9 ROSEMARY GARITY,
10 Plaintiff,
11 v.
12 USPS PMG MEGAN J. BRENNAN, 13 Defendant.

Case No. 2:11-cv-01805-RFB-CWH

ORDER

Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment
(ECF No. 260)

15 I. INTRODUCTION

16 This case is before the Court on Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment (ECF No.
17 260). Plaintiff Rosemary Garity claims that she suffered multiple violations of her constitutional 18 rights while employed at the United States Postal Service. In her Third Amended Complaint (ECF 19 No. 43), Plaintiff alleges that Defendant discriminated against her because of her race and 20 disability. Plaintiff also claims that Defendant retaliated against her for engaging in protected 21 activities. Plaintiff further claims Defendant created a hostile work environment. Finally, Plaintiff 22 claims that the Defendant failed to provide reasonable accommodations for her disabilities.

23 Defendants filed a Motion for Summary Judgment, which makes several arguments as to 24 why Plaintiff's case should not proceed. For the reasons stated below, the Court grants the Motion 25 in part and denies it in part.

26 II. BACKGROUND
27
28

1 Plaintiff filed her Complaint in this Court on November 9, 2011. ECF No. 1. Plaintiff
2 filed her most recent, Third Amended Complaint on February 28, 2013. ECF No. 43. Plaintiff 3 alleges the following five causes of action:

- 5 i. Plaintiff's Title VII claim in Count I alleges that she was racially discriminated 6 against by her Hispanic supervisor, based on her Caucasian race.
- 7 ii. Plaintiff's Title VII claim Count II alleges retaliation against Plaintiff based on 8 her protected activities.
- 9 iii. Plaintiff's Title VII Count III alleges Federal Defendant created a hostile work 10 environment
- 11 iv. Plaintiff's Rehabilitation Act claim in Count I asserts that the Federal Defendant 12 discriminated against her by failing to accommodate her alleged disabilities.
- 13 v. Plaintiff's Rehabilitation Act claim in Count II asserts discrimination on the 14 basis of her disabilities.

15 Defendant filed a Motion to Dismiss on February 23, 2015. ECF No. 259. The Court denied 16 this Motion on April 16, 2015. ECF No. 279.

17 Defendant filed a Motion for Summary Judgment on February 23, 2015. ECF No. 259.

19 III. LEGAL STANDARD

20 Summary judgment is appropriate when the pleadings, depositions, answers to 21 interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show "that there is no 22 genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law."
23 Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); accord Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). When considering 24 the propriety of summary judgment, the court views all facts and draws all inferences in the light 25 most favorable to the nonmoving party. Gonzalez v. City of Anaheim, 747 F.3d 789, 793 (9th Cir.
26 2014). If the movant has carried its burden, the non-moving party "must do more than simply show 27 that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts . . . . Where the record taken as a 28 whole could not lead a rational trier of fact to find for the nonmoving party, there is no genuine

1 issue for trial.” Scott v. Harris, 550 U.S. 372, 380 (2007) (alteration in original) (internal quotation 2 marks omitted).

3 4 IV. Undisputed and Disputed Facts

5 A. Undisputed Facts

6 The Court finds the following facts to be undisputed. The USPS hired Plaintiff, a 7 Caucasian female, on approximately November 3, 2001. Over the course of her first five years as 8 a USPS employee, Plaintiff worked at various locations in Las Vegas, Nevada.

9 On December 8, 2008, as part of a settlement of a previous discrimination lawsuit against 10 the USPS, Plaintiff transferred stations and began working for the USPS at the Pahrump, Nevada 11 post office. Plaintiff was employed in Pahrump as a Part-Time Flexible Clerk, until approximately 12 December 1, 2011, at which time Plaintiff no longer worked at the USPS.

13 Mr. Armendariz and Maria Albertini, Plaintiff’s former coworker and fellow part-time 14 flexible clerk, are Hispanic. Ms. Albertini was allowed to use her cell phone while working.

15 Plaintiff was heavily involved in protected activities such as filing EEO complaints and 16 representation of others on the same, filing complaints sent by letter to management, and filing 17 grievances. She was involved in these activities on a continual basis beginning in 2009 up until 18 she no longer worked at the USPS.

19 In April 2011, Plaintiff was given a thirty (30) day suspension and removal, which was 20 subsequently reduced, through the grievance process.

