20 Defendants Vote for the Worst, LLC, Nathan E. Palmer, and David J. Della Terza
 21 (collectively, “VFTW,” or the “Defendants”), by and through counsel, reply to Plaintiff 22 Righthaven, LLC’s (hereinafter “Righthaven[’s],” or the “Plaintiff[’s]”) Response to Defendants’ 23 Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction (Doc. # 40) filed on May 9, 2011 in 24 opposition to Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction (Doc. # 33), 25 filed on April 17, 2011.

26 I. Introduction

27 On May 9, 2011, Righthaven responded to Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss (Doc. # 40) 28 and, simultaneously executed a “Clarification” (hereinafter, the “Clarification”) of the Strategic

1 Alliance Agreement (hereinafter, the “Agreement”) between Righthaven and Stephens Media
2 LLC (hereinafter, “Stephens Media”). Decl. of Steve Gibson (Doc. # 41) at 3:13-24, Exh. 3; 3 Decl. of Mark Hinueber (Doc. # 42) at 3:10-21, Exh 3. This “Clarification,” conveniently
4 executed on the day Righthaven had to respond to Defendants’ pending Motion (Doc. # 33), 5 supposedly rectifies the defects in Righthaven’s Agreement, which governs the terms on which 6 Stephens Media assigns its copyrights to Righthaven. The “Clarification”, however, does not 7 such thing, and serves only as a cynical attempt to obfuscate the unlawful nature of Righthaven’s 8 enterprise: The “Clarification,” along with the Agreement, is a mere acquisition of the right to 9 sue for copyright infringement without the true transfer of any other rights under Title 17. As the 10 assignment of a right to sue in copyright cases has already been deemed unlawful by this Circuit 11 and others, what is happening here is clear: Righthaven’s unlawful enterprise has been 12 unmasked, and it is now making a desperate attempt to revive its litigation business model.
13 Unfortunately for Righthaven, but fortunately for free expression and the rule of law, this “Hail 14 Mary pass” has fallen far short of its intended receiver – with the intended receiver being the 15 deception of the parties and this Honorable Court.

16 The restructuring of Righthaven’s and Stephens Media’s Agreement, supposedly effected 17 by the “Clarification,” serves to do little more than re-arrange deck chairs on the Titanic. As 18 seen in the rest of the Agreement, which remains in effect, Righthaven has no purpose for 19 existence other than to sue on copyrights that it obtains only after finding evidence of 20 infringement. A true and correct copy of this Agreement is attached to Defendants’ Motion to 21 Dismiss (Doc. # 33 Exh. A) and is additionally attached hereto as Exhibit A. Exh. A §§ 3-5.
22 Despite giving Stephens Media a poorly worded and unspecific non-exclusive license to content 23 that Stephens Media assigned to Righthaven in the first place (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 § 1; Doc. # 42
24 Exh. 3 § 1), the “Clarification” does not eliminate Stephens Media’s right of reversion (Doc. # 25 41 Exh. 3 § 2; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 § 2), and ultimately deprives Righthaven of any exclusive rights 26 in the assigned copyright (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 §§ 1 and 2; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 §§ 1 and 2) – the 27 possession of which is an essential component of Article III standing in copyright cases.

1 Sybersound Records v. UAV Corp., 517 F.3d 1137, 1144 (9th Cir. 2008); Silvers v. Sony Pictures
2 Entm't, Inc., 402 F.3d 881, 885, 890 (9th Cir. 2005).

3 This “Clarification” illuminates only one thing: Righthaven operates as a copyright 4 litigation factory, but it has no lawful interests or use for the copyrights it acquires from Stephens 5 Media. If Righthaven were the copyrights’ true legal and beneficial owner, it would not be 6 necessary for Righthaven to give Stephens Media 30 days’ notice to use the assigned, already 7 infringed copyrights for any purpose other than litigation. (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 § 1; Doc. # 42 Exh.
8 3 § 1.) Moreover, it would not give Stephens Media the unilateral right to buy back the assigned 9 copyright before Righthaven could use the any of the copyright’s exclusive rights under 17 10 U.S.C. § 106. (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 § 2; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 § 2.) Righthaven’s CEO brings special 11 attention to Section 15.1 of the Agreement, allowing the Court to “correct” the Agreement, or 12 provide “direction” or “clarification.” (Doc. # 41 at 3:5-9, 15-21.) The Defendants agree, and 13 this correction should come from viewing the Agreement and its accompanying “Clarification” 14 for what they are – a cynical attempt to turn copyrights into lawsuits, and nothing more.

