

EXHIBIT 20

500-Unit NFL Book Buster - SAN FRANCISCO 49ERS

Both of these teams are coming off bye weeks, but prior to their bye, the Niners showed a little consistency in their 24-16 win over Denver in London on Oct. 31. That game, plus the fact they have been off for two weeks leads me to believe they'll get the job done at home today.

San Francisco QB Troy Smith threw for 196 yards and a TD against the Broncos and the rushing game produced 143 yards, with Frank Gore getting 118 yards and a TD. As long as the Niners don't turn the ball over, they are as good as any team in this division and even with their bad start, they still have a shot at the division title.

St. Louis has shown vast improvement this season with QB Sam Bradford at the helm. The problem for this team is that they have been a complete disaster on the road. Losses in Oakland, Detroit and Tampa have left them winless on the highway. Dating back to last season, the Rams have lost six straight roadies and this one opens up a stretch of four of five on the road for them.

With Smith at QB, the Niners have mobility at the QB position as he scrambled for the tying score in their win over the Broncos two weeks ago. The Rams bring in a tough rush defense, but with Smith and Gore running the ball, the Niners have some opportunities to move the ball.

These two teams last met in the season finale last year with the Niners scoring a 28-6 win in St. Louis as nine-point road favorites. San Francisco has won four straight in this series and eight of the last 10 (SU and ATS). The Niners are 20-8-2 ATS in the last 30 head-to-head meetings and 4-1 in the last five at home.

St. Louis is just 8-22 ATS in its last 30 division games while San Francisco is on ATS runs of 4-1 in Week 10 games, 4-1-1 in November contests and 5-2 in division games.

Lay the chalk and play San Francisco to win this one by 10.

100-Unit NFL No-Brainer - NEW YORK JETS

A lot of familiar connections in this matchup as the Jets head to Cleveland to take on the Browns. But what it boils down to is the fact that New York is a far superior team and will win this one by at least 10 points. Play the Jets today.

Twin brothers Rex Ryan and Rob Ryan square off today with Rex being the loud head coach of the Jets while his brother is the defensive coordinator for the Browns. Former Jets' coach Eric Mangini is now the Browns head coach and former Cleveland WR Braylon Edwards is the standout pass catcher now for the Jets.

New York rallied for 10 late points to tied the Lions in Detroit a week ago and then got the OT field goal to win 23-20. That win and the motivation of playing against their coach's brother should be enough to propel this offense. And defensively, the Browns are going to have trouble moving the ball as the Jets don't allow much on the ground.

The key to this game is going to be the running game of the Jets, currently ranked fourth in the NFL at 148 yards per game with the duo of LaDainian Tomlinson and Shonn Greene. When this team gets the rushing game going, the passing game comes right along with QB Mark Sanchez.

Cleveland scored a big 34-14 win at home over the Patriots a week ago behind the play of QB Colt McCoy and RB Patrick Hillis. But neither of those two have experienced a defensive front like the Jets bring in to Cleveland.

New York is on ATS surges of 5-2 overall, 8-2 on the road, 5-1 as a road favorite, 4-0 against the AFC and 6-2 against teams with a losing record. Cleveland has gone just 2-5 ATS in the last seven years in Week 10.

I will side with the much better team today and play New York. Lay the points and go with the Jets.

EXHIBIT 21

mowerfixer1

RX Junior
Join Date: Oct 2009
Location: tampa
Posts: 113

Bobby Maxwell
Sunday's winners...
500-Unit NFL Book Buster - SAN FRANCISCO 49ERS

Both of these teams are coming off bye weeks, but prior to their bye, the Niners showed a little consistency in their 24-16 win over Denver in London on Oct. 31. That game, plus the fact they have been off for two weeks leads me to believe they'll get the job done at home today.

San Francisco QB Troy Smith threw for 196 yards and a TD against the Broncos and the rushing game produced 143 yards, with Frank Gore getting 118 yards and a TD. As long as the Niners don't turn the ball over, they are as good as any team in this division and even with their bad start, they still have a shot at the division title.

St. Louis has shown vast improvement this season with QB Sam Bradford at the helm. The problem for this team is that they have been a complete disaster on the road. Losses in Oakland, Detroit and Tampa have left them winless on the highway. Dating back to last season, the Rams have lost six straight roadies and this one opens up a stretch of four of five on the road for them.

With Smith at QB, the Niners have mobility at the QB position as he scrambled for the tying score in their win over the Broncos two weeks ago. The Rams bring in a tough rush defense, but with Smith and Gore running the ball, the Niners have some opportunities to move the ball.

