DISTRICT OF NEVADA

CHARDE EVANS,

Plaintiff(s),

v.

WAL-MART STORE, INC.,

Defendant(s).

Case No. 2:10-CV-1224 JCM (VCF)

ORDER

Presently before the court is plaintiff Charde Evans's motion for preliminary approval of class action settlement. (ECF No. 128). Ms. Evans brings this on her own behalf, on behalf of all others similarly situated, and on behalf of proposed additional plaintiff Lisa Pizzurro-Westcott (collectively "plaintiffs"). Defendant Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. ("Walmart") has not responded, and the time to do so has passed.

I. Background

The instant action arises from Walmart's alleged practice of requiring employees to work in excess of eight hours in a workday without receiving overtime pay in violation of Nevada Revised Statute ("NRS") 608.018. (ECF No. 1). This case has been heavily litigated since it was filed in 2010. The parties are familiar with this case's extensive procedural history; the court need not reiterate it.

In August 2018, this case was stayed to allow the parties to engage in private mediation. (ECF No. 102). The parties have, after a year of arm's-length negotiations, reached a resolution. Plaintiffs now move for preliminary approval of class action settlement. (ECF No. 128). Plaintiff's motion is unopposed.

1       II.     Legal Standard

2             There is a strong judicial preference for pre-trial settlement of complex class actions as 3 settlement of class actions is favored as a matter of “strong judicial policy.” See Officers for Justice
4 v. Civil Serv. Comm’n of San Francisco, 688 F.2d 615, 625 (9th Cir. 1982). This strong preference 5 notwithstanding, “[a] class action shall not be dismissed or compromised without the approval of 6 the court . . . .” Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e). Further, where, as here, “parties reach a settlement
7 agreement prior to class certification, courts must peruse the proposed compromise to ratify both 8 [1] the propriety of the certification and [2] the fairness of the settlement.” Staton v. Boeing
9 Co., 327 F.3d 938, 952 (9th Cir.2003).

10            “Procedurally, the approval of a class action settlement takes place in two stages. In the 11 first stage of the approval process, the court preliminarily approves the [s]ettlement pending a 12 fairness hearing, temporarily certifies the [c]lass, and authorizes notice to be given to the [c]lass.”
13 Alberto v. GMRI, Inc., 252 F.R.D. 652, 658 (E.D. Cal. 2008) (citations, internal quotation marks, 14 alterations, and ellipses omitted).

15            “Although Rule 23(e) is silent respecting the standard by which a proposed settlement is 16 to be evaluated, the ‘universally applied standard is whether the settlement is fundamentally fair,
17 adequate and reasonable.’” Class Plaintiffs v. City of Seattle, 955 F.2d 1268, 1276 (9th Cir. 1992)
18 (quoting Officers for Justice v. Civil Serv. Comm’n, 688 F.2d 615, 625 (9th Cir.1982), cert.
19 denied, 459 U.S. 1217, (1983)). Rule 23’s fairness factors include: the strength of the plaintiffs’
20 case; the risk, expense, complexity, and likely duration of further litigation; the risk of maintaining 21 class action status throughout the trial; the amount offered in settlement; the extent of discovery 22 completed and the stage of the proceedings; the experience and views of counsel; the presence of 23 a governmental participant; and the reaction of the class members to the proposed settlement.
24 Torrise v. Tucson Elec. Power Co., 8 F.3d 1370, 1375 (9th Cir. 1993) (quoting Officers for Justice, 25 688 F.2d at 625).

26       III.     Discussion

27            A. Class certification

28            Rule 23(a), which governs class certification, provides as follows:

1 (a) Prerequisites. One or more members of a class may sue or be 2 sued as representative parties on behalf of all members only if:

3 (1) the class is so numerous that joinder of all members is 4 impracticable;

5 (2) there are questions of law or fact common to the class;

6 (3) the claims or defenses of the representative parties are typical of 7 the claims or defenses of the class; and

8 (4) the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the 9 interests of the class.