15 II. Legal Standards

16 Subject matter jurisdiction is an essential element to every lawsuit and must be 17 demonstrated “at the successive stages of the litigation.” Chapman v. Pier 1 Imports (U.S.), Inc., 18 631 F.3d 939, 954 (9th Cir. 2011) (citing Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 561 19 (1992)). A central component to subject matter jurisdiction is the question of standing, which 20 requires that the party experience actual or imminent harm. Lujan, 504 U.S. at 561 (citing 21 Whitmore v. Ark., 495 U.S. 149, 155 (1990)). A party’s standing to bring a case is not subject to 22 waiver, and can be used to dismiss the instant action at any time. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3); U.S. v.
23 Hays, 515 U.S. 737, 742 (1995); Chapman, 631 F.3d at 954. Within the realm of copyright law, 24 17 U.S.C. 501(b) allows only the legal or beneficial owner of an exclusive right in a copyright, 25 specified in 17 U.S.C. § 106, to sue for infringement. Silvers, 402 F.3d at 884.

1 III. Argument

2 Defendants do not seek to contest the validity of the Agreement or “Clarification” as 3 contracts between Righthaven and Stephens Media, but contest the copyright rights Righthaven 4 possesses – or, specifically, does not possess – as a function of those written contracts’ intended 5 operation. See Silvers, 402 F.3d at 884 (forbidding transfer of the bare right to sue), compare
6 Magnuson v. Video Yesteryear, 85 F.3d 1424, 1428-29 (9th Cir. 1996) (precluding defendant 7 from attacking the transfer of the copyrights used to sue for infringement) and Sabroso Publ’g, 8 Inc. v. Caiman Records Am., Inc., 141 F.Supp.2d 224, 227-28 (D. P.R. 2001) (preventing a 9 defendant from attacking the contractual validity of a copyright transferee from the transferor to 10 the transferee plaintiff). As such, the Court is presented with an inquiry of what rights 11 Righthaven obtains as a result of the transfer as opposed to a probe into the transaction itself.
12 The answer to this latter question, as to what rights Righthaven acquires, is none.

13 Under the Agreement, even with the “Clarification,” Righthaven does not have standing to 14 bring this case. Accordingly, this Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the dispute.
15 Righthaven deceptively cites three cases in which it was the plaintiff for the proposition that 16 Righthaven’s assignments are legal under Silvers: Righthaven LLC v. Vote For The Worst, LLC, 17 et al., Case No. 2:10-cv-01045- KJD-GWF (D. Nev. March 30, 2011); Righthaven LLC v.
18 Majorwager.com, Inc., 2010 WL 4386499 at *2 (D. Nev. Oct. 28, 2010); Righthaven LLC v. Dr.
19 Shezad Malik Law Firm P.C., 2010 WL 3522372, at *2 (D. Nev. Sept. 2, 2010).

20 Righthaven’s reliance on these cases is doubly flawed. These cases considered only a one-21 page assignment between Righthaven and Stephens Media, and not the Agreement and 22 ”Clarification” that set forth the terms that control that transaction. In those three cases, while 23 Righthaven knew full well of the existence of the Agreement, it appears to have purposely 24 hidden that agreement from the defendants in those cases. As the Agreement and ”Clarification” 25 were not on the public record at the time this District rendered its opinions in these cases, the full 26 scope of Righthaven’s relationship with Stephens Media could not be considered. Now that the 27 Agreement and ”Clarification” are before this Court, it may realize Righthaven’s complete lack 28 of standing, as it is an unlawful lawsuit mill. The fact that Righthaven fought mightily to keep

1 the Agreement from coming to light demonstrates not only that the Righthaven scheme is 2 unlawful, but that Righthaven and its principals were fully aware of that fact. Now, they seek to 3 be rewarded for their “creativity,” in ginning up a “Clarification”. Meanwhile, the 4 “Clarification” does nothing to cure the underlying lack of rights and lack of standing.