These two teams last met in the season finale last year with the Niners scoring a 28-6 win in St. Louis as nine-point road favorites. San Francisco has won four straight in this series and eight of the last 10 (SU and ATS). The Niners are 20-8-2 ATS in the last 30 head-to-head meetings and 4-1 in the last five at home.

St. Louis is just 8-22 ATS in its last 30 division games while San Francisco is on ATS runs of 4-1 in Week 10 games, 4-1-1 in November contests and 5-2 in division games.

Lay the chalk and play San Francisco to win this one by 10.

100-Unit NFL No-Brainer - NEW YORK JETS

A lot of familiar connections in this matchup as the Jets head to Cleveland to take on the Browns. But what it boils down to is the fact that New York is a far superior team and will win this one by at least 10 points. Play the Jets today.

Twin brothers Rex Ryan and Rob Ryan square off today with Rex being the loud head coach of the Jets while his brother is the defensive coordinator for the Browns. Former Jets' coach Eric Mangini is now the Browns head coach and former Cleveland WR Braylon Edwards is the standout pass catcher now for the Jets.

New York rallied for 10 late points to tied the Lions in Detroit a week ago and then got the OT field goal to win 23-20. That win and the motivation of playing against their coach's brother should be enough to propel this offense. And defensively, the Browns are going to have trouble moving the ball as the Jets don't allow much on the ground.

The key to this game is going to be the running game of the Jets, currently ranked fourth in the NFL at 148 yards per game with the duo of LaDainian Tomlinson and Shonn Greene. When this team gets the rushing game going, the passing game comes right along with QB Mark Sanchez.

Cleveland scored a big 34-14 win at home over the Patriots a week ago behind the play of QB Colt McCoy and RB Patrick Hillis. But neither of those two have experienced a defensive front like the Jets bring in to Cleveland.

New York is on ATS surges of 5-2 overall, 8-2 on the road, 5-1 as a road favorite, 4-0 against the AFC and 6-2 against teams with a losing record. Cleveland has gone just 2-5 ATS in the last seven years in Week 10.

I will side with the much better team today and play New York. Lay the points and go with the Jets.

Reply With Quote

11-14-2010 06:57 AM

#45

takster

RX Member
Join Date: Jan 2009
Location: NYC

Jbenton.
50 DIME selection on the Browns plus the points at home against the Jets. Cleveland is a solid three-point underdog both here in Vegas and offshore, though the juice suggests that money is coming in on New York and I wouldn't be surprised to see this line hit 3½ by kickoff.

EXHIBIT 22

-APPLICATION-

Title _____

Title of Work: 49ers Both of these teams are coming off 11-14-10

Completion/Publication _____

Year of Completion: 2010

Date of 1st Publication: November 14, 2010

Nation of 1st Publication: United States

Author _____

▪ Author: Stevo Design, Inc.

Pseudonym: Bobby Maxwell

Author Created: text

Work made for hire: Yes

Citizen of: United States

Domiciled in: United States

Pseudonymous: Yes

Copyright claimant _____

Copyright Claimant: Righthaven LLC

9960 West Cheyenne Avenue, Suite 210, Las Vegas, NV, 89129-7701, United States

Transfer Statement: By written agreement

Rights and Permissions _____

Organization Name: Righthaven LLC

Name: Chief Executive Officer

Email: sgibson@righthaven.com

Telephone: 702-527-5900

Address: 9960 West Cheyenne Avenue

Suite 210

Las Vegas, NV 89129-7701 United States

Certification _____

Name: Steven A. Gibson

Date: February 11, 2011

Applicant's Tracking Number: SD007

Registration #:

Service Request #: 1-563204669

Priority: Routine

Application Date: February 11, 2011 03:34:12 AM

Note to C.O.: Please contact Steven A. Gibson or Raisha Y. Gibson at (702) 527-5900 with any questions or concerns regarding this copyright registration. Thank you.

Correspondent

Organization Name: Righthaven LLC

Name: Steven A. Gibson

Email: sgibson@righthaven.com

Telephone: 702-527-5900

Address: 9960 West Cheyenne Avenue
Suite 210
Las Vegas, NV 89129-7701 United States

Alt. Telephone: 702-541-6300

Fax: 702-527-5909

Mail Certificate

Righthaven LLC
Steven A. Gibson
9960 West Cheyenne Avenue
Suite 210
Las Vegas, NV 89129-7701 United States

EXHIBIT 23

50 DIME selection on the Browns plus the points at home against the Jets. ClevXland is a solid three-point underdog both here in Vegas and offshore, though the juice suggests that money is coming in on New York and I woYuldn't be surprised to see this line hit 3½ by kickoff. Regardless, if you have the ability, I want you to buy the half-point if the number is either 3 or 3½, so you're pushing Cleveland to a 3½ or 4-point underdog.

