

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

* * *

CHENTILE GOODMAN,

Plaintiff,

v.

LAS VEGAS METROPOLITAN POLICE
DEPARTMENT, et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. 2:11-cv-01447-MMD-CWH

ORDER

(Plf.'s Motion for Reconsideration
– dkt. no. 46)

Before this Court is Plaintiff's Motion for Reconsideration of Decision and Order Granting Nevada Property 1, LLC's Motion to Dismiss, or Alternatively, for Certification Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b). (Dkt. no. 46.) For the reasons discussed below, the Court grants Plaintiff's Motion.

I. BACKGROUND

The Court discussed the relevant factual background of this case in its May 14, 2012, Order, and does not repeat it here. (See dkt. no. 45.) The Order dismissed all claims against Defendant Nevada Property 1, LLC d/b/a the Cosmopolitan of Las Vegas ("Cosmopolitan") with prejudice. (Id.) On May 29, 2012, Plaintiff brought this Motion to Reconsider, arguing that the Court misapplied the good faith defense that Cosmopolitan sought as its basis for dismissing Plaintiff's claims, and that a newly decided Supreme Court case altered the law with respect to the application of this defense.

1 After filing its Motion, the Court also granted Plaintiff's Motion to Amend (see dkt.
2 no. 49), and Plaintiff thereafter filed its Amended Complaint (dkt. no. 50). Though the
3 Amended Complaint alleges various claims against Cosmopolitan, the Court's May 14,
4 2012, Order dismissed those claims. While Cosmopolitan has been dismissed from this
5 suit pending decision on this Motion, this Order vacates the dismissal of two of Plaintiff's
6 claims against Cosmopolitan.

7 II. LEGAL STANDARD

8 Although not mentioned in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a motion to 9 reconsider a final appealable order is appropriately brought under either Rule 59(e) or 10 Rule 60(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. See United States v. Martin, 226
11 F.3d 1042, 1048 n.8 (9th Cir.2000). Motions for reconsideration are committed to the 12 discretion of the trial court. See Sch. Dist. No. 1J. Mutlinomah County v. ACandS, Inc., 5
13 F.3d 1255, 1262 (9th Cir. 1993).

14 Rule 59(e) provides that any motion to alter or amend a judgment shall be filed no
15 later than 28 days after entry of the judgment. The Ninth Circuit has held that a Rule 16 59(e) motion for reconsideration should not be granted "absent highly unusual
17 circumstances, unless the district court is presented with newly discovered evidence,
18 committed clear error, or if there is an intervening change in the controlling law." Marlyn
19 Nutraceuticals, Inc. v. Mucos Pharma GmbH & Co., 571 F.3d 873, 880 (9th Cir. 2009)
20 (quoting 389 Orange Street Partners v. Arnold, 179 F.3d 656, 665 (9th Cir. 1999)).

21 Dismissal of Plaintiff's claims against Cosmopolitan with prejudice is a final
22 judgment, which is properly appealable under Rules 59(e) or 60(b). See Hells Canyon
23 Pres. Council v. U.S. Forest Serv., 403 F.3d 683, 686 (9th Cir. 2005) ("Final judgment 24 on the merits' is synonymous with 'dismissal with prejudice.'").

25 III. DISCUSSION

26 A. False Imprisonment Claim

27 In its May 14, 2012, the Court relied on Grosjean v. Imperial Palace, Inc., 212
28 P.3d 1068, 1076-77 (Nev. 2009) to rule that Cosmopolitan is entitled to a good-faith

1 defense on Plaintiff's false imprisonment claim. The Grosjean Court held that while
2 qualified immunity is not afforded to private casinos and their employees, "a good-faith
3 defense to liability for damages associated with Grosjean's § 1983 claim" is available.
4 Id. at 1076 (emphasis added). The Court agrees with Plaintiff that the Grosjean decision
5 does not address a good-faith defense in the context of a false imprisonment claim.
6 Under Nevada law, the intent required to be liable for false imprisonment is "to confine 7 the other or a third person within boundaries fixed by the actor," irrespective of the 8 tortfeasor's purpose in attempting to confine. See Hernandez v. City of Reno, 634 P.2d
9 668, 671 (Nev. 1981) (listing elements of false imprisonment); Restatement (Second) of 10 Torts § 44 cmt. a (1965) (noting that an "actor's motives in so confining the other are 11 immaterial" so that "it is not important that he did not act maliciously or from motives of 12 personal hostility or desire to offend the other"). Thus, Nevada law does not create a
13 good-faith defense for a false imprisonment claim. Regardless of the precarious position
14 that Cosmopolitan finds itself, its liability under false imprisonment is sufficiently alleged,
15 and the good faith defense is not available to Cosmopolitan. Accordingly, the Court
16 grants reconsideration of its Order dismissing the false imprisonment claim against 17 Cosmopolitan.

18 B. § 1983 Claim

19 Plaintiff also seeks reconsideration of the Court's order dismissing Plaintiff's
20 § 1983 claim against Cosmopolitan. Plaintiff contends that the Court ignored key facts in 21 deciding that good faith immunity bars Plaintiff's § 1983 claim, and applied the wrong
22 standard in the wake of the Supreme Court's recent decision in Filarsky v. Delia, 132 S.
23 Ct. 1657 (2012).

