

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

* * *

BRADLEY STEPHEN COHEN, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

ROSS B. HANSEN, et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. 2:12-cv-01401-JCM-PAL

ORDER

(Mot Exclude – Dkt. #150)

The court conducted a hearing on Defendants’ Motion to Exclude Evidence Regarding Plaintiffs’ Actual Damages (Dkt. #150) on April 22, 2014. Robert Mitchell and Sara Deutsch appeared on behalf of the Plaintiffs. John Aldrich appeared in person and Dean von Kallenbach appeared telephonically on behalf of the Defendants. The court has considered the Motion, Plaintiffs’ Opposition (Dkt. #153), Defendants’ Reply (Dkt. #156), Defendants’ Sur-Reply (Dkt. #174) and Plaintiffs’ Motion to Strike Defendants’ Sur-Reply (Dkt. #175), as well as the arguments of counsel at the hearing.

BACKGROUND

The Complaint (Dkt. #1) in this case was filed August 8, 2012. A First Amended Complaint (Dkt. #40) (“FAC”) was filed March 4, 2013. Plaintiff Bradley Stephen Cohen (“Cohen”) is a California resident and the President and Chief Executive Officer of Cohen Asset Management (“CAM”), a privately held California corporation. FAC (Dkt. #40), ¶¶1-2. CAM acquires finances, operates, and is involved with the disposition of industrial properties across the United States. Id. ¶2.

Defendant Ross B. Hansen (“Hansen”) is a resident of the State of Washington, and a part-time resident of Nevada. Id. ¶3. Defendant Northwest Territorial Mint, Inc., LLC (“NW

1 Mint”) is a Washington limited liability corporation. Id. ¶4. Defendant Steven Earl Firebauch is 2 a resident of Nevada. Id.

3 The Complaint and FAC arise out of allegations Plaintiffs discovered allegedly 4 defamatory and malicious websites containing intentionally false and disparaging publications 5 about Plaintiffs in April 2012. Id. ¶9. Among other things, the websites compared Plaintiffs to 6 Bernie Madoff and displayed a picture with Plaintiff Cohen allegedly juxtaposed with a picture 7 of Madoff. Id. ¶12. The websites contained allegedly false and scandalous allegations against 8 Plaintiff CAM.

9 Plaintiffs allege that Defendants secretly created and established the websites and 10 intended to conceal any involvement with the websites’ creation. Id. ¶29. The websites were 11 allegedly created by the Defendants in retaliation for two lawsuits regarding business leases, 12 which Defendants lost, in Washington State Court. Id. ¶31.

13 Based on these allegations, Plaintiffs have asserted claims for: (1) defamation and 14 defamation per se; (2) invasion of privacy/false light; (3) intentional infliction of emotional 15 distress; (4) intentional interference with future expected business; and (5) injunctive relief.

16 Discovery has been contentious, and the court has decided many, many discovery 17 disputes. Both sides have been ordered to produce or supplement discovery they have resisted 18 providing. In the current motion, Defendants seek an order excluding evidence that Plaintiffs 19 suffered any actual or special damages based on Defendants’ discovery violations, and 20 misrepresentations to opposing counsel and the court concerning their damages claims.

21 Defendants served interrogatories and requests for production of documents on 22 Defendants Cohen and CAM April 30, 2013. Defendants’ written discovery requested that 23 Plaintiffs identify their bases for pleading damages in excess of the jurisdictional threshold of 24 $75,000. To each of the Defendants’ discovery requests, the Plaintiffs replied that they “are 25 seeking general and presumed damages (in addition to punitive damages) in this litigation, and 26 have not alleged, nor are they required to allege, specific instances of actual damages.” Plaintiffs 27 refused to produce financial information or information regarding specific monetary damages 28

1 objecting that Defendants' discovery requests were overly broad, unduly burdensome, vague, 2 irrelevant, and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

3 On June 14, 2013, Defendants sent Plaintiffs' counsel a lengthy letter identifying 4 deficiencies in their discovery responses, including the Plaintiffs' failure and refusal to provide 5 evidence of actual damages. A copy of this correspondence from defense counsel von 6 Kallenbach to Plaintiffs' counsel Mitchell is attached as Exhibit "E" to Defendants' motion.
7 Plaintiffs responded June 21, 2013, by letter refusing to supplement their discovery responses or 8 provide Plaintiffs with any information regarding actual damages. A copy of this 9 correspondence is attached as Exhibit "F" to the motion.

10 When the parties were unable to resolve this and other discovery disputes, a Joint 11 Discovery Report (Dkt. #84) was submitted to the court July 10, 2013.<sup>1</sup> At a hearing conducted 12 July 23, 2013, the court addressed the parties