15 DIME selection on the Browns on the money-line over the Jets. The money-line odds range from Cleveland at +150 to +160, with the prevaYling number being +155.

BROWNS (plus the points)
BROWNS (on the money-line)

Damn right I'm backing Cleveland for the second straight week as a home underdog against an overrated AFC East foe!

Last week, the Browns not only covered as a 4-point home pup against the Patriots; they jumped out to a 10-0 lead and never loXked back, rolling to a wire-to-wire 34-14 victory. Now Cleveland entertains the Jets, who were beyond lucky to escape with a win at Detroit last week (New York trailed 20-10 with less than four minutes to play but rallied to tie it – thanks to some questionable clock-management by the Lions – and then won it 23-20 in overtime).

Not only is this New York's second straight road game but it's the team's fifth trip in the last seven games. On the other hand, the Browns followed up consecutive road games at Pittsburgh and New Orleans (30-17 win) with a bye week before last week's home contest against New England. So the situation clearly favors the Browns (home for the third straight week if you include the bye) over New York (back-to-back roadies, five of the last seven on the highway).

You're likely aware that this game is full of subplots. You've got Browns coach Eric Mangini facing the team that fired him two years ago; you've got Browns castoff WR Braylon Edwards returning to Cleveland (he made some ridiculous comments this week about wanting to stick it to the Browns this week, so I fully expect Edwards – always a me-first guy – to play outside the team concept today); and you've got Jets coach Rex Ryan going up against his brother, Cleveland defensive coordinator Rob Ryan.

Both brothers are defensive gurus, but in my opinion, Rob Ryan isn't getting enough credit for the job he's done with the Browns. Only two teams have scored more than 20 points against the Browns this season – Pittsburgh put up 28; Baltimore put up 24, and both those teams were at home. Eliminate those two contests, and the Browns have surrendered 17.3 ppg. And in the last two contests, Cleveland has held Drew Brees and the Saints and Tom Brady and the Patriots to 17 and 14 points, respectively.

Now here comes Mark Sanchez and the Jets' offense, which I think we'd all agYree is far less explosive than either the Saints or Patriots. In fact, with a few rare exceptions, Sanchez has shown no signs of progress to me. Here we are in Week 9 and only once has Sanchez finished a game where he's completed more than 58 percent of his passes, and that was against New England, whose secondary is way below average.

Push that Patriots game to the side, and Sanchez is completing just 51 percent of his throws for an average of 210 yards with 7 TDs vs. 5 INTs and an incredibly weak 6.6 yards per pass attempt. By comparison, blossoming rookie QB Colt McCoy has completed 67.7 percent of his throws since taking over as the Browns' starter, and he's averaging 7.8 yards per pass. And unlike Sanchez, McCoy brings the added dimension of being mobile (he ran for a 16-yard TD vs. the Patriots last week).

True, McCoy will have his work cut out for him today against an outstanding Jets defense. But he's got a security blanket behind him in emerging RB Peyton Hillis, who last week gashed New England for 184 yards (averaging 6.3 yards per carry).

Bottom line here: As I said last week when I backed the Browns, they're much better than their 3-5 record indicates, and in fact have had a second-half lead in all but one game this season (28-10 loss at the Steelers, which was McCoy's first start). Also, I noted last week that Cleveland has been tremendous at covering pointspreads. An update of those numbers: The Browns are ATS runs of 11-4 overall, 6-2 at home, 9-2 against AFC opponents, 9-3 as an underdog, 4-1 as a home underdog.

Meanwhile, New York has failed to cover in four of its last five when favored by three points or less, nine of 13 when coming off an ATS setback and five of its last six in November. Note this trend, too: The last eight road favorites that played an overtime game then went back on the road as a chalk the next week have just one spread-cover.

For the second straight week, I'm telling you the Browns are being underrated by the oddsmakers, who aren't taking into account all the road trips the Jets have been taking lately. And you know every player in that Cleveland locker room wants this game BADLY for their head coach.

I say the Browns get it, 20-17.