5 A. Despite Its ”Clarification”, Righthaven Still Does Not Have the Right to Sue for 6 Infringement.

7 Righthaven attempted to salvage its beleaguered Agreement by executing the 8 ”Clarification,” which memorialized the parties’ intent in creating the initial Agreement. (Doc. # 9 41 Exh. 3; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3.) Contrary to Righthaven’s ostensible hopes, though, this 10 “Clarification” served only to make Righthaven’s naked use of its acquired copyrights as the 11 basis of lawsuits – and only as the basis of lawsuits – even clearer.

12 The “Clarification” does not retroactively remedy Righthaven’s lack of standing. While 13 a subsequently executed agreement provides clarification regarding the parties’ intent to cure 14 standing defects in copyright cases, it does not retroactively confer standing that previously did 15 not exist. See Billy-Bob Teeth, Inc. v. Novelty, Inc., 329 F.3d 586, 591 (7th Cir. 2003); Imperial 16 Residential Design, Inc. v. Palms Dev. Group, Inc., 70 F.3d 96, 99 (11th Cir. 1995); Arthur
17 Rutenberg Homes, Inc. v. Drew Homes, Inc., 29 F.3d 1529, 1532 (11th Cir. 1994); Infodek, Inc.
18 v. Meredith-Webb Printing Co., Inc., 830 F. Supp. 614, 620 (N.D. Ga. 1993). In these cases, 19 cited by Righthaven in its opposition, a clarification was allowed to put a previously executed 20 oral transfer into writing, or to include previously accrued causes of action in the assignment. See 21 Infodek, 830 F. Supp. at 620. None of these cases support Righthaven’s proposition that cure its 22 prior, ineffective attempt to transfer a copyright from Stephens Media to Righthaven with a new, 23 equally unsuccessful attempt to transfer Stephens Media’s copyrights to Righthaven solely for 24 the purpose of litigation, in an effort to circumnavigate this Circuit’s holding in Silvers. 402 F.3d

1                   1. The “Clarification” Denies Righthaven of Substantially All Ability to Use Its 2                   Assigned Copyrighted for Anything – Except Lawsuits.

3                   Despite the May 9, 2011 “Clarification,” Righthaven’s Agreement with Stephens Media 4 provides it with nothing more than the bare right to sue. An important component of 5 Righthaven’s “Clarification” is the revision of Agreement § 7.2 (Exh. A § 7.2) to no longer give 6 Stephens Media an exclusive license to Exploit (defined in id. at Schedule 1) the copyrighted
7 works for “any lawful purpose” (id. § 7.2). In its place, as the putative owner of the copyright, 8 Righthaven has granted Stephens Media a non-exclusive license to Exploit the copyrighted work 9 “to the greatest extent permitted by law” on condition that 1) Stephens Media pay Righthaven 10 $1.00 per year for this right, and 2) that Righthaven give Stephens Media 30 days notice if it 11 decides to Exploit the copyrighted work or receive any royalties from the copyright’s use other 12 than in connection with lawsuits, with failure to do so constituting a material breach of the 13 Agreement. (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 § 1; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 § 1.)

14                   This aspect of the “Clarification” is problematic for numerous reasons. First, 15 Righthaven’s non-exclusive license to Stephens Media contains no definitions as to duration, 16 geography or media covered, but haphazardly lets Stephens Media use the copyright assigned to 17 Righthaven “to the greatest extent permitted by law.” (Id.) This broad language impairs the 18 markets and interests of other licensees to which Righthaven could license its copyrighted works, 19 such as those that better serve markets in which Stephens Market is permitted to compete, and 20 especially in light of Righthaven’s infringement litigation arrangement with Stephens Media 21 evinced in Exhibit A §§ 3-5, and unchanged by the “Clarification.”

22                   Moreover, under the “Clarification,” Righthaven’s unilateral use of the assigned 23 copyright would constitute a material breach of the Agreement, allowing Stephens Media to seek 24 injunctive relief against Righthaven for using the copyright that it ostensibly owns. (Doc. # 41 25 Exh. 3 § 1; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 § 1.) Such an extreme limitation by the assignor of a copyright is 26 inimical to ownership of a copyright, yet in a desperate attempt to retain the right to extort 27 money from VFTW (and hundreds of other defendants), Righthaven dishonestly insists that it is

1 the owner of the assigned Stephens Media copyrights. (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 § 3; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 § 2 3.) This dishonesty must not be rewarded.

