UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

KATHERINE AINSWORTH,

Plaintiff,

v.

PARAMOUNT RESIDENTIAL
MORTGAGE GROUP, INC.,

Defendant.

2:11-cv-0007-LRH-PAL

ORDER

Before the court is defendant Paramount Residential Mortgage Group, Inc's ("Paramount") motion to compel binding arbitration. Doc. #19.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff Katherine Ainsworth ("Ainsworth") filed an opposition (Doc. #21) to which Paramount replied (Doc. #23).

I. Facts and Procedural History

In July 2008, Ainsworth was hired by Paramount as a "funder/doc drawer." Shortly after beginning her employment, Ainsworth attended a new-hire training session and was presented with a new-hire packet. Enclosed in the new-hire packet was a mandatory arbitration agreement which Ainsworth signed and returned to Paramount.<sup>2</sup> The arbitration agreement provides in pertinent part:

Except for exclusively monetary claims of less than $5,000.00, I agree that any dispute or controversy which would otherwise require or allow resort to any court or other governmental dispute resolution forum, between myself and [Paramount]

<sup>2</sup> A copy of the signed arbitration agreement is attached as Exhibit A to Paramount's motion to compel arbitration. See Doc. #19, Exhibit A.

1 arising from, related to, or having relationship or connection whatsoever with my
2 seeking employment with, employment by, or other association with [Paramount]
3 (including claims for discrimination/harassment/retaliation under the Fair
4 Employment Housing Act) shall be submitted to and determined by binding arbitration . . . the company will pay all or some of the costs of arbitration in conformity with the requirements imposed by the applicable state law at the time of enforcement of the agreement . . . .

5 Doc. #18, Exhibit A.

6 On December 3, 2010, Ainsworth filed a complaint against Paramount for failure to pay
7 overtime compensation in violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act ("FLSA"), 29 U.S.C. § 201.

8 Doc. #1, Exhibit A. On January 6, 2011, Ainsworth filed an amended complaint against Paramount
9 alleging two causes of action: (1) violation of the FLSA for failure to pay overtime compensation;
10 and (2) violation of NRS §608.018 for failure to pay overtime compensation. Doc. #5. Thereafter,
11 Paramount filed the present motion to compel binding arbitration and stay all further judicial 12 proceedings. Doc. #19.

13 II. Discussion

14 The Federal Arbitration Act ("FAA"), found at 9 U.S.C. §1 et seq., requires a district court
15 to stay judicial proceedings and compel arbitration of claims covered by a written and enforceable
16 arbitration agreement. 9 U.S.C. § 3. In determining whether to compel arbitration under the FAA,
17 the court must determine whether: (1) there is an agreement between the parties to arbitrate; (2) the 18 claims at issue fall within the scope of the arbitration agreement; and (3) the arbitration agreement
19 is valid and enforceable. Lifescan, Inc. v. Permier Diabetic Services, Inc., 363 F.3d 1010, 1012
20 (9th Cir. 2004).

21 Ainsworth concedes that there is an agreement to arbitrate employment disputes between 22 her and Paramount and that her claims against Paramount for failure to pay overtime compensation
23 fall within the scope of that agreement. See Doc. #21. However, Ainsworth argues that the 24 arbitration agreement is unconscionable, and as such, is not a valid and enforceable agreement
25 upon which the court can compel arbitration. Id.

1 Arbitration clauses are to be construed liberally in favor of arbitration. Mikohn Gaming
2 Corp. v. Mcree, 89 P.3d 36, 39 (Nev. 2004). Under both the FAA and Nevada law, there is a
3 presumption that an arbitration clause is valid and enforceable. See 9 U.S.C. § 2; NRS 38.219(1);
4 see also, Bayma v. Smith Barney, Harris Upham and Co., Inc., 784 F.2d 1023, 1024 (9th Cir.
5 1986); State ex rel. Masto v. Second Jud. Dist. Court ex rel. Cty. of Washoe, 199 P.3d 828, 832
6 (Nev. 2009). In order for a court to exercise its discretion and refuse to enforce an arbitration
7 agreement as unconscionable, the court must find that the arbitration agreement is both
8 procedurally and substantively unconscionable. D.R. Horton, Inc. v. Green, 96 P.3d 1159, 1162
9 (Nev. 2004).