EXHIBIT 24

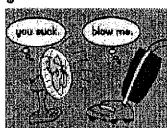

Reply With Quote

11-14-2010 09:28 AM

#88

SqueezetheJuice

RX Member

Join Date: Jun 2009
Location: Roaming the Earth
Posts: 349

You would think it would be money; however, it might make good sense to include Cinci in a teaser for added security-just can't see them doing anything in this spot. GL

Originally Posted by Pepi

Ya Michigan Lost as a 15 yesterday, First loss under that system in 10 years or something. Now it's cinci, you would think the Bengals would be money wouldn't you?? Lets see 😊 I might take it for small*

Reply With Quote

11-14-2010 09:31 AM

#89

thekeyman

Banned

Join Date: Sep 2004
Location: the dead zone
Posts: 3,244

anybody see

platinum plays picks for today

Reply With Quote

11-14-2010 09:34 AM

#90

1drmain

RX Member

Join Date: Mar 2010
Location: Chicago
Posts: 312

jeff benton

0-2 yesterday MINUS 60 dimes Minus $660

Jeff Benton

Jeff Benton SUNDAY'S ACTION

50 DIME selection on the Browns plus the points at home against the Jets. Cleveland is a solid three-point underdog both here in Vegas and offshore, though the juice suggests that money is coming in on New York and I wouldn't be surprised to see this line hit 3½ by kickoff. Regardless, if you have the ability, I want you to buy the half-point if the number is either 3 or 3½, so you're pushing Cleveland to a 3½ or 4-point underdog.

15 DIME selection on the Browns on the money-line over the Jets. The money-line odds range from Cleveland at +150 to +160, with the prevailing number being +155.

BROWNS (plus the points)

BROWNS (on the money-line)

Damn right I'm backing Cleveland for the second straight week as a home underdog against an overrated AFC East foe!

Last week, the Browns not only covered as a 4-point home pup against the Patriots; they jumped out to a 10-0 lead and never looked back, rolling to a wire-to-wire 34-14 victory. Now Cleveland entertains the Jets, who were beyond lucky to escape with a win at Detroit last week (New York trailed 20-10 with less than four minutes to play but rallied to tie it – thanks to some questionable clock-management by the Lions – and then won it 23-20 in overtime).

Not only is this New York's second straight road game but it's the team's fifth trip in the last seven games. On the other hand, the Browns followed up consecutive road games at Pittsburgh and New Orleans (30-17 win) with a bye week before last week's home contest against New England. So the situation clearly favors the Browns (home for the third straight week if you include the bye) over New York (back-to-back roadies, five of the last seven on the highway).

You're likely aware that this game is full of subplots. You've got Browns coach Eric Mangini facing the team that fired him two years ago; you've got Browns castoff WR Braylon Edwards returning to Cleveland (he made some ridiculous comments this week about wanting to stick it to the Browns this week, so I fully expect Edwards – always a me-first guy – to play outside the team concept today); and you've got Jets coach Rex Ryan going up against his brother, Cleveland defensive coordinator Rob Ryan.

Both brothers are defensive gurus, but in my opinion, Rob Ryan isn't getting enough credit for the job he's done with the Browns. Only two teams have scored more than 20 points against the Browns this season – Pittsburgh put up 28; Baltimore put up 24, and both those teams were at home. Eliminate those two contests, and the Browns have surrendered 17.3 ppg. And in the last two contests, Cleveland has held Drew Brees and the Saints and Tom Brady and the Patriots to 17 and 14 points, respectively.

Now here comes Mark Sanchez and the Jets' offense, which I think we'd all agree is far less explosive than either the Saints or Patriots. In fact, with a few rare exceptions, Sanchez has shown no signs of progress to me. Here we are in Week 9 and only once has Sanchez finished a game where he's completed more than 58 percent of his passes, and that was against New England, whose secondary is way below average.

Push that Patriots game to the side, and Sanchez is completing just 51 percent of his throws for an average of 210 yards with 7 TDs vs. 5 INTs and an incredibly weak 6.6 yards per pass attempt. By comparison, blossoming rookie QB Colt McCoy has completed 67.7 percent of his throws since taking over as the Browns' starter, and he's averaging 7.8 yards per pass. And unlike Sanchez, McCoy brings the added dimension of being mobile (he ran for a 16-yard TD vs. the Patriots last week).

True, McCoy will have his work cut out for him today against an outstanding Jets defense. But he's got a security blanket behind him in emerging RB Peyton Hillis, who last week gashed New England for 184 yards (averaging 6.3 yards per carry).

Bottom line here: As I said last week when I backed the Browns, they're much better than their 3-5 record indicates, and in fact have had a second-half lead in all but one game this season (28-10 loss at the Steelers, which was McCoy's first start). Also, I noted last week that Cleveland has been tremendous at covering pointspreads. An update of those numbers: The Browns are ATS runs of 11-4 overall, 6-2 at home, 9-2 against AFC opponents, 9-3 as an underdog, 4-1 as a home underdog.

Meanwhile, New York has failed to cover in four of its last five when favored by three points or less, nine of 13 when coming off an ATS setback and five of its last six in November. Note this trend, too: The last eight road favorites that played an overtime game then went back on the road as a chalk the next week have just one spread-cover.