3 Stephens Media’s $1.00-per-year license and royalty fee (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 § 1; Doc. # 42 4 Exh. 3 § 1) is also misleading. While a nominal fee for licensing back the copyright Stephens 5 Media originally assigned to Righthaven, this sum is vastly outweighed by the revenues Stephens 6 Media receives from Righthaven’s litigation on the assigned copyright, as the Agreement –
7 unaltered by the “Clarification” in this respect – entitles Stephens Media to 50% of any recovery
8 Righthaven obtains from litigation. (Exh. A § 5). With all of the components taken together, 9 Stephens Media assigns its copyright to Righthaven and pays $1.00 in order to receive 50% of 10 Righthaven’s litigation recovery.<sup>1</sup> Based on what little public information is available about 11 Righthaven’s settlements, Stephens Media’s recovery entitlement per copyright assignment has 12 been orders of magnitude greater than $1.<sup>2</sup> Indeed, without the recovery clause in § 5 of the 13 Agreement (Exh. A. § 5), this entire arrangement would fail to be profitable for Stephens and 14 Righthaven and make no sense for either party, as Stephens assigns only copyrights that have 15 been – or it believes have been – infringed. (See Exh. A. § 3.) It makes no sense for Stephens 16 Media to assign only its infringed copyrights to Righthaven, just to license them back and give 17 Righthaven the sole “right” to sue for infringement,<sup>3</sup> unless Righthaven’s only purpose is to sue 18 on these assigned copyrights.

19 Righthaven and Stephens Media also used the “Clarification” to amend the reversion 20 provisions of its Agreement. Instead of allowing Stephens Media to have a complete reversion 21 of the copyright (Exh. A § 8), the “Clarification” allows Stephens Media to, at any time, give 22 Righthaven 14 days notice that it will repurchase the previously assigned copyright for $10.
23 (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 § 2; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 § 2.) What’s more, upon exercising this option, 24 Stephens Media must repay Righthaven the costs Righthaven had undertaken to pursue

25 _____
26 <sup>1</sup> This presumably includes sharing any attorneys’ fees award with Stephens Media, potentially violating Fed. R.
27 Civ. P. 54(d)(2).

28 <sup>2</sup> See Righthaven Lawsuits, <http://righthavenlawsuits.com/> (last accessed May 10, 2011) (providing Righthaven’s estimated revenues based on lawsuit settlements).

<sup>3</sup> The right to sue for copyright infringement is not one of the exclusive copyright rights provided under 17 U.S.C. § 106.

1 infringement actions on that assigned copyright. (Id.) This new, revised section 8.2 goes into 2 considerable detail governing how Righthaven will be compensated and disputes settled in the 3 event of Stephens Media exercising its unilateral right to repurchase its assigned copyright from 4 Righthaven, even at the cost of terminating Righthaven’s pending litigation (id.) – a profound 5 issue that belies Righthaven’s claim as the true, legal and beneficial owner of the assigned 6 copyrights.

7 Operating together, sections 1 and 2 of the “Clarification” make it clear that Stephens 8 Media retains full ownership of the copyrights that Righthaven claims to own. (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 9 §§ 1 and 2; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 §§ 1 and 2.) If Righthaven wants to exploit or otherwise license the 10 assigned copyright, it must give Stephens Media 30 days’ notice before doing so. (Doc. # 41 11 Exh. 3 § 1; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 § 1.) Yet, once given notice of Righthaven’s intent to use the 12 copyright it supposedly owns, Stephens Media may exercise its rights under new § 8.1 to 13 repurchase the copyright with 14 days’ notice and the payment of $10. This creates a loop 14 where, if Righthaven were to even try to use Stephens Media’s assigned copyrights for a purpose 15 other than litigation, Stephens Media could (and certainly would) snatch them back before 16 Righthaven could actually use them. Righthaven’s and Stephens Media’s characterization of this 17 arrangement as “ownership” is beyond bizarre, and reveals their intent to call an unlawful 18 assignment of the right to sue “ownership” in an effort to misdirect the Court.