10 A. Procedural Unconscionability

11 An arbitration agreement is procedurally unconscionable “when a party lacks a meaningful 12 opportunity to agree to the clause terms either because of unequal bargaining power, as in an
13 adhesion contract, or because the clause and its effects are not readily ascertainable upon a review
14 of the contract.” D.R. Horton, 96 P.3d at 1162.

15 Ainsworth argues that the arbitration agreement at issue here is procedurally
16 unconscionable because it is an adhesion contract. See Doc. #21. An adhesion contract is one that 17 is (1) written in a standard form, using boiler-plate provisions, (2) drafted solely by the party in a
18 stronger bargaining position, and (3) is imposed on the other party on a take-it or leave-it basis. See 19 e.g., Kindred v. Second Judicial Dist. Ct., 996 P.2d 903, 907 (Nev. 2000).

20 The court has reviewed the documents and pleadings on file in this matter and finds that the 21 arbitration agreement between Paramount and Ainsworth is an adhesion contract, and therefore, is 22 procedurally unconscionable. The agreement was a standard form using boiler-plate language
23 drafted solely by Paramount. There was no opportunity or ability for her to negotiate the terms of 24 the agreement or opt-out of the agreement. Further, the agreement was provided to Ainsworth on a 25 take-it-or-leave-it basis after she began her employment as part of the new-hire packet. As such,

1 Ainsworth alleges that she believed the agreement was required for her to maintain her
2 employment. Therefore, the court finds that based on the circumstances surrounding the arbitration
3 agreement that it is a procedurally unconscionable adhesion contract. See e.g., Davis v. O'Melveny
4 & Myers, 485 F.3d 1066, 1073 (9th Cir. 2007) (holding that an agreement that is a prerequisite for 5 continued employment, that cannot be modified by the employee, and was presented on a take-it-
6 or-leave-it basis is procedurally unconscionable as an adhesion contract).

7 B. Substantive Unconscionability

8 The determination of substantive unconscionability focuses on the one-sidedness of the 9 terms in the arbitration agreement. See D.R. Horton, 96 P.3d at 1162-63; see also, Davis, 485 F.3d
10 at 1075 (“Substantive unconscionability . . . focuses on the terms of the agreement and whether 11 those terms are so one-sided as to shock the conscience.”). Generally, “the agreement is 12 unconscionable unless the arbitration remedy contains a ‘modicum of bilaterality.’” D.R. Horton, 96
13 P.3d at 1165 (citing Tine v. AT&T, 319 F.3d 1126, 1148-49 (9th Cir. 2003)).

14 Here, the court finds that the arbitration agreement between Paramount and Ainsworth is 15 not substantively unconscionable. The arbitration agreement provides that both parties are bound to 16 the terms of the agreement and both parties have the ability to initiate arbitration proceedings
17 against the other for any employment dispute without the other parties consent. Had Paramount
18 requested Ainsworth’s claims to be heard in court, Ainsworth had the ability to force Paramount to 19 arbitrate her claims regardless of Paramount’s request. Further, the arbitration agreement provides 20 that Paramount has the obligation to pay for all expenses related to arbitration regardless of 21 whether or not they are the initiating party. Thus, an employee forced to arbitrate their claims
22 against Paramount does not have the burden to pay any arbitration costs. Therefore, the court finds 23 that the arbitration agreement at issue in this matter is not so “one-sided as to shock the 24 conscience” that it is substantively unconscionable. Davis, 485 F.3d at 1075.

25 Because the court finds that the arbitration agreement is not both procedurally and 26

1 substantively unconscionable, the court finds that the arbitration agreement is valid and 2 enforceable. Accordingly, pursuant to the FAA, the court shall grant Paramount's motion to 3 compel arbitration and stay this action pending completion of arbitration.

5 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that defendant's motion to compel binding arbitration and
6 stay the present action (Doc. #19) is GRANTED.

7 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the present action, case no. 2:11-cv-0007, is STAYED
8 pending further order of this court at completion of binding arbitration.

9 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that defendant shall file a notice with the court at the 10 initiation and close of arbitration proceedings, and provide the court with a copy of the final
11 arbitration order. The clerk of court is directed to CLOSE this action administratively pending
12 receipt of such notice.

13 IT IS SO ORDERED.

14 DATED this 18th day of April, 2011.