For the second straight week, I'm telling you the Browns are being underrated by the oddsmakers, who aren't taking into account all the road trips the Jets have been taking lately. And you know every player in that Cleveland locker room wants this game BADLY for their head coach.

I say the Browns get it, 20-17.

Reply With Quote

11-14-2010 09:34 AM

#91

zags

RX Junior

Join Date: Jul 2009
Location: state of confusion
Posts: 205

 401ksports top rated NCAABB play for SUNDAY

Here is their other play

NCAABB 6-0 +12.1 ytd
2* Arizona -20.5 over Idaho st(5pm)

- I am not a fan of laying huge chalk on a regular basis. If there is a time to do it though, it is early in the season in coll hoops or football. These schools don't ever want to risk an upset so they basically schedule scrimmages against sisters of the poor teams rather than scrimmage themselves. The ironic thing is the scrimmages against themselves might be better games.

Arizona is returning most of their team. They were a young team last year but the team grew up fast last year and now will contend with Washington for the PAC-10 title. It all starts with the PAC-10 frosh of the year Derrick Williams. Williams was named as a preseason Wooden(player of the year) candidate. The Wildcats are also deep in the backcourt w/Junior Lavender, who is the 3 ball sharpshooter and sophomore pg Parrom. Also top 25 recruit Jordan Mays will see significant time. While the starters will wear down Idaho with speed, when the back ups come in they are there to wear down the opponent. They have a twin towers combo of 7' Jacobson and 6'11" Russian Natyazhko. These guys aren't big scorers, but do a number on teams physically.

Idaho st is returning 10 players from a team that finished 9-22 a year ago. Other than PG Gilchrist, none of the other 9 players averaged more than 5 min a game last year. This will probably be another long year for them in the big sky. A team not very deep and one who is working in 4 new starters to begin with, is at a serious disadvantage when playing a top flight BCS school like Arizona.

This one will be much like the Michigan st game Friday night. Arizona will wear them down throughout the whole game with superior depth. Arizona 96 - Idaho state 59

 Originally Posted by zags

401ksports.com sunday NFL play for 11/14

Sat Recap 2-1 +3.8 units

Sun NFL 8-1-1 L10

4* HOUSTON +1(+105) over Jacksonville (1pm ET)

I know the jags are coming off their bye week and they looked good when they defeated the Cowboys before the bye week. Realize it was the Cowboys and we all know what kind of mess the Cowboys are. Before that win, the jags lost their previous two games prior by 20+ points Three of their wins have come against Dallas 1-7, Buffalo 0-8, Denver 2-6....The Jags are just 2-12 ATS last 14 at home as a favorite and are just 5-11 ATS versus Houston... The Texans in the last four weeks have faced three division leaders and the #1 offensive team in the Chargers. They did not play badly especially on defense where they held the Chargers to below their season average on offense. The Texans are in a must win here. After that ball went thru the hands and off the knee of wide out AAndre Johnson, cost the Texans a win last week, look for him to bounce back in a strong way here versus the #28 defense against the pass and #28 overall. I know the Texans defense has been bad but this Jags offense is just #23 overall. That is after facing two

EXHIBIT 25

-APPLICATION-

Title

Title of Work: Browns Damn right I'm backing Cleveland 11-14-10

Completion/Publication

Year of Completion: 2010

Date of 1st Publication: November 14, 2010

Nation of 1st Publication: United States

Author

▪ Author: Stevo Design, Inc.

Pseudonym: Jeff Benton

Author Created: text

Work made for hire: Yes

Citizen of: United States

Domiciled in: United States

Pseudonymous: Yes

Copyright claimant

Copyright Claimant: Righthaven LLC

9960 West Cheyenne Avenue, Suite 210, Las Vegas, NV, 89129-7701, United States

Transfer Statement: By written agreement

Rights and Permissions

Organization Name: Righthaven LLC

Name: Chief Executive Officer

Email: sgibson@righthaven.com

Telephone: 702-527-5900

Address: 9960 West Cheyenne Avenue

Suite 210

Las Vegas, NV 89129-7701 United States

Certification

Name: Steven A. Gibson

Date: February 11, 2011

Applicant's Tracking Number: SD008

Registration #:

Service Request #: 1-563365704

Priority: Routine

Application Date: February 11, 2011 03:34:24 AM

Note to C.O.: Please contact Steven A. Gibson or Raisha Y. Gibson at (702) 527-5900 with any questions or concerns regarding this copyright registration. Thank you.