19 Substantively, this is not a non-exclusive license, but an exclusive license to Stephens 20 Media. This mislabeled exclusive license permits Stephens Media to use the assigned copyright 21 “to the greatest extent permitted by law” (id.) up to and until the time Righthaven uses or 22 licenses the copyright for a purpose other than infringement litigation. (Id.) Should Righthaven 23 provide Stephens Media notice that it intends to use the copyright for non-litigation purposes, 24 though, Stephens Media can buy back its rights before anyone else can use the copyrights
25 supposedly owned by Righthaven. (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 §§ 1 and 2; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 §§ 1 and 2.) 26 Sybersound, 517 F.3d at 1150-51 (holding that only exclusive licensees may use or enforce the 27 rights they possess); Davis, 505 F.3d at 101 (observing that “no one other than the exclusive 28 licensee may exercise the right” where there is an exclusive license).

1                   2. Taken Together, the Terms of Righthaven’s Agreement and “Clarification”
2                   Show that Righthaven is not the Owner of the Assigned Copyrights, but has 3                   Merely been Assigned a Right to Sue.

4                   Righthaven’s and Stephens Media’s “Clarification” describes Righthaven as the 5 copyright “owner,” but it is a word without meaning in this circumstance. (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 § 3; 6 Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 § 3.) Just as a child that lacks understanding of the world around her may call a 7 dog a “cat,” that does not make it so. Righthaven and Stephens Media have misidentified 8 Righthaven as the owner of Stephens Media’s assigned copyrights in § 3 of the “Clarification” 9 (id.). This characterization of Righthaven as an owner is inaccurate in light of the excessive 10 restrictions on Righthaven’s use of the assigned copyrights contained within the Agreement 11 (Exh. A) and amplified in the “Clarification” (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3).

12                   It is not uncommon for courts to encounter restrictive agreements that purport to transfer 13 ownership of a copyright but, in reality, convey no such right. In Lahiri v. Universal Music &
14 Video Distribution Corporation, 606 F.3d 1216, 1222 (9th Cir. 2010) the appeals court found 15 that a settlement agreement purportedly recognizing a party in the litigation as an “owner” of a 16 copyright was too restrictive to convey such a right, holding that “[t]he record demonstrates [the 17 attorney] misled the district court by use of a settlement agreement that deceptively used 18 ownership language, but did not convey or recognize [the assignee’s ownership].” This 19 language should be of great instructive value for this Court, as the record in this case 20 demonstrates the same thing.

21                   Similarly, in Nafal v. Carter, the court held that the plaintiff’s description in the putative 22 assignment as a “co-owner” was not dispositive of the plaintiff’s ownership rights. 540 F. Supp.
23 2d 1128, 1141 (C.D. Cal. 2007). Instead, the court held that the relevant test to determine proper 24 ownership of a copyright was “Whether an agreement transfers rights that are exclusive or 25 nonexclusive is governed by the substance of what was given to the licensee and not the label 26 that the parties put on the agreement.” Id. at 1141-42, citing Althin v. W. Suburban Kidney Ctr., 27 874 F. Supp. 837, 843 (N.D. Ill. 1994).

1 In Nafal, the document allegedly giving the plaintiff an ownership interest in the 2 copyright prohibited him from “exercising any decision-making authority over almost every 3 portion of the License Agreement.” 540 F. Supp. 2d at 1142. Accordingly, the court found that 4 Nafal was not the owner of the work, lacked Article III standing to pursue a copyright 5 infringement claim, and disposed of the case at summary judgment. Id. at 1144. Similarly, in 6 Althin, the trial court found that the plaintiff company lacked standing to bring its copyright 7 infringement claims. 874 F. Supp. at 837. Upon review, the court found that the assignment 8 agreement that putatively made the company an exclusive copyright right holder merely 9 conveyed a non-exclusive license to the plaintiff company. Id. Specifically, the court found that 10 the rights transferred by the parties’ agreement under the 1976 Copyright Act were “governed by 11 the substance of what was given to the licensee and not the label that the parties put on the 12 agreement.” Id. As the licensor gave the licensee no right to transfer or assign the license 13 agreement, with only a very narrow exception, the court held that Althin did not acquire 14 sufficient rights to have standing to enforce them against others’ infringement, and thus 15 dismissed the case on the defendant’s Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1) Motion to Dismiss. Id.