10 Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a). “The Rule’s four requirements—numerosity, commonality, typicality, 11 and adequate representation—effectively limit the class claims to those fairly encompassed by the 12 named plaintiff’s claims.” Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 564 U.S. 338, 349 (2011) (quoting
13 General Telephone Co. of Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 156 (1982)). Additionally, class
14 certification is appropriate only where at least one section of Rule 23(b) is satisfied. See Fed. R.
15 Civ. P. 23(b).

16 Here, the parties move to certify two classes for the purpose of settlement: the voluntary
17 termination settlement class and the involuntary termination settlement class. (See generally ECF 18 No. 128). The court has already certified the voluntary termination settlement class and need not 19 revisit that determination. (ECF No. 100). Now, “[t]he [p]arties agree that, for purposes of 20 settlement, the [c]ourt’s partial certification order should be amended to include employees whose 21 employment with Walmart terminated involuntarily, and that Lisa Pizzurro-Westcott should be 22 added as an additional [c]lass [r]epresentative to represent this group of employees.” (ECF No.
23 128 at 9). Thus, the court’s certification inquiry is limited to the involuntary termination settlement 24 class.

25 The parties do not dispute that numerosity is satisfied and represent that the classes consist 26 of more than 4,300 individuals. (ECF No. 128 at 9). Thus, the court finds that numerosity is 27 satisfied and turns to the remaining Rule 23(a) requirements.

28 1. Typicality

“Typicality focuses on the class representative’s claim—but not the specific facts from which the claim arose—and ensures that the interest of the class representative ‘aligns with the

1 interests of the class.” Just Film, Inc. v. Buono, 847 F.3d 1108, 1116 (9th Cir. 2017) (quoting
2 Hanon v. Dataproducts Corp., 976 F.2d 497, 508 (9th Cir. 1992)). Under this permissive 3 requirement, “representative claims are ‘typical’ if they are reasonably coextensive with those of 4 absent class members; they need not be substantially identical.” Parsons v. Ryan, 754 F.3d 657,
5 685 (9th Cir. 2014) (internal quotations omitted).

6 “Measures of typicality include whether other members have the same or similar injury,
7 whether the action is based on conduct which is not unique to the named plaintiffs, and whether 8 other class members have been injured by the same course of conduct.” Torres v. Mercer Canyons
9 Inc., 835 F.3d 1125, 1141 (9th Cir. 2016) (internal quotations omitted). When “there is a danger
10 that absent class members will suffer if their representative is preoccupied with defenses unique
11 to it,” the court should not certify a putative class. Hanon, 976 F.2d at 508 (internal quotation 12 marks omitted).

13 This court’s analysis regarding the typicality of Evans’s claims via-a-vis the voluntary
14 termination settlement class is apropos here. The court finds no reason why Pizzurro-Westcott’s 15 claims are atypical. She, and plaintiffs like her, were not paid their continuation wages and have 16 a private right of action against Walmart to recover them under NRS § 608.040. See Neville v.
17 Eighth Judicial Dist. Court in & for Cty. of Clark, 406 P.3d 499, 501 (Nev. 2017). Accordingly, 18 the court finds that the typicality requirement is satisfied.

19 2. Commonality

20 A class has sufficient commonality “if there are questions of fact and law which are 21 common to the class.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(2). In other words, “[t]heir claims must depend upon 22 a common contention of such a nature that it is capable of classwide resolution—which means that 23 determination of its truth or falsity will resolve an issue that is central to the validity of each one 24 of the claims in one stroke.” Dukes, 564 U.S. at 338.

25 The court finds that common legal and factual questions are central to the claims of 26 Pizzuro-Westcott and the involuntary termination settlement class. In particular, as the parties 27 submit, “whether or not class members who are former employees (notwithstanding if terminated 28 voluntarily or involuntarily) were paid all their wages due and owing at the time of their

1 termination is a common factual and legal question, appropriate for certification.” (ECF No. 128
2 at 10). Therefore, the court finds that commonality exists, satisfying Rule 23(a)(2).