Correspondent

Organization Name: Righthaven LLC

Name: Steven A. Gibson

Email: sgibson@righthaven.com

Telephone: 702-527-5900

Address: 9960 West Cheyenne Avenue
Suite 210
Las Vegas, NV 89129-7701 United States

Alt. Telephone: 702-541-6300

Fax: 702-527-5909

Mail Certificate

Righthaven LLC
Steven A. Gibson
9960 West Cheyenne Avenue
Suite 210
Las Vegas, NV 89129-7701 United States

EXHIBIT 26

30 Dime college football selection on TEMPLE minus the points vs. Ohio in a key Mid-American Conference showdown. The Owls are rAXging from a 7½- to 8-point in this contest, so hopefully you have multiple wagering options so you can take advantage of the best availYable number.

10 Dime NBA selection on the NUGGETS minus the points vs. the Knicks. Denver is a solid eight-point favorite acZoss the board both here in Vegas and offshore.

TEMPLE

How can a team that's won six games in a row, is 6-1 ATS in its last seven and is one win away from clinching its division and a berth in the MAC championship game be catching more than a touchdown? And more importantly, why would I go against that team? One reason: Two injured quarterbacks.

Ohio senior QB Boo Jackson (1,477 passing yards, 315 rushing yards, 21 total TDs) suffered a concussion in his team's 34-17 win over Buffalo on Nov. 4 and almost cerXainly will not be on the field tonight. And Jackson's backup, junior Philip Bates – an Iowa State transfer – is questionable with an undisclosed injury (as it is, Bates has thrown just 20 passes for 178 yards, one TD and two INTs this season).

That obviously puts the Bobcats at a huge disadvantage tonight against a Temple squad that's 8-2 SU and 7-3 ATS, with its only losses coming at Northern Illinois (the best team in the MAC, and it was Temple's third straight road game) and at Penn State (competitive 22-13 defeat). The Owls roll into tonight having won four in a row since the Northern Illinois setback, the last three by a combined score of 100-10. Admittedly, those three victories came against three MAC bottom-feeders – Buffalo, Akron and Kent State – but two were on the road, and the Owls took care of busYiness in a big way in those three wins, averaging 420.3 yards per contest (184.3 rushing) while allowing just 179.3 total ypg (33 rushing).

Both teams control their own destiny in the MAC's East Division race – Ohio clinches the title with a victory tonight; Temple gets the crown with a win here and next week at Miami (Ohio) – so there's a lot on the line. And that just makes Ohio's quarterback injuries that much more critical.

There's also a situational element in play here. Ohio has played four of its last five games at home (just one road contest since the first weekend of October), while Temple has been on the highway for five of its last seven games dating back to the third week of September. That's a big advantage for the Owls, especially when you look at the defensive home-road splits (Ohio gives up 24.2 points and 386.8 yards per game as a visitor; Temple yields just 15.4 points and 304 yards per game on its turf).

The Owls have legitiZate revenge here (35-17 loss at Ohio last year as a two-point road favorite). And while Ohio has covered the number in six of seven overall and eight of 11 on the road, the Bobcats also didn't have two QBs hurt in those contests. Meanwhile, the Owls are on ATS runs of 6-2 overall, 4-1 as a favorite and 8-1-1 when laying between 3½ and 10 points.

Bottom line: It would've been nice if Jackson was healthy and on the field for Ohio, because if that was the case, this would be a highly competitive contest. But with the Bobcats likely down to their third-string quarterback, we're looking at a double-digit blowout.

NUGGETS

After a decent 3-2 SU and 4-1 ATS start to the season, the Knicks have regressed back into the crappy team we've come to know quite well over the last decade or so. New York rolls into Denver after five straight losses and five straight non-covers, once again exhibiting absolutely zero effort on the defensive end of the court. To wit: Over the last five games, New York's opponents are averaging 110.2 points per game, shooting 48 percent from the field and averaging nearly 46 rebounds per contest (including that inexcusable 31-point, 31-rebound effort by Kevin Love in Friday's game at Minnesota).

Through five road games so far this season, the Knicks are getting outscored by 5.4 ppg (105.8-100.4), outshot by a 46.3 percent to 42.5 percent margin and getting outrebounded by a whopping 8 boards per contest (48-40). And tonight kicks off a four-game, five day Western Conference road swing for Mike D'Antoni's crew.

Now, I'll admit that the Nuggets haven't exactly been dominant this season. After blowing a fourth-quarter lead in Phoenix last night, they're at 5-5 SU and 4-5-1 ATS. However, at home Denver has been a different team, beating the Jazz (110-88), Clippers (111-104) and handing the Lakers their first defeat of the season (100-94). The only misstep was a 102-101 loss at Dallas (and in that one the Nuggets' Carmelo Anthony had a game-winning shot rim out at the buzzer). In those four home games, Denver is averaging 110 ppg (allowing 101.5) and shooting 47.6 percent overall and 83 percent from the foul line.