16 As set forth above, Righthaven has extraordinarily limited rights for a copyright “owner.” 17 Righthaven’s fundamental rights to dispose of its copyrights are so limited and crippled that 18 cannot even use them for non-litigation purposes without seeking Stephens Media’s approval, 19 lest it “materially breach” its Agreement. (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 § 1; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 § 1.)
20 Whenever Stephens Media wishes, with minimal notice, it may, without opposition, repurchase 21 its assigned copyrights for $10 apiece. (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3 § 2; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3 § 2.) As is 22 apparent from the Agreement, the only thing Righthaven has any authority to do is to pursue 23 infringement litigation. (Exh. A §§ 3-5.)

24 A number of provisions in the Agreement that are not affected by the “Clarification” 25 further deny Righthaven ownership of the copyright, and reserve rights to Stephens Media far 26 beyond those due to a non-exclusive licensee. As part of its copyright assignments to 27 Righthaven, Stephens Media is entitled to:

1 maintain Encumbrances on Stephens Media Assigned Copyrights as part of an 2 overall funding securitization whereby all or substantially all of Stephens Media's 3 assets are Encumbered as part of said funding securitization and Stephens Media 4 Assigned Copyrights are not singled-out as or part of a particularized group of 5 Encumbered assets.

6 (Exh. A § 9.3.) This provision entitles Stephens Media, putatively the non-exclusive licensee of 7 the assigned copyrights under the “Clarification”, to mortgage the copyrights ostensibly owned 8 by Righthaven. Thus, despite Righthaven being the apparent owner of these copyrights, 9 Stephens Media is entitled to use them as security for funding and other financial obligations.
10 This is inconsistent with the tale that Righthaven now weaves before this Court.

11 Stephens Media retains a number of other rights in the copyrights Righthaven claims to 12 own. In Agreement § 3.3 (id. § 3.3), Stephens Media retains the right to reassign the copyright, 13 despite Righthaven’s ownership, if Righthaven declines to sue for its infringement. If 14 Righthaven was the sole and true owner of the assigned copyright, Stephens Media would have 15 no such rights, yet this section of the Agreement gives Stephens Media the right to reassign a 16 copyright that it insists is owned by Righthaven. (Id.) Righthaven further reveals the flimsiness of 17 its “ownership” in Agreement § 3.4, in which it does not even have the exclusive right to conduct 18 litigation, and grants Stephens Media – a mere non-exclusive licensee under the “Clarification,” 19 which normally would not have standing to sue for infringement – the right to pursue 20 infringement litigation on its own, without Righthaven. (Id. § 3.4.)

21 In sum, all of Righthaven’s rights to the copyrights assigned to it by Stephens Media are 22 completely beholden to Stephens Media’s unfettered whims: From Righthaven’s ability to 23 exploit or license the work to a party other than Stephens Media and Stephens Media’s right to 24 re-purchase any assigned copyright for $10 without Righthaven having any ability to oppose, to 25 Righthaven’s sole pre-authorized use of the assigned copyright being for copyright infringement 26 under Agreement §§ 3.1-3.4 and Stephens Media’s ability to pursue its own copyright 27 infringement lawsuits. Stephens Media’s rights and privileges permeate the Agreement and 28 “Clarification” so completely and thoroughly that Righthaven’s “ownership” of the assigned copyright is little more than a cruel joke at VFTW’s expense (and the expense of hundreds of

1 other defendants who have been sued under this unlawful arrangement, to say nothing for the 2 poor souls who have paid Righthaven its extortionate demands).

3 To the extent this Court must examine this Agreement, and correct it as Righthaven has 4 encouraged the Court to do in § 15.1 of its Agreement (id. § 15.1) in order to effect the parties’
5 “manifest intent” (Doc. # 41 at 3:8-12, 18-24; Doc. # 42 at 3:10-14, 15-21), it should find that it 6 is nothing more than a vehicle to unlawfully transfer the right to sue, and no other rights, under 7 the guise of copyright ownership. Indeed, the Agreement and its “Clarification” haphazardly 8 consider Righthaven’s ability to use and protect its copyright rights in all arenas except its 9 meticulously detailed scheme to pursue infringement litigation on the assigned copyrights in 10 Agreement §§ 3-5. (Exh. A. §§ 3-5.) The very inclusion of § 15.1 (id. § 15.1) in the Agreement, 11 and its retention in the “Clarification,” demonstrates that Righthaven and Stephens Media knew 12 their arrangement was a sham, yet they couldn’t find a way to make the Righthaven model work
13 – predominantly because such operations are prohibited by Silvers and other law in this Circuit – 14 and want the Court to change the parties’ agreement to effectuate its unlawful scheme. Not only 15 is the Agreement and “Clarification” between Stephens Media and Righthaven unlawful, so too 16 is the parties’ intent – to transfer the right to sue to Righthaven, with no other rights – and the 17 Court cannot cure what ails Righthaven and its business model.

18 The operation of this Agreement and its “Clarification” is nothing more than the transfer 19 of an accrued right to sue without any exclusive rights. This practice has been held unlawful in 20 every jurisdiction to consider it, including the controlling Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.
21 Hyperquest, Inc. v. N’Site Solutions, Inc., 632 F.3d 377, 383 (7th Cir. 2011); U.S. v. Chalupnik, 22 514 F.3d 748, 753 (8th Cir. 2008); Davis v. Blige, 505 F.3d 90, 103 (2d Cir. 2007); Silvers, 402
23 F.3d at 885; ABKCO Music, Inc. v. Harrisongs Music, Ltd., 944 F.2d 971, 980 (2d Cir. 1991); 24 Eden Toys, Inc. v. Florelee Undergarment Co., Inc., 697 F.2d 27 (2d Cir. 1982); see also 25 Sybersound, 517 F.3d at 1144. No matter what Righthaven calls the rights it supposedly obtains, 26 substantive analysis reveals them to be little more than the bare right to sue – something that not 27 only is not provided for in 17 U.S.C. § 106, but has been specifically held to be unlawful in case 28 after case, and runs directly contrary to the Copyright Act’s entire purpose.

1           B. Defendants Were Justified in Claiming Righthaven Deceived the Court, and as 2           Righthaven’s Deception Continues, Defendants Renew this Claim.

3           In its Response brief (Doc. # 40), Righthaven argues, incorrectly, that the cause of 4 Defendants’ argument for dismissal in light of Righthaven’s misrepresentations is “internet-5 based criticism” and “conspiracy theories” (Doc. # 40 at 11-12). Based on the Agreement (Exh.
6 A), which was the only publicly available information detailing the terms of Stephens Media’s 7 assignments to Righthaven, Defendants’ arguments were proper under the precedent of this 8 Circuit. Wyle v. R.J. Reynolds Indus., Inc., 709 F.2d 585, 589 (9th Cir. 1983); Phoceene Sous-
9 Marine, S.A. v. U.S. Phosmarine, Inc., 682 F.2d 802, 806 (9th Cir. 1982).

10           At the time this argument was made (Doc. # 33 at 5-6) on April 17, 2011, Righthaven’s 11 and Stephens Media’s “Clarification” was not available on the public record. In fact, the 12 “Clarification” did not even exist at the time the Defendants filed their Motion (Doc. # 33), as it 13 was conveniently signed by both Righthaven and Stephens Media on May 9, 2011 – the date on 14 which Righthaven filed it with its Response (Doc. # 40). (Doc. # 41 Exh. 3; Doc. # 42 Exh. 3.) 15 The fact that Righthaven apparently operated for almost one and one-half years without 16 amending its Agreement or executing the “Clarification” before May 9, 2011, is clear evidence 17 that it was caught with its hand in the proverbial cookie jar of unlawful copyright assignments, 18 and is desperately, retroactively trying to protect its business model. As explained at the outset 19 of this brief, Righthaven’s desperate, backward-looking attempt to make its model legal under 20 the precedent of this Circuit is not only unsuccessful, but does not cure its existing lack of 21 exclusive rights alleged in Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss (Doc. # 33 at 5-6).

22           For the reasons articulated above, Righthaven still has not acquired the copyrights it
23 allegedly owns through Stephens Media’s fraudulent assignments. As such, Righthaven’s 24 assertions that it is the “owner” of the copyrighted work and possesses the exclusive rights to 25 reproduce the work, create derivatives of the copyrighted work, distribute copies of the work and 26 publicly display the work under 17 U.S.C. § 106, (Doc. # 1 ¶¶ 9, 25, 32-35) are false.