21 In early May 2011,<sup>1</sup> the Pahrump Post Office was put on lockdown due to purported threats 22 by the Plaintiff. Plaintiff was not scheduled to work that day.

23 In October 2011, several of Plaintiff’s coworkers signed a letter to USPS management 24 expressing concerns about the Plaintiff and her behavior in the workplace. The letter requested 25 that Plaintiff no longer work at the Pahrump office. The letter further indicated that Plaintiff was 26 potentially dangerous and murderous.

27
28 <sup>1</sup> Plaintiff claims the date of the lockdown was May 3, 2011 (See Opp’n, ECF No. 282 at 5); Defendant maintains it was May 4, 2011 (See Mot. Summ. J., ECF No. 260 at 5).

1                   B. Disputed Facts

2           The parties dispute a number of facts, including the following:

3                               1. Time Leading up to Plaintiff's Constructive Discharge or Retirement

4           After the May 2011 lockdown, Plaintiff was reinstated but was denied work she was 5 entitled to, given reduced hours, subjected to official group discussions and investigative 6 interviews, threatened with firing on multiple occasions, refused requests for rescheduling, 7 interviewed about off duty activities, and sent home against her guaranteed hours.

8           Plaintiff returned to work on November 14, 2011 and was subjected to an investigation.
9 She became upset and physically sick and left work.

10          Plaintiff returned to work on December 1, 2011 and was ordered to leave. Plaintiff alleges 11 that she was constructively discharged at this time.

12                               2. Preferential Treatment

13          Albertini, Plaintiff's female Hispanic coworker, was given preferential treatment over 14 Plaintiff, who is Caucasian. For example, Albertini was not required to do a less preferred task 15 called "collections," was provided the preferred, earliest start time, and was given preferential 16 assignments over two non-Hispanic senior employees, including Garity. Further, Plaintiff, a senior 17 employee, was given less desirable shifts, in comparison with the junior employees.

18                               3. Conspiracy Against Plaintiff

19          Plaintiff maintains that she received information from numerous sources that the 20 management was intent upon firing her, and was frustrated by her filing Equal Employment 21 Opportunity ("EEO") complaints.

22                               4. Disability

23          The parties' dispute whether Plaintiff provided the necessary medical documentation of 24 her claimed disabilities, which Plaintiff alleges include: depression, cancer, anxiety, heel spurs, 25 and a heart condition. Defendant argues that it provided accommodation for Plaintiff's heart 26 condition and heel spurs.

27
28                   V. Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment

1 Defendant argues that each of Plaintiff's five causes of action should be dismissed. The 2 Court addresses each cause of action separately.

3 A. Title VII, Count I – Race Discrimination

4 1. No Prima Facie Case

5 First, Defendant argues that Plaintiff has not established a prima facie case for race 6 discrimination under Title VII, because the ability to use a cell phone while working cannot be 7 fairly characterized as an adverse employment action.

8 A plaintiff may establish a prima facie of discrimination under Title VII by showing that:
9 (1) she belongs to a protected class; (2) she was performing according to her employer's legitimate 10 expectations; (3) she suffered an adverse employment action; and (4) other employees with 11 qualifications similar to her own were treated more favorably. See McDonnell Douglas Corp. v.
12 Green, 411 U.S. 792, 802 (1973). An employment action is adverse if it "materially affects the 13 compensation, terms, conditions or privileges of employment." Davis v. Team Elec. Co., 520 F.3d 14 1080, 1089 (9th Cir. 2008).

15 In response, Plaintiff points out that inability to use her cell phone was just one of the ways 16 in which she was discriminated against. For example, Plaintiff argues that she was demoted from 17 her assignment to level 7 bulk mailing; assigned the least preferred duties, particularly 18 "collections;" assigned later and fewer hours; and that Defendants refused re-schedule her. See 19 Opp'n, Ex. 7, Sanford Decl. at 3.

20 The Court therefore finds that Plaintiff has established a prima facie case of race 21 discrimination by the Defendant. The Court finds that in particular, Plaintiff's demotion establishes 22 that material facts remain as to whether or not she suffered adverse employment action, because 23 these actions materially affected the terms, conditions, and privileges of her employment. See 24 Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth, 524 U.S. 742, 765 (1998) (finding that in the Title VII context, 25 adverse employment action includes "undesirable reassignment.").