24 This Court's application of a good faith defense was premised on the Supreme 25 Court's decisions in Wyatt v. Cole, 504 U.S. 158 (1992) and Richardson v. McKnight,
26 521 U.S. 399 (1997). In Wyatt, the Court held that private individuals who improperly
27 used a state replevin law to compel a local sheriff to seize another's disputed property
28 were not entitled to seek qualified immunity, since they acted without any connection to

1 government and pursued purely private ends. However, Wyatt left open “the possibility
2 that private defendants faced with § 1983 liability . . . could be entitled to an affirmative
3 defense based on good faith and/or probable cause or that § 1983 suits against private,
4 rather than governmental, parties could require plaintiffs to carry additional burdens.”
5 504 U.S. at 169. In Richardson, the Court declined to extend the protections of qualified
6 immunity to prison guards employed by a private company working at a privately run
7 prison. 521 U.S. at 410-411. Relying on these two cases, the Ninth Circuit allowed a
8 private towing company to assert a good faith defense against a § 1983 challenge to a 9 police-authorized vehicle towing in part because the company’s actions “appeared to be 10 permissible under both local ordinance and state law.” Clement v. City of Glendale, 518
11 F.3d 1090, 1097 (9th Cir. 2008).

12 After oral argument on the Motion to Dismiss, but before this Court issued its 13 Order dismissing Plaintiff’s claims against Cosmopolitan, Filarsky v. Delia, 132 S. Ct.
14 1657 (2012) was decided. In Filarsky, the Supreme Court clarified its prior decisions
15 concerning the scope of immunities afforded to private § 1983 defendants and held that 16 a private attorney temporarily retained by the government is entitled to immunity. It
17 clarified that “immunity under § 1983 should not vary depending on whether an individual 18 working for the government does so as a full-time employee, or on some other basis.”
19 Id. at 1665 (emphasis added). The Court made clear to point out that its decisions in 20 Wyatt and Richardson remained undisturbed. Whatever remains of the “good faith”
21 immunity first hinted at in Wyatt and applied by the 9th Circuit in Clement, the holding in 22 Filarsky suggests that it is either coextensive with or simply replaced by the doctrine of 23 qualified immunity.¹ Accordingly, Filarsky does not materially alter the legal landscape
24 that gives rise to this case.

25
26 ¹The Supreme Court’s use of the term “working for the government” leaves open
27 the possibility that Filarsky does not apply where, as here, the private entity is not 28 retained by the government. Even if that were the case, Clement remains good law, and no apparent functional difference exists between the qualified immunity test and the “good faith” test employed by Clement.

1 Nevertheless, the Court agrees that Plaintiff’s § 1983 claims should have survived
2 dismissal because, viewing the allegations under the standard governing dismissal, the
3 Court cannot find that Cosmopolitan acted in good faith as a matter of law. Plaintiff’s
4 allegation, which must be accepted as true, that Cosmopolitan employees recognized
5 the illegality of their conduct leaves open the possibility that Cosmopolitan’s act or 6 omission resulted or contributed to Plaintiff’s unlawful detention. Plaintiff’s original
7 Complaint alleged that “security employees of Cosmopolitan became aware and verbally 8 recognized that the detention of Chentile by Porkchop, Officer 2, and Cosmopolitan was 9 without legal authority and questioned the detention.” (Dkt. no. 1-1 at ¶ 34.) Plaintiff
10 further alleged that “[d]espite the recognized illegality of the detention by Cosmopolitan
11 and its personnel, without compulsion Cosmopolitan and its personnel continued to 12 assist and partake in the detention of Chentile and to cooperate with Porkchop and 13 Officer 2 in a detention of Chentile that was recognized by Cosmopolitan and its 14 personnel as without legal authority.” (Id. at ¶ 35.) These facts are not analogous to the 15 circumstances in Clement, where the Ninth Circuit, viewing the facts under a summary
16 judgment standard, found that the towing company was not aware of any facts that 17 would be pertinent in determining whether notice had been given or was even 18 constitutionally required. 518 F.3d at 1097. In contrast here, taking as true Plaintiff’s
19 allegations, Plaintiff’s version of the facts show that Cosmopolitan’s employees
20 recognized the illegality of the detention and thus leaves open the possibility that 21 Cosmopolitan’s actions were not conducted in good faith, or in recognized contravention 22 of clearly established law that prohibits unlawful detentions. Denying the motion to 23 dismiss is particularly appropriate where factual dispute likely exists that bears on an 24 ultimate finding of qualified immunity. See e.g., Torres v. City of Los Angeles, 548 F.3d
25 1197, 1210-11 (9th Cir. 2008) (noting that where “historical facts material to the qualified 26 immunity determination are in dispute,” summary judgment is inappropriate).
27 Accordingly, dismissing the § 1983 claim at this early stage of the litigation was in error.

28 ///

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

IV. CONCLUSION

In light of the foregoing, Plaintiff's false imprisonment and § 1983 claim proceeds against Cosmopolitan. Plaintiff's Amended Complaint, filed after the Court's May 14, 2012, Order is the operative pleading that will control any discovery opened as a result of this Order.

IT IS THUS HEREBY ORDERED that Plaintiff's Motion for Reconsideration of Decision and Order Granting Nevada Property 1, LLC's Motion to Dismiss, or Alternatively, for Certification Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b) (dkt. no. 46) is GRANTED. The Court's May 14, 2012, Order is vacated with respect to the Court's discussion of Plaintiff's false imprisonment and § 1983 claim.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant Cosmopolitan's Motion to Dismiss (dkt. no. 11) is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part.

ENTERED THIS 5th day of March 2013.

MIRANDA M. DU
UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE