

1 the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Defendants are entitled to judgment as a matter of 2 law with respect to Plaintiff's remaining claims for failure to warn, design defect, 3 negligence, breach of implied warranty, and deceptive trade practices. A hearing was 4 conducted on Defendant's Motion on April 25, 2013, following which the Parties filed 5 supplemental briefs (Docs. #139 & #142).

6 Defendants argue Plaintiff's failure-to-warn claims are without merit because 7 Defendant specifically warned of the potential for complications from inflammation and 8 adhesions as well as the chronic pain which could result from utilization of the 3DMax 9 Mesh. Defendants argue that the adequacy of their warnings is established as a matter of 10 law because Plaintiff has offered no expert, or other evidence that the warnings provided
11 were not adequate. Moreover, Defendants insist Plaintiff's failure-to-warn claim fails 12 because Plaintiff has offered no evidence to show that any inadequate warnings caused 13 Plaintiff's alleged injuries.

14 Defendants argue they are entitled to summary judgment on Plaintiff's design 15 defect claim, because Plaintiff's designated expert offers no opinion on the design of the 16 3DMax Mesh, nor does Plaintiff's expert opine that the design of the Mesh renders it
17 unreasonably dangerous. Additionally, Defendants assert that Plaintiff has offered no
18 evidence that any change in design of the 3DMax Mesh would have prevented the injuries
19 allegedly sustained by Plaintiff. Hence, any injuries claimed by Plaintiff could not be 20 attributable to the particular design of the 3DMax Mesh in question.

21 Defendants argue they are entitled to summary judgment on Plaintiff's negligence
22 and breach of implied warranty claims because Plaintiff has failed to offer evidence of a 23 causal connection between Plaintiff's alleged injuries and any representation, warranty, or 24 breach of duty by Defendants.

25 Finally, Defendants argue they are entitled to summary judgment on Plaintiff's 26 deceptive trade practices claim under the Nevada Consumer Protection Act because

1 Defendants complied with all applicable governmental regulations, and also because 2 Plaintiff and his surgeon admit that neither relied on any marketing, advertising, labeling, or 3 other material from Defendants prior to Plaintiff's initial hernia repair surgery.

4 Plaintiff rejects each of Defendants' arguments above and contends he has 5 marshaled substantial evidence to support all of his claims, and at a minimum, enough 6 evidence to create at least genuine issues of material fact as to each of them.

7 As to Plaintiff's failure-to-warn claims, Plaintiff correctly states that 8 manufactures who distribute products in Nevada are required to communicate to consumers
9 the hazards associated with their products which are not genuinely known. General
10 Electric Co. v. Bush, 88 Nev. 360, 365, 498 P.2d 366 (1972). However, the Court finds 11 Plaintiff has failed to cite to evidence which that the warnings which accompanied the 12 3DMax Mesh surgically implanted in Plaintiff were inadequate. Even to the extent Plaintiff 13 were permitted to rely on the unsworn expert report of Dr. Kevin Petersen, and it is not at 14 all clear that he can do so, Dr. Petersen testified that he was not offering expert opinion
15 regarding the adequacy of the warnings, and that he had never even reviewed the warnings
16 that accompanied the 3DMax Mesh in question. Additionally, Plaintiff has offered no
17 evidence that Dr. Gabriel, the surgeon who inserted the 3DMax Mesh into Plaintiff ever 18 reviewed the warnings that accompanied the product. As a result, Plaintiff has failed to 19 sustain his burden of showing the existence of genuine issues of material fact with respect
20 to his failure-to-warn claim, and Defendants are entitled to summary judgment.

21 Plaintiff's design defect claim is similarly problematic. In his deposition 22 testimony, Plaintiff's proposed medical expert, Dr. Petersen, concedes that he is not 23 qualified to offer expert medical device design testimony. Neither does Plaintiff submit any 24 evidence to show that the design of the 3DMax Mesh in question was the legal cause of the 25 injuries alleged by Plaintiff. Neither is the Court swayed by Plaintiff's argument that the 26 testimony of Dr. Petersen to the effect that Plaintiff's hernia repair could have been

1 accomplished without use of the 3DMax Mesh. The fact that an alternative method of 2 surgical hernia repair was potentially available does not supports Plaintiff' design defect
3 claim. As argued by Defendants, non-mesh repair is not an alternative design and does not 4 meet Plaintiff's burden to support this particular claim.

5 The Court finds Plaintiff's claim for negligence must fail because Plaintiff has 6 offered no sufficient evidence that the design of the 3DMax Mesh fell below the 7 appropriate standard of care and further because Defendants have come forward with 8 affirmative expert testimony that they acted as a reasonably prudent medical device 9 manufacturer.

10 Plaintiff's implied warranty claim fails because Plaintiff has not presented 11 evidence of proximate cause. Indeed the evidence shows that Dr. Gabriel reviewed no 12 warnings which accompanied the 3DMax Mesh product at all, and there is no evidence that 13 Dr. Gabriel would have done anything differently had the warnings accompanying 14 Defendants' product been different.

15 Lastly, Defendants' Deceptive Trade Practices Act claim fails because Plaintiff 16 cannot prove justifiable reliance on any alleged deceptive or false representation on the part 17 of Defendants. In fact, the record supports Defendants' position that neither Dr. Gabriel 18 nor Plaintiff relied on any marketing, advertising, labeling, or other materials from 19 Defendants prior to the implant surgery.

20 Finally, for the reasons set forth by Defendant's in their Response to Plaintiff's 21 Sur-reply (Doc. # 142), the arguments and evidence offered in Plaintiff's Sur-reply (Doc.
22 # 139) do not alter the Court's conclusion that Defendant's are entitled to Summary
23 Judgment on each of Plaintiff's remaining claims.