26 2. Non-Discriminatory Reasons Explain Changes to Plaintiff's 27 Hours and Assignments

28 Defendant argues that there were various legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for

1 changes to Plaintiff's hours and assignments. First, changes to Plaintiff's hours, duties, and end 2 tours, were related to the operational needs of the Pahrump post office. Second, as a part-time 3 flexible clerk, Plaintiff was not guaranteed any certain number of hours or a particular schedule of 4 hours, nor was the fact that she may have been able to perform certain duties determinative of 5 whether she would get those assignments. Finally, other than Plaintiff's own self-serving 6 testimony, there is no evidence that Plaintiff was singled out for denial of the use of her cell phone 7 during work hours.

8 While the Court acknowledges the Defendants' assertion of nondiscriminatory reasons for 9 its adverse action to Plaintiff, this is not the end of the inquiry. Plaintiff may show that the 10 employer's reasons were pretextual. See McDonnell Douglas, 411 U.S. at 802-03.

11 A plaintiff may demonstrate a defendant's reason is pretextual "either directly by 12 persuading the court that a discriminatory reason more likely motivated the employer or indirectly 13 by showing that the employer's proffered explanation is unworthy of credence." Hernandez v.
14 Spacelabs Med. Inc., 343 F.3d 1107, 1112 (9th Cir. 2003) (internal quotations and citations 15 omitted). "To make this showing of pretext, [a plaintiff] may rely on the evidence proffered in 16 support of his prima facie case. A factfinder may infer the ultimate fact of retaliation without proof 17 of a discriminatory reason if it rejects a proffered nondiscriminatory reason as unbelievable." Id.

18 Plaintiff has shown that a reasonable juror could find that Defendant's reasons were 19 pretextual, because the Defendant regularly preferred Hispanic employees over Caucasian ones.
20 Specifically, Plaintiff argues that "[r]ace more likely motivated the employer and the proffered 21 explanation is unworthy of credence. If racial discrimination was not the more likely motivation 22 then Albertini would not have been treated preferentially without exception in relation to Sanford, 23 Lindsey and the plaintiff while being similarly situated in each case."

24 Therefore, the Court DENIES Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment as to the Title 25 VII racial discrimination claim.

26 27 B. Title VII, Count II – Retaliation

28 To prevail on her retaliation claim, Plaintiff must demonstrate: (1) that she engaged in a

1 protected activity; (2) that she suffered an adverse employment action; and (3) that there is a causal
2 a causal link between the protected activity and the adverse employment action. Dawson v. Entek 3 Intern, 630 F.3d 928, 936 (9th Cir. 2011). But-for causation is required to satisfy the third prong.
4 “This requires proof that the unlawful retaliation would not have occurred in the absence of the 5 alleged wrongful action or actions of the employer.” Univ. of Texas Southwestern Med. Ctr. V.
6 Nassar, 133 S.Ct. 2517, 2533 (2013).

7 Protected activities under Title VII include opposing allegedly discriminatory acts by one’s 8 employer. Id.; 42 U.S.C. 2000e-3(a). They also include making informal complaints to one’s 9 supervisor. Ray v. Henderson, 217 F.3d 1234, 1240 n.3 (9th Cir. 2000). “When an employee 10 protests the actions of a supervisor such opposition is a protected activity.” Trent v. Valley Elec.
11 Ass’n Inc., 41 F.3d 524, 526 (9th Cir. 1994). Further, if an employee communicates to his employer 12 a reasonable belief the employer has engaged in a form of employment discrimination, that 13 communication constitutes opposition to the activity. Crawford v. Metro. Gov’t of Nashville & 14 Davidson Cnty., Tenn., 555 U.S. 271, 276 (2009).

15 Defendant argues that Plaintiff has not made a prima facie showing of retaliation because 16 she cannot show that but for her protected activities, any of the numerous actions alleged in her 17 retaliation count would have occurred. In support of this argument, Defendant again asserts its 18 allegedly legitimate reasons for its decisions, which resulted in adverse employment action. For 19 example, Defendant argues that Plaintiff was not guaranteed any particular hours, schedule or job 20 assignments because she was a part-time flexible clerk.

21 Plaintiff argues that her hours were never cut prior to her engaging in protected activity, 22 which triggered the adverse employment action just two weeks later. As the Ninth Circuit has 23 explained, “[t]emporal proximity between protected activity and an adverse employment action 24 can by itself constitute sufficient circumstantial evidence of retaliation in some cases.” Stegall v.
25 Citadel Broad. Co., 350 F.3d 1061, 1069 (9th Cir. 2003), as amended (Jan. 6, 2004) (internal 26 citation and quotation omitted).

27 However, Plaintiff does not contest that from 2009 to 2011, she repeatedly engaged in 28 various forms of protected activity and filed numerous complaints with EEO. She also does not

1 contest that, in some instances, Defendant addressed these complaints by, for example, transferring 2 her to another office. Rather, Plaintiff alleges that there is temporal proximity between her latest 3 EEO complaint, and the adverse employment action. The Court is unpersuaded by this argument
4 and does not find that the temporal proximity between Plaintiff's latest protected action in a series 5 of such actions, and the subsequent adverse employment action, establishes the "but for" causation 6 required to establish a retaliation claim under Title VII.

7 Finding that Plaintiff has failed to establish "but for" causation, the Court does not address 8 Defendant's last argument, that Plaintiff failed to provide "specific and substantial" circumstantial 9 evidence of pretext with regard to her given hours, her preferred work schedule, or her specific job 10 assignments. Villiarimo v. Aloha Island Air, Inc., 281 F.3d 1054, 1062 (9th Cir. 2002). However, 11 the Court notes that it is unpersuaded by this argument, as Villiarimo itself states that a plaintiff 12 need only show that "either a discriminatory reason more likely motivated the employer or that 13 the employer's proffered explanation is unworthy of credence." Villiarimo v. Aloha Island Air, 14 Inc., 281 F.3d 1054, 1063 (9th Cir. 2002) (internal quotation and citation omitted).

15 The Court, finding that Plaintiff has failed to allege a prima facie case for a Title VII 16 retaliation claim, GRANTS Defendant's summary judgment as to Plaintiff's retaliation claim.

18 C. Title VII Count III – Hostile Work Environment

19 "To prevail on a hostile workplace claim premised on either race or sex, a plaintiff must 20 show: (1) that he was subjected to verbal or physical conduct of a racial or sexual nature; (2) that 21 the conduct was unwelcome; and (3) that the conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter 22 the conditions of the plaintiff's employment and create an abusive work environment." Vasquez v.
23 Cty. of Los Angeles, 349 F.3d 634, 642 (9th Cir. 2003), as amended (Jan. 2, 2004). To demonstrate 24 the third factor, a plaintiff must show that her work environment was both subjectively and 25 objectively hostile. Galdamez v. Potter, 415 F.3d 1015, 1023 (9th Cir. 2005).

26 Defendant argues that Plaintiff's claims do not make clear what characteristic were the 27 basis for the alleged hostile work environment in the final count of her Complaint. The Court 28 disagrees. Plaintiff's Third Amended Complaint clearly states the basis for her hostile work

1 environment claim is “based on retaliation and country of ancestry and sexually harassing 2 environment.”

3       However, upon review of the record, the Court does not find that Plaintiff has established 4 that she was subjected to verbal or physical conduct of a racial or sexual nature. While Plaintiff 5 alleges she was harassed in retaliation for her EEO activity and that coworkers wrote and spoke 6 negatively about her, she fails to provide evidence supporting her claim that she was subjected to 7 behavior that is racial and sexual in nature. Rather, Plaintiff simply states that “the environment 8 was sexually charged and included racial discrimination.” Opp’n at 23. This is distinct from and 9 insufficient to showing that Plaintiff herself was subject to verbal or physical conduct of a racial 10 or sexual nature, as required to prove a Title VII hostile work environment claim. The single 11 instance of purported sexual conduct alleged in her Opposition brief occurred by way of a 12 coworker who allegedly exposed her belly ring, tattoo “across her butt,” thong underwear, and 13 breasts not to Plaintiff, but to her supervisor.<sup>2</sup>

14       Plaintiff argues that this incident demonstrates her employer’s acquiescence to 15 inappropriate sexual conduct by third parties, and cites to Freitag v. Ayers to support her argument 16 that such a claim is actionable under Title VII. 468 F.3d 528, 538-540 (9th Cir. 2006). Freitag, 17 however, held that the employer—in that case, the Department of Corrections—could be held 18 liable under Title VII for failure to implement policies to protect its female corrections officers 19 from sexual harassment by male prisoners. Id. Plaintiff does not allege that the employee in 20 question sexually harassed her. Rather, Plaintiff appears to allege that her coworker obtained 21 beneficial treatment on the basis of alleged sexual behavior towards her supervisor.