3 3. Adequacy of representation

4 The Ninth Circuit employs a two prong test to determine whether a named plaintiff will 5 adequately represent a class: “(1) do the named plaintiffs and their counsel have any conflicts of 6 interest with other class members and (2) will the named plaintiffs and their counsel prosecute the 7 action vigorously on behalf of the class?” Ellis v. Costco Wholesale Corp., 657 F.3d 970, 985 (9th
8 Cir. 2011) (internal citations omitted). When evaluating the adequacy of representation, courts 9 will consider, among other things, “an absence of antagonism between representatives and 10 absentees, and a sharing of interest between representatives and absentees.” Id.

11 First, the court has already found that plaintiffs’ counsel are adequate representatives of 12 the voluntary termination settlement class. (ECF No. 100 at 15). The court finds no reason that 13 plaintiffs’ counsel cannot also adequately represent the involuntary termination settlement class.
14 As a result, the court need only consider whether Pizzuro-Westcott will adequately represent 15 absent members of the involuntary termination settlement class.

16 The court finds no reason why Pizzuro-Westcott would not adequately represent the 17 involuntary termination class. In a sworn declaration, Pizzuro-Westcott has already represented 18 that she has no conflicts of interest with any other class member. (ECF No. 106-2 at 2). Thus, the 19 court finds that Pizzuro-Westcott will adequately represent the involuntary termination class.

20 Because the involuntary termination settlement class meets the requirements of Rule 23(a), 21 the court now turns to the requirements of Rule 23(b) to determine whether certification is 22 appropriate.

23 4. Rule 23(b)

24 Here, the parties contend that the criteria of Rule 23(b)(3) are met. (ECF No. 128 at 11–
25 13). Rule 23(b)(3)’s predominance requirement presents a more stringent standard than Rule
26 23(a)(2)’s commonality requirement, under which a single common question suffices. Dukes, 564
27 U.S. at 359; Abdullah v. U.S. Sec. Assocs., Inc., 731 F.3d 952, 963 (9th Cir. 2013). “A principal 28 purpose behind Rule 23 class actions is to promote efficiency and economy of litigation. Thus,

1 [t]he predominance analysis under Rule 23(b)(3) focuses on the relationship between the common
2 and individual issues in the case, and tests whether the proposed class is sufficiently cohesive to 3 warrant adjudication by representation.” Abdullah, 731 F.3d at 963–64 (alteration in original)
4 (internal quotations and citations omitted).

5 When evaluating the superiority of a class action, courts consider the four factors provided
6 in Rule 23(b)(3): (1) the class members’ interests in individually controlling the prosecution or 7 defense of separate actions; (2) the extent and nature of any litigation concerning the controversy
8 already begun by or against class members; (3) the desirability or undesirability of concentrating
9 the litigation of the claims in the particular forum; (4) the likely difficulties in managing a class 10 action. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3); see Leyva v. Medline Indus. Inc., 716 F.3d 510, 514-15 (9th Cir.
11 2013).

12 The court’s prior analysis certifying the voluntary termination class is also applicable here.
13 (ECF No. 100 at 15–21). The biggest point of divergence between the analysis regarding the 14 voluntary termination class and the involuntary termination class is that the court certified the 15 voluntary termination class over several of Walmart’s objections. Id. For the purposes of 16 settlement approval, Walmart has no such objections to the involuntary termination class.

17 Thus, the court finds that predominance and superiority are met. Predominance is present 18 here because this litigation stems from a single nucleus of fact: “Walmart’s failure to pay
19 continuation wages—a claim arising from Walmart’s failure to pay overtime wages for ‘shift
20 jamming[.]’” (ECF No. 128 at 12 (citing In re Wells Fargo Home Mortgage Overtime Pay Litig.,
21 527 F. Supp.2d at 1068; In re Wells Fargo Home Mortg. Overtime Pay Litigation, 571 F.3d 953, 22 958 (C.A.9 2009)).

23 Superiority is similarly satisfied because the thousands of individual plaintiffs’ claims are 24 for continuation wages that amount to no more than a few thousand dollars. Thus, absent a class 25 action, individual plaintiffs would be “unable to proceed as individuals because of the disparity 26 between their litigation costs and what they hope to recover.” Local Joint Exec. Bd. of 27 Culinary/Bartender Tr. Fund v. Las Vegas Sands, Inc., 244 F.3d 1152, 1163 (9th Cir. 2001).
28 Accordingly, a class action is the superior method of resolution because it allows the individual

1 “plaintiffs to pool claims which would be uneconomical to litigate individually.” Phillips
2 Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 809 (1985).

3 Therefore, Rule 23(b)(3)’s requirements—predominance and superiority—are satisfied.
4 Class certification is appropriate because both subsection (a) and subsection (b) of Rule 23 are 5 satisfied. The court certifies the involuntary termination class for the purpose of settlement.

6 B. Fairness, adequacy, and reasonableness of the settlement

7 First, the court considers the strength of the plaintiffs’ case and takes into account the risk,
8 expense, complexity, and likely duration of further litigation. Torrise, 8 F.3d at 1375. Litigation 9 in this case has already lasted ten years, and the parties have both found mixed success in the 10 instant action. The procedural posture of this case alone demonstrates the desirability of a 11 settlement. The court further finds that the specific, nuanced, and complex legal issues in this 12 case—some of which have been litigated, some of which the settlement would avoid—also 13 supports the instant settlement.

14 There is significant risk to the plaintiffs moving forward without the instant settlement.
15 For instance, Walmart asserted twenty-eight<sup>1</sup> affirmative defenses in its answer (ECF No. 32), and 16 the parties further acknowledge that there are “numerous potentially dispositive defenses advanced 17 by Walmart” (ECF No. 128 at 17). These additional defenses include:

18 [T]hat (i) waiting time penalties are excessive, violate due process,
19 and are thus unconstitutional; (ii) Plaintiffs’ calculation of damages 20 is incorrect because the appropriate rate of damages should be the 21 amount of pay that an employee received 30 calendar days prior to 22 termination; (iii) Plaintiffs have no claim for continuation wages for the group of employees terminated involuntarily, and any success on appeal from the Court’s order denying Plaintiffs’ motion to amend the certification order is uncertain.

23 (ECF No. 128 at 17).

24 Indeed, the risk of future litigation and the complexity of this case is demonstrated by this 25 court’s orders granting summary judgment (ECF No. 62) and denying reconsideration (ECF No.
26 66), which the Ninth Circuit reversed (ECF Nos. 69; 73; 75). At the very least, such thorough

28 <sup>1</sup> The twenty-ninth affirmative defense simply “reserves the right to amend [Walmart’s] [a]nswer as additional facts, issues, or defenses may be discovered” because the parties had not started discovery when Walmart filed its answer. (ECF No. 32 at 8).

1 briefing at the trial and appellate levels demonstrate the ongoing cost and duration associated with 2 protracted class action employment litigation.

3 This factor also supports the settlement’s proposed “incentive” awards for the named
4 plaintiffs. “[I]t is well-established that the court may grant a modest incentive award to class
5 representatives, both as an inducement to participate in the suit and as compensation for time spent 6 in litigation activities, including depositions.” In re Toys R Us-Delaware, Inc.--Fair & Accurate
7 Credit Transactions Act (FACTA) Litig., 295 F.R.D. 438, 470 (C.D. Cal. 2014) (“In re Toys R
8 Us”). Indeed, “[i]ncentive awards are fairly typical in class action cases.” Rodriguez v. West
9 Publ’g Corp., 563 F.3d 948, 958 (9th Cir.2009).