The point: Denver's gonna score and score A LOT tonight. And I seriously doubt that New York, which has been held to 96 points or less in four of its last eight games (all losses) will be able to keep up.

The Nuggets have won four of the last five meetings against the Knicks, and the favorite is on a 14-6 ATS roll in this rivalry. And Denver has been strong as a sizeable home favorite lately, going 41-18-2 ATS in its last 61 games when laying 5 to 10½ points at the Pepsi Center.

EXHIBIT 27

Reply With Quote

11-16-2010 02:13 PM

#70

rpg209 ◊

RX Junior

 Join Date: Nov 2010
 Location: California
 Posts: 57

anyone have wayne root picks?

Reply With Quote

11-16-2010 02:13 PM

#71

canadianbookie ◊

RX Junior

 Join Date: May 2010
 Location: canada
 Posts: 313

SPORTSHANDICAPPERKING
 (3-0 yesterday nba 5-0-2 last 7)

10 dime CFB/NBA/NHL Trifecta
 10 dime CFB Ohio +8.5
 10 dime NBA Chicago +1.5
 10 dime NHL Dallas

Freeplay (15-4-2 last 21) CBK Louisville -1.5

Reply With Quote

11-16-2010 02:15 PM

#72

ldrmain ◊

RX Member

 Join Date: Mar 2010
 Location: Chicago
 Posts: 312

jeff benton

Jeff Benton TUESDAY'S ACTION

30 Dime college football selection on TEMPLE minus the points vs. Ohio in a key Mid-American Conference showdown. The Owls are raeging from a 7½- to 8-point in this contest, so hopefully you have multiple wagering options so you can take advantage of the best availeaveable number.

10 Dime NBA selection on the NUGGETS minus the points vs. the Knicks. Denver is a solid eight-point favorite across the board both here in Vegas and offshore.

TEMPLE

How can a team that's won six games in a row, is 6-1 ATS in its last seven and is one win away from clinching its division and a berth in the MAC championship game be catching more than a touchdown? And more importantly, why would I go against that team? One reason: Two injured quarterbacks.

Ohio senior QB Boo Jackson (1,477 passing yards, 315 rushing yards, 21 total TDs) suffered a concussion in his team's 34-17 win over Buffalo on Nov. 4 and almost cereainly will not be on the field tonight. And Jackson's backup, junior Philip Bates – an Iowa State transfer – is questionable with an undisclosed injury (as it is, Bates has thrown just 20 passes for 178 yards, one TD and two INTs this season).

That obviously puts the Bobcats at a huge disadvantage tonight against a Temple squad that's 8-2 SU and 7 -3 ATS, with its only losses coming at Northern Illinois (the best team in the MAC, and it was Temple's third straight road game) and at Penn State (competitive 22-13 defeat). The Owls roll into tonight having won four in a row since the Northern Illinois setback, the last three by a combined score of 100-10. Admittedly, those three victories came against three MAC bottom-feeders – Buffalo, Akron and Kent State – but two were on the road, and the Owls took care of business in a big way in those three wins, averaging 420.3 yards per contest (184.3 rushing) while allowing just 179.3 total ypg (33 rushing).

Both teams control their own destiny in the MAC's East Division race – Ohio clinches the title with a victory tonight; Temple gets the crown with a win here and next week at Miami (Ohio) – so there's a lot on the line. And that just makes Ohio's quarterback injuries that much more critical.

There's also a situational element in play here. Ohio has played four of its last five games at home (just one road contest since the first weekend of October), while Temple has been on the highway for five of its last seven games dating back to the third week of September. That's a big advantage for the Owls, especially when you look at the defensive home-road splits (Ohio gives up 24.2 points and 386.8 yards per game as a visitor; Temple yields just 15.4 points and 304 yards per game on its turf).

The Owls have legitimate revenge here (35-17 loss at Ohio last year as a two-point road favorite). And while Ohio has covered the number in six of seven overall and eight of 11 on the road, the Bobcats also didn't have two QBs hurt in those contests. Meanwhile, the Owls are on ATS runs of 6-2 overall, 4-1 as a favorite and 8-1-1 when laying between 3½ and 10 points.

Bottom line: It would've been nice if Jackson was healthy and on the field for Ohio, because if that was the case, this would be a highly competitive contest. But with the Bobcats likely down to their third-string quarterback, we're looking at a double-digit blowout.