22       The Court therefore finds that Plaintiff has failed to produce evidence in support of her 23 Title VII Hostile Work Environment claim on the basis of race and sex.

24       Defendant also argues that Plaintiff cannot establish that she endured a hostile work 25 environment because of her protected traits. Because the Court does not find that Plaintiff has met

26
27       <sup>2</sup> In support of this statement, Plaintiff cites to former coworker Sanford’s Declaration, 28 Opp’n, Ex. 7 at para 12. However, Sanford simply states that “[o]ne of the benefits Bennett received for showing her body was unlimited phone use throughout the day.” And does not allege the specific details Plaintiff claims in her Opposition brief.

1 the first requirement of a Title VII hostile work environment claim, the Court does not reach this 2 argument.

3 The Court GRANTS Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment as to Plaintiff's hostile 4 work environment claim.

5 D. Rehabilitation Act, Count I – Failure to Accommodate

6 “Section 501 of the [Rehabilitation Act] RHA announces a federal government policy to 7 prevent discrimination against the disabled in employment decisions, and expressly encourages 8 federal government employers to employ individuals with disabilities.” Lopez v. Johnson, 333 9 F.3d 959, 961 (9th Cir. 2003). The Ninth Circuit looks to the standards applied under the ADA to 10 determine whether a violation of the Rehabilitation Act (“RHA”) occurred in the federal 11 employment context. See Lopez v. Johnson, 333 F.3d 959, 961 (9th Cir. 2003). To establish a 12 prima facie case under the Americans with Disabilities Act (“ADA”), a plaintiff must first 13 demonstrate that: “(1) he is disabled within the meaning of the ADA; (2) he is a qualified individual 14 able to perform the essential functions of the job with reasonable accommodation; and (3) he 15 suffered an adverse employment action because of his disability.” Samper v. Providence St.
16 Vincent Med. Ctr., 675 F.3d 1233, 1237 (9th Cir. 2012) (citing Allen v. Pac. Bell, 348 F.3d 1113, 17 1114 (9th Cir. 2003).

18 Defendant argues that accommodations were made for two of Plaintiff's disabilities: heel 19 spurs and her heart condition. The Defendant further avers that Plaintiff did not provide the 20 necessary medical documentation to prove she was disabled, and because of that, Defendant argues 21 that no reasonable accommodation could have been made. The Court first addresses the disabilities 22 that were allegedly unsupported by medical documentation, and then the accommodations that 23 were made.

24 In the Ninth Circuit, employers and employees alike are required to engage in an 25 “interactive process” in making reasonable accommodations for disabled employees. The Court 26 explains: “the interactive process is a mandatory rather than a permissive obligation on the part of 27 employers under the ADA and that this obligation is triggered by an employee or an employee's 28 representative giving notice of the employee's disability and the desire for accommodation. In

1 circumstances in which an employee is unable to make such a request, if the company knows of 2 the existence of the employee's disability, the employer must assist in initiating the interactive 3 process.” Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc., 228 F.3d 1105, 1114 (9th Cir. 2000) vacated sub nom. U.S.
4 Airways, Inc. v. Barnett, 535 U.S. 391 (2002). “[T]he employee's participation is equally important 5 because he or she generally knows more about his or her capabilities, and holds essential 6 information for the assessment of the type of reasonable accommodation which would be most 7 effective.” Goos v. Shell Oil Co., 451 F. App'x 700, 702 (9th Cir. 2011) (internal quotations 8 omitted). As a part of the interactive process, the Court noted that “[e]mployers should meet with 9 the employee who requests an accommodation, request information about the condition and what 10 limitations the employee has, ask the employee what he or she specifically wants, show some sign 11 of having considered employee's request, and offer and discuss available alternatives when the 12 request is too burdensome.” Id. at 1115 (internal citations omitted) (emphasis added).

13         The Ninth Circuit has granted summary judgment for employers where employees failed 14 to engage in the interactive process. See, e.g., Dep't of Fair Employment & Hous. v. Lucent Techs., 15 Inc., 642 F.3d 728, 743 (9th Cir. 2011) (where an can cannot prevail on summary judgment on a 16 claim of failure to reasonably accommodate where the employer did everything in its power to 17 find a reasonable accommodation, but the informal interactive process broke down because the 18 employee failed to engage in discussions in good faith.”); Allen v. Pac. Bell, 348 F.3d 1113, 1115 19 (9th Cir. 2003) (“Because Allen was requested, but failed, to submit additional medical evidence 20 that would serve to modify his doctor's prior report, Pacific Bell's determination... was 21 appropriate. Pacific Bell did not have a duty under the ADA or California law to engage in further 22 interactive processes...in the absence of any such information.”).

23         In this case, Defendant argues that while Plaintiff provided medical documentation for two 24 disabilities—heel spurs and her heart condition. Defendant argues that she failed to provide any 25 medical documentation for her other claimed disabilities, which, according to her Third Amended 26 Complaint, include: depression, cancer, and anxiety. Instead, Defendant argues that Plaintiff 27 simply stated that she suffered from these disabilities and requested specific accommodations.
28 Defendant argues that it engaged in the interactive process by asking her to provide medical

1 documentation of those disabilities, but Plaintiff refused to engage in the process by failing to 2 provide such documentation.

3 In her declaration, attached to her Opposition, Plaintiff claims that she did provide medical 4 documentation of her disabilities. Opp'n, Ex. 4, Garity Decl at ¶ 13 ("I put in multiple requests 5 asking for accommodation and provided medical documentation of my depression, anxiety, heart 6 condition, sleep disturbance, heel spurs, cancer and muscle spasms on January 6 and 7 and 7 February 1, 2011. The documentation is stamped with U.S.P.S. OHNA (Occupational Health 8 Nurse) stamp on those dates and noted received.") Having reviewed the accommodation requests, 9 the Court finds that the requests were a series of handwritten and typed notes from Plaintiff without 10 any accompanying medical documentation supporting her claimed disabilities. ECF No. 30, 11 Second Am. Compl., Ex. 4, "Accommodation Requests"). USPS employee Debi Blankenship's 12 subsequent denial of Plaintiff's accommodations reflect the lack of medical documentation: "you 13 have advised me...that the premise for requesting this schedule is due to 'medical reasons'...[I]f 14 you were to provide me medical basis or documented [sic] request supported by your physician 15 to establish your 'medical' reason for having these work hours, I would be more than happy to 16 forward this request to the DRAC as an accommodation request which they may be able to act 17 upon."). Id., Ex. 5.

18 Additionally, while Plaintiff cites to the deposition of USPS employee James Davey to 19 stand for the proposition that USPS had the requisite medical documentation, Davey's testimony 20 is consistent with the Defendant's position: that while Plaintiff provided medical documentation 21 for her heel spurs and cardiovascular condition, which Defendant in turn accommodated, Plaintiff 22 failed to provide documentation of her other alleged disabilities. ECF No. 260, Ex. D, Davey Depo.

23 Plaintiff further asserts that the accommodations for her heel spur and cardiovascular issues 24 were ineffective as she states that "[t]he requested accommodation was to stop the 25 harassment/retaliation/abuse to stop the pain from occurring." Opp'n, Ex. 4, Garity Decl. at ¶ 13.
26 The Ninth Circuit has held that "[a]n ineffective 'modification' or 'adjustment' will not 27 accommodate a disabled individual's limitations. Ineffective modifications therefore are not 28 accommodations." U.S. E.E.O.C. v. UPS Supply Chain Sols., 620 F.3d 1103, 1110 (9th Cir. 2010)

1 (internal quotations omitted). “Reasonable accommodations may include: ‘job restructuring, part-2 time or modified work schedules, reassignment to a vacant position, acquisition or modification 3 of equipment or devices, appropriate adjustment or modifications of examinations, training 4 materials or policies, the provision of qualified readers or interpreters, and other similar 5 accommodations.’” Cleveland v. Policy Mgmt. Sys. Corp., 526 U.S. 795, 803 (1999) (citing 42 6 U.S.C. § 12111(9)(B)). Notably, “[a]n employer is not obligated to provide an employee the 7 accommodation he requests or prefers, the employer need only provide some reasonable 8 accommodation.” U.S. E.E.O.C. v. UPS Supply Chain Sols., 620 F.3d 1103, 1110-11 (9th Cir.
9 2010) (internal citation omitted).