10 Here, Evans—who has been the named plaintiff for ten years now—has “assist[ed] her 11 counsel at multiple stages of litigation . . . participated in multiple call conferences with counsel,
12 provided and reviewed documents and pleadings, and was on standby during three mediation
13 sessions.” (ECF No. 128 at 16). Similarly, Pizzuro-Westcott made herself available to assist 14 counsel on behalf of the putative involuntary termination class even though she lives in New York.
15 Id.

16 Even more compelling is the risk that Evans could be held liable for Walmart’s costs if she 17 is ultimately unsuccessful in resolving the case. See, e.g., Koehl v. Verio, 142 Cal. App. 4th 1313, 18 1328 (2006) (in wage and hour action where defendant prevailed at trial, named plaintiffs were 19 held liable, jointly and severally, for defendant’s attorneys’ fees). Notably, Pizzuro-Westcott is 20 not a named plaintiff and, as a result, does not bear the same risk. For that reason, Pizzuro-
21 Westcott’s incentive award is half of Evans’s.

22 However, the court notes that such incentive awards must be “modest.” In re Toys R Us, 23 295 F.R.D. at 470. Indeed, “concerns over potential conflicts may be especially pressing where . . .
24 the proposed service fees greatly exceed the payments to absent class members.” Radcliffe v.
25 Experian Info. Sols. Inc., 715 F.3d 1157, 1165 (9th Cir. 2013) (quotation marks, alterations, and 26 citation omitted).

27 The Central District of California’s holding in In re Toys R Us is instructive. 295 F.R.D
28 438. The court in that case, which has been pending for almost seven years, approved incentive

1 awards of $5,000 to each named plaintiff, which were “consistent with the amount courts typically
2 award as incentive payments.” Id. at 470. (citing In re Mego Financial Corp., 213 F.3d at 463
3 (approving a $5,000 incentive award for each class representative); Faigman v. AT & T Mobility
4 LLC, No. C06–04622 MHP, 2011 WL 672648, *5 (N.D.Cal. Feb. 16, 2011) (approving an 5 incentive payment of $3,333.33 for each of three class representatives, and noting that “[i]n [the 6 Northern] [D]istrict, incentive payments of $5,000 are presumptively reasonable”); Clesceri v.
7 Beach City Investigations & Protective Services, Inc., No. CV–10–3873–JST (RZx), 2011 WL
8 320998, *2 (C.D.Cal. Jan. 27, 2011) (preliminarily approving an award of $3,000 to two named
9 plaintiffs); Hartless v. Clorox Co., 273 F.R.D. 630, 646–47 (S.D.Cal.2011) (approving an award
10 of $4,000 for one named plaintiff and $2,000 for another); Dennis v. Kellogg Co., No. 09–CV– 11 1786–IEG (WMc), 2010 WL 4285011, *3 (S.D.Cal. Oct. 14, 2010) (preliminarily approving an 12 incentive award of $5,000); Aguayo v. Oldenkamp Trucking, No. F04–6279 AWI LJO, 2006 WL 13 3020943, *10 (E.D.Cal. Oct. 17, 2006) (preliminarily approving a settlement agreement, which 14 provided that class counsel would apply for an incentive award of no more than $5,000 for the 15 named plaintiff)).

16           Consequently, the court finds that the incentive awards to plaintiffs Evans and Pizzuro-17 Westcott, once reduced, are preliminarily fair, adequate, and reasonable. The court reduces the 18 incentive awards to $15,000 to Evans and $5,000 to Pizzuro-Westcott.

19           The court also considers the risk of maintaining class action status throughout the trial.
20 Torrissi, 8 F.3d at 1375. Regarding this factor, the court notes that it previously denied plaintiffs’
21 motion to amend its certification order. (ECF Nos. 106 (motion); 114 (order)). The court held 22 that such amendment was barred by the statute of limitations. (See generally ECF No. 114). Thus,
23 the instant settlement is particularly fair to the involuntary termination settlement class who, as the 24 parties acknowledge, “would not [be] able to recover their continuation wages” without the 25 settlement. (ECF No. 128 at 6). Notably, however, Walmart has consented to allocate 1/3 of the 26 net settlement amount to members of that class.