27           While this “Clarification” might be creative, the intent is clear. And, as Righthaven has 28 asked this court to interpret the Agreement and the “Clarification” to operate as the parties

1 intended, the court should do so. The court should recognize what these documents really mean 2 – that the parties conspired to unlawfully create a copyright litigation entity, with no actual 3 assignment of any intellectual property rights. Upon doing so, this Court should end this case 4 immediately.

5 C. Substituting or Adding Stephens Media as Plaintiff in This Case is Improper, and 6 Will Not Remedy Righthaven’s Lack of Standing.

7 As a simple technical matter, under Local Rule 7.2, Righthaven’s request to add or 8 substitute Stephens Media as Plaintiff in this action is improper, as it should be brought before 9 this Court as a separate motion. Such a request for substitution is improperly brought with 10 Righthaven’s brief. (Doc. # 40 at 11). Nevertheless, considering Righthaven’s request at this 11 time is in the interest of judicial economy.

12 The circumstances of this case do not permit Righthaven to add or substitute Stephens 13 Media as a plaintiff in this case due to it being the proper party in interest. When a plaintiff has 14 not suffered an injury and lacked standing since a lawsuit’s inception, a proper party in interest 15 cannot substitute for the plaintiff later in litigation. Lierboe v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 16 350 F.3d 1018, 1022-23 (9th Cir. 2007); Blackwell v. Skywest Airlines, 245 F.R.D. 453, 463
17 (S.D. Cal. 2007). As Righthaven never owned, nor was it ever the exclusive assignee, of a 18 copyright right defined in 17 U.S.C. § 106, it never had a claim against VFTW, nor was there 19 any confusion as to who the proper party-in-interest was.

20 If there were some actual bona-fide confusion as to the copyright’s ownership, there 21 might be grounds under which Stephens Media could be substituted in as the plaintiff. See 22 Wieburg v. GTE Southwest, Inc., 272 F.3d 302, 308 (5th Cir. 2001); Isbell v. DM Records, Inc., 23 Case No. 4:07-cv-146, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23735 at *2-3 (E.D. Tex. 2009). However, the 24 right to substitute a party is not a right granted to plaintiffs who get caught breaking the law, and 25 then who want to save face. This right is there for parties who have an honest misunderstanding 26 of the legal owner of certain rights. There is nothing honest about Righthaven, and it does not 27 deserve such grace from this Honorable Court. Righthaven’s “Clarification” to its Agreement 28 with Stephens Media does not confer standing upon Righthaven, as the Agreement still operates

1 just as it ever has – to grant Righthaven the bare right to sue for infringement, and nothing more.
2 From the Agreement’s construction and “Clarification’s” added terms, there is no question that 3 Righthaven still lacks these rights.

4 This Agreement and its desperately manufactured “Clarification” exist solely to serve 5 whatever purpose is furthered by Stephens Media not being the plaintiff in the more than 250 6 lawsuits filed by Righthaven. Ironically, if Stephens Media had acted as the plaintiff in these 7 cases, it would obviate the need for its attempts to appear as if it had transferred some kind of 8 copyright rights to Righthaven in an effort to masquerade its assignment of the bare right to sue.
9 For whatever reason, Stephens Media chose to ignore Silvers, set up a copyright litigation entity, 10 and attempted to dance around this Circuit’s precedent forbidding exactly Righthaven’s and 11 Stephens Media’s relationship ex post.

12 Conclusion

13 Despite Righthaven’s last-minute “Clarification” of its Agreement with Stephens Media, 14 the relationship between the parties fails to convey Righthaven ownership or any exclusive rights 15 in the allegedly assigned copyright. As such, Righthaven lacks, and has never possessed, 16 standing to bring this action, and this Court therefore lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the 17 dispute. Defendants’ allegations of Righthaven’s representations were, and continue to be, 18 accurate, and provide this Court another justification for dismissing this action. Finally, no 19 substitution or addition of parties at this juncture would be proper, or curative of Righthaven’s 20 fundamental standing defects. Accordingly, Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject 21 Matter Jurisdiction (Doc. # 33) should be granted.