10 In this case, Plaintiff’s request for USPS to “stop the harassment/retaliation/abuse” does 11 not constitute a reasonable accommodation under the ADA and, by extension, the RHA. In 12 reviewing Plaintiff’s requests for accommodation, the Court notes that Plaintiff also requested to 13 be given an “early start,” which the Court understands to mean earlier shifts. However, this request 14 was in connection with Plaintiff’s mental disability, rather than for her heel spurs or heart 15 condition, for which she had not presented medical documentation.

16 The Court finds that the record indicates that Plaintiff failed to engage in the requisite 17 interactive process by failing to provide medical documentation of her disabilities, and that 18 Plaintiff failed to demonstrate how the accommodations made for her documented disabilities were 19 ineffective.

20 The Court therefore GRANTS summary judgment in favor of the Defendant on Plaintiff’s 21 Failure to Accommodate claim.
22

23 E. Rehabilitation Act, Count II– Disability Discrimination

24 Defendant argues that Plaintiff cannot show that she was disabled or qualified with or 25 without reasonable accommodations because she did not participate in the interactive process that 26 would allow the USPS to determine the extent of her purported disabilities. While this argument 27 is compelling in the context of a failure to accommodate claim, the Court does not find that it 28 applies with regard to Plaintiff’s discrimination claim.

1 In her discrimination claim, Plaintiff argues that she was disparately treated based upon 2 her disabilities—namely, her psychological disabilities. Third Amended Complaint, ECF No. 43 3 at 5. Such a claim does not require the interactive process, which is used where employers and 4 employees work together to reach a reasonable accommodation for an employee’s disability.
5 Indeed, a plaintiff could demonstrate that she is disabled under the ADA by demonstrating that she 6 was “regarded as” disabled by her employer, which would not necessarily require the interactive 7 process.

8 Defendant then argues that Plaintiff cannot show discrimination where there were no 9 similarly situated employees to Plaintiff. In defining “similarly situated,” Defendant argues that 10 the office had not previously had a part-time flexible clerk with the disabilities that Plaintiff 11 alleges.

12 However, Plaintiff need not show that other disabled part-time clerks were treated 13 differently. Rather, the requirement is that “employees with qualifications similar to her own were 14 treated more favorably.” Godwin v. Hunt Wesson, Inc., 150 F.3d 1217, 1220 (9th Cir. 1998), as 15 amended (Aug. 11, 1998) (emphasis added); See also Vasquez v. Cty. of Los Angeles, 349 F.3d 16 634, 641 (9th Cir. 2003), as amended (Jan. 2, 2004) (“A showing that the County treated similarly 17 situated employees outside Vasquez's protected class more favorably would be probative of 18 pretext...[I]ndividuals are similarly situated when they have similar jobs and display similar 19 conduct.”); U.S. Airways, Inc. v. Barnett, 535 U.S. 391, 417, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 1531, 152 L. Ed. 2d 20 589 (2002) “(iii) [m]odifications or adjustments that enable a covered entity's employee with a 21 disability to enjoy equal benefits and privileges of employment as are enjoyed by its other similarly 22 situated employees without disabilities.” 29 CFR § 1630.2(o) (2001) (emphasis added). In this 23 case, Plaintiff alleges that her fellow part-time clerks were given significantly more hours than 24 she. Defendant does not dispute this, but rather argues that the nature of Plaintiff’s job as a part-25 time flexible clerk does not guarantee Plaintiff a certain number of hours of work.

26 The Court therefore DENIES Defendant’s Motion for Summary Judgment as to Plaintiff’s 27 discrimination claim.
28

1           VI.     CONCLUSION

2           Accordingly, Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment (ECF No. 260) is granted in part 3 and denied in part:

- 4           • Title VII, Count I – Race Discrimination. The Court DENIES Defendant's 5 Motion as to Plaintiff's discrimination claim.
- 6           • Title VII, Count II – Retaliation. The Court GRANTS Defendant's Motion as to 7 Plaintiff's retaliation claim.
- 8           • Title VII Count III – Hostile Work Environment. The Court GRANTS 9 Defendant's Motion as to Plaintiff's hostile work environment claim.
- 10          • Rehabilitation Act, Count I– Failure to Accommodate. The Court GRANTS 11 Defendant's Motion as to Plaintiff's failure to accommodate claim.
- 12          • Rehabilitation Act, Count II– Disability Discrimination. The Court DENIES 13 Defendant's Motion as to Plaintiff's discrimination claim.
