became associated with him. He was 12 wearing the different helmet. He was designing 13 different handlebars. His performance in the Tour de 14 France, at least from, you know, a layman's perspective 15 or, you know, a noncycling fan's perspective was, he was 16 winning because he was outthinking people and because of 17 his technological expertise, yes.

18 Q Let me go to that sentence again, fourth full 19 paragraph on page 2 that we talked about.

20 A Uh-huh.

21 Q You say here, "it stands to reason that 22 consumers and dealers would be upset by this activity"; 23 right?

24 A Yes.

25 Q What empirical evidence did you rely on with

1 respect to that sentence?

2 A "Empirical" meaning specific data?

3 Q Yes.

4 A I'm looking at -- I'm looking at sort of the 5 consumer response to his comments. So to the extent 6 that those comments, and those e-mails, and those 7 letters, and the public outcry is empirical, that's what 8 I was using. Likewise, for the dealers, I'm looking at 9 dealer comments and thinking the same. I'm listening to 10 what they're saying. And I'm putting myself -- as I 11 said earlier, I'm putting myself in their shoes and 12 saying "if I were them this is -- I can certainly 13 understand why they would be feeling that."

14 Q So the evidence that you relied upon with 15 respect to that sentence, last full sentence, the fourth 16 full paragraph on page 2 would be the dealer comments
17 provided to you by Trek and the consumer comments 18 provided to you by Trek?

19 A Certainly at least those. And I'm trying to 20 think if -- then I'm looking at some of the ESPN things 21 as well, when you've got two columnists including it in 22 the Just Shut Up category, I'm sort of using all of 23 those -- that information to sort of flavor my opinion, 24 yes.

25 Q Is there anything else?

1 A Because this is really a dispute between what 2 Greg LeMond did and said as a paid endorser to Trek.
3 I'm not here to talk about, you know, whether he's been 4 on a life-long crusade against doping. To me that's 5 sort of not the issue. The issue is his specific 6 attacks on another Trek endorser and whether that was 7 what they should have expected, given the partnership 8 and the relationship they had.

9 Q How is that different between Greg LeMond and 10 Charles Barkley? Insofar, if it's relevant to look at 11 what Charles Barkley did before you signed Charles 12 Barkley, why isn't it relevant to look at what 13 Greg LeMond did and said before you signed Greg LeMond?

14 A I'm sure Trek looked at everything.

15 Q No. I'm asking you. Why didn't you look at 16 it?

17 A Because I've been asked to look at the dispute 18 between Trek and Greg LeMond. To be perfectly honest 19 with you, to me this isn't about Greg LeMond being 20 outspoken about doping, with all due respect. It's 21 about his accusations against another Trek endorser. So 22 to the extent that -- if he had a foundation or a long 23 history of fighting and standing up against doping, that 24 would have been great. It would be the same issue from 25 my perspective as a marketer; that once he was signed by

1 Trek, he chose to attack another endorser and do so in a 2 way that diminishes his own credibility and influences, 3 you know, people's perceptions of Trek.

4 Q Is there a circumstance where Greg LeMond could 5 have said anything negative about Lance Armstrong while 6 signed with Trek?

7 A Maybe. I don't know. Relative to doping?

8 Q Yeah. Or anything.

9 A I mean, I think -- I think it was reasonable 10 for Trek, as I said, to expect that Greg LeMond should 11 have stuck to facts when referring to things related to 12 Lance Armstrong. I think it's absolutely their 13 expectation that because there's a relationship between 14 both of those athletes in the company, that Greg would 15 stick to the facts. And, you know, I think some of the 16 things he was saying were not factual. I think that's 17 why there was public outcry, you know. Consumers
18 believed that because Lance has been tested many times 19 and has never tested positive, that there's no proof.

20 Q So Lance Armstrong has never tested positive 21 for performance-enhancing drugs?

22 A Not that I'm aware of.

23 Q Okay. I asked you. I'll ask you again. Can 24 you provide me with a circumstance where Greg LeMond 25 could say something negative about Lance Armstrong and

1 Q And he's a role model to kids; right?

2 A Kids interested in cycling? Kids that have 3 cancer? People touched with cancer?

4 Q Yes. I mean, you said that he transcended the 5 sport; right?

6 A Yes.

7 Q To the extent that he has cheated to get to 8 where he is would be relevant as a parent to you to not 9 have your child follow in those sorts of footsteps;
10 right?

11 A Yes. If Lance has cheated to get where he is, 12 it would be a real issue.

13 Q But the same time you believe that because 14 Mr. LeMond had a business relationship with Trek, it was 15 under his obligation to shut up in that regard; right?