27           The amount offered in settlement also supports a preliminary finding of fairness, adequacy,
28 and reasonableness. See Torrissi, 8 F.3d at 1375. As the parties aptly note, “[t]he potential liability

1 for [d]efendant for [p]laintiffs’ claim for 30-day wages for all terminated employees (both
2 voluntarily and involuntarily terminated) was approximately $9,612,004.80. Thus, the settlement
3 of $8,700,000.00 represents over 90% of the potential recovery for 30-day wages.” (ECF No. 128
4 at 17). The $8,700,000 settlement figure is a significant recovery for the class at large, particularly
5 in light of the parties’ cited authority on this point. See Glass v. UBS Financial Services, 2007
6 WL 221862, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 26, 2007) (approving a settlement of unpaid overtime wages
7 where the settlement amount constituted only approximately 25 to 35% of the estimated actual 8 loss to the class); see also In re Mego Fin. Corp. Sec. Litig., 213 F.3d 454, 459 (9th Cir. 2000)
9 (finding recovery of 16.67% of the potential recovery adequate in light of the plaintiff’s risks);
10 Bellinghausen v. Tractor Supply Co., 303 F.R.D. 611, 623-24 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (finding settlement
11 amount of a wage and hour class action that equaled between 9% and 27% of the total potential 12 liability to be fair, adequate and reasonable given the uncertainty of continued litigation).

13 Finally, the court turns to the experience and views of counsel. Torrissi, 8 F.3d at 1375.
14 Not only does this factor support preliminary approval of the settlement agreement, it also supports 15 the award of $2,900,000 in attorneys’ fee and up to $65,000 in litigation costs contemplated by the 16 settlement agreement.

17 Here, counsel has “undertak[en] complex, risky, expensive, and time-consuming litigation
18 that has lasted 10 years—solely on a contingency basis.” (ECF No. 128 at 14). The proposed fee 19 award represents approximately one third of the class settlement amount, well within the range of 20 reasonable attorney fees in such cases. See, e.g., Monterrubio v. Best Buy Stores, L.P., 291 F.R.D.
21 443, 457 (E.D. Cal. 2013); Vasquez v. Coast Valley Roofing, Inc., 266 F.R.D. 482, 491–92 (E.D.
22 Cal. 2010); Benitez v. Wilbur, No. CV F 08-1122 LJO GSA, 2009 WL 10713095 (E.D. Cal. Dec.
23 15, 2009); Chavez v. Petrissans, No. CV F 08-0122 LJO GSA, 2009 WL 10713094 (E.D. Cal.
24 Dec. 15, 2009); Willis v. Cal-Western Transp., CIV F-00-5695 AWI LJO, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS
25 28606 (E.D. Cal. July 25, 2003), recommendation adopted by Willis v. Cal Western Transp., 2003
26 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28488 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 20, 2003).

27 ...

28 ...

1           Accordingly, the court finds that the proposed settlement is, for the purposes of preliminary
2 approval, fair, adequate, and reasonable. The court grants plaintiffs’ motion for preliminary 3 approval of class action settlement.

4           C. Adequacy of the notice

5           The court has reviewed the parties’ proposed notice of class action settlement and finds
6 that it is reasonable and adequate. (See ECF No. 128-1 at 46–53). The court finds that the notice
7 adequately describes the purpose of the notice, nature of the lawsuit and settlement, potential opt-
8 in plaintiffs’ options under the settlement, and the consequences of opting in or out of the 9 settlement. Id. Although the notice is simple and straightforward, it nonetheless instructs potential 10 plaintiffs on how to get more information and to whom they should direct their questions. Id.

11           Thus, the court certifies the settlement classes; preliminarily approves the settlement as 12 fair, adequate, and reasonable; and approves the notice and other ancillary forms in their present 13 format.