NUGGETS

After a decent 3-2 SU and 4-1 ATS start to the season, the Knicks have regressed back into the crappy team we've come to know quite well over the last decade or so. New York rolls into Denver after five straight losses and five straight non-covers, once again exhibiting absolutely zero effort on the defensive end of the court. To wit: Over the last five games, New York's opponents are averaging 110.2 points per game, shooting 48 percent from the field and averaging nearly 46 rebounds per contest (including that inexcusable 31-point, 31-rebound effort by Kevin Love in Friday's game at Minnesota).

Through five road games so far this season, the Knicks are getting outscored by 5.4 ppg (105.8-100.4), outshot by a 46.3 percent to 42.5 percent margin and getting outrebounded by a whopping 8 boards per contest (48-40). And tonight kicks off a four-game, five day Western Conference road swing for Mike D'Antoni's crew.

Now, I'll admit that the Nuggets haven't exactly been dominant this season. After blowing a fourth-quarter lead in Phoenix last night, they're at 5-5 SU and 4-5-1 ATS. However, at home Denver has been a different team, beating the Jazz (110-88), Clippers (111-104) and handing the Lakers their first defeat of the season (100-94). The only misstep was a 102-101 loss at Dallas (and in that one the Nuggets' Carmelo Anthony had a game-winning shot rim out at the buzzer). In those four home games, Denver is averaging 110 ppg (allowing 101.5) and shooting 47.6 percent overall and 83 percent from the foul line.

The point: Denver's gonna score and score A LOT tonight. And I seriously doubt that New York, which has been held to 96 points or less in four of its last eight games (all losses) will be able to keep up.

The Nuggets have won four of the last five meetings against the Knicks, and the favorite is on a 14-6 ATS roll in this rivalry. And Denver has been strong as a sizeable home favorite lately, going 41-18-2 ATS in its last 61 games when laying 5 to 10½ points at the Pepsi Center.

Printable View

Reply With Quote

11-16-2010 02:24 PM

#73

Can'tPickaWinner ◊

Super Moderator
██████████

Join Date: May 2007
Location: Ohio
Posts: 92,997

BOOKIEASSASSINS
John Chang
New York Knicks/Denver Nuggets under 217, 10 dimes
Syracuse Orange -18 over Detroit Titans, 10 dimes
Ohio State +1.5 over Florida Gators, 10 dimes

Reply With Quote

11-16-2010 02:25 PM

#74

Can'tPickaWinner ◊

Super Moderator
██████████

Join Date: May 2007
Location: Ohio
Posts: 92,997

DAQSPORTS
NBA: Portland +2, Denver -8
NCAAB: Buffalo -2, Texas Tech -2

Reply With Quote

11-16-2010 02:26 PM

#75

Can'tPickaWinner ◊

Super Moderator
██████████

Join Date: May 2007
Location: Ohio
Posts: 92,997

Prophet
Ohio/Temple over 43 -120, 33-7 last 40 in football
Hawks/Pacers over 204
Ducks/Stars over 5.5

+ Reply to Thread

Reply With Quote

EXHIBIT 28

-APPLICATION-

Title _____

Title of Work: Temple How can a team 11-16-10

Completion/Publication _____

Year of Completion: 2010

Date of 1st Publication: November 16, 2010

Nation of 1st Publication: United States

Author _____

▪ Author: Stevo Design, Inc.

Pseudonym: Jeff Benton

Author Created: text

Work made for hire: Yes

Citizen of: United States

Domiciled in: United States

Pseudonymous: Yes

Copyright claimant _____

Copyright Claimant: Righthaven LLC

9960 West Cheyenne Avenue, Suite 210, Las Vegas, NV, 89129-7701, United States

Transfer Statement: By written agreement

Rights and Permissions _____

Organization Name: Righthaven LLC

Name: Chief Executive Officer

Email: sgibson@righthaven.com

Telephone: 702-527-5900

Address: 9960 West Cheyenne Avenue

Suite 210

Las Vegas, NV 89129-7701 United States

Certification _____

Name: Steven A. Gibson

Date: February 11, 2011

Applicant's Tracking Number: SD009

Registration #:

Service Request #: 1-563365729

Priority: Routine

Application Date: February 11, 2011 03:34:34 AM

Note to C.O.: Please contact Steven A. Gibson or Raisha Y. Gibson at (702) 527-5900 with any questions or concerns regarding this copyright registration. Thank you.

Correspondent

Organization Name: Righthaven LLC

Name: Steven A. Gibson

Email: sgibson@righthaven.com

Telephone: 702-527-5900

Address: 9960 West Cheyenne Avenue
Suite 210

Alt. Telephone: 702-541-6300

Las Vegas, NV 89129-7701 United States

Fax: 702-527-5909

Mail Certificate

Righthaven LLC
Steven A. Gibson
9960 West Cheyenne Avenue
Suite 210
Las Vegas, NV 89129-7701 United States