16 A You've phrased that question in a very 17 interesting way. I don't think, regardless of what 18 Mr. LeMond believed about Lance Armstrong and his 19 possible doping, I don't believe it was appropriate, 20 given the business relationship that they had together, 21 for him to be calling him out in the press in that way.
22 I think the first time he did it, he retracted the 23 statement and sort of agreed with it. I guess the 24 issue, fundamentally, for me is I looked at this as a 25 marketer in this case is that he kept on doing it. So

1 raising the issue, keeping it out of the public eye, 2 helping investigators to solve this problem called 3 doping, even if it involved Lance Armstrong, behind the 4 scenes, have at it, go at it.

5 Publicly -- marketing is creating an impression 6 in the consumer's mind that you have a superior product 7 or you have something that they want to buy and then 8 getting them to walk in and make that purchase. We're 9 talking about a marketing relationship here. I'm not 10 talking about sort of moral right and wrong, and the 11 overall issues with the sport, and the notion of one 12 athlete taking a stand against doping. I think, you 13 know -- I think if more athletes took a stand against 14 doping, it would be a great thing. I'm talking about 15 the marketing relationship between this company called 16 Trek and Greg LeMond and Lance Armstrong and the fact 17 that he was calling him out on things that were not 18 public knowledge, and the consumer and the dealers 19 clearly didn't want to continue to hear. That's what 20 I've reacted to as a marketer.

21 Q It would have been all right for Mr. LeMond to 22 go to federal investigators with respect to 23 Mr. Armstrong?

24 A I don't know how anybody would have known that; 25 right? I mean, I think, if he wants to go behind the

1 scenes and say "I want to be a positive force behind, 2 you know, helping get drugs out of this sport. Here is 3 information I have related to everyone," you know, I 4 don't think anybody would have stopped him there. I 5 think the fact that he's in public, doing interviews, 6 talking about it is a problem.

7 Q So it's really the publicity part of this that 8 is the problem with respect to Trek?

9 A We're talking about a marketing relationship, 10 yes. It's what the consumer, the dealer, and everyone 11 sees. It's the ability for Greg LeMond to do and say 12 things that helped the sales of his bike, the ability 13 for Lance Armstrong to do and say things that helped the 14 sale of Trek bikes, and their ability to do the exact 15 opposite. That's really where I'm focused here.

16 Q Did Mr. LeMond's statements regarding 17 Floyd Landis harm his reputation?

18 A Did Mr. Armstrong's comments about Floyd?

19 Q No. Mr. LeMond's statements regarding
20 Floyd Landis harm his reputation?

21 A You know, it's funny. Floyd tested positive.
22 So, you know, I think Floyd Landis' reputation is 23 already tainted. So did he -- I don't know whether he 24 said them before or after. But once he's been found, 25 and it's proven, and the public has sort of ruled on

1 A I think from what I can gather reading the 2 documents, their dealers were incredibly upset. And 3 their business is sort of driven by the dealers. When a 4 consumer walks in to buy a bike, unless you have support 5 of those dealers, it's very difficult for a consumer 6 walking in who doesn't know what they want to get 7 steered towards that bike. And I think, you know, Trek 8 is a company that always had, you know, great integrity, 9 great relationships with their dealer was, you know, 10 allowing Greg LeMond to continue to say these things and 11 still support him with product, I think it undermined 12 their credibility. I think the dealers were 13 disenchanted. They clearly weren't pushing LeMond
14 products. And Trek was making money on those products, 15 too.

16 Q Do you know how -- if Trek was damaged in 17 dollars in any amount?

18 A I don't have -- I don't know.

19 Q Did you ever look at any damage that 20 Mr. LeMond's actions or statements caused Trek sales?

21 A I didn't look at specific sales data.

22 Q But did you look at any -- did you try to 23 measure in any numerical form any amount of damage that 24 Mr. LeMond caused Trek?

25 A In any numeric -- no. What I did was looked at

1 the dealer comments, interpreted their lack of support 2 for that line and understanding, you know, just based on 3 what I read, how those bikes get sold, that that clearly 4 was not going to be a good thing for their sale.

5 Q And your evidence of the dealer comments again
6 were the ones that were the files marked as "Dealer 7 Comments"?

8 A Right.

9 Q Would you expect dealers of Trek bicycles, that 10 disagreed with Trek's approach, to send them -- send 11 Trek a communication saying, you know, "We really 12 support LeMond over you?"

13 A I think from what I can gather, given the 14 importance of independent bike dealers to their 15 business, that they had an ongoing dialogue with those 16 people. Those people were the life blood of their 17 sales. And that that ongoing dialogue would result in 18 great feedback from those people. They're their front 19 line. Without knowing exactly what's going on in a bike 20 store, I don't think Trek has a viable business, 21 regardless of the product they're producing. So I would 22 expect that if a dealer truly thought something was in 23 their best interest or not in their best interest, you'd 24 hear from them in both cases.

25 Q Have you ever heard of any complaints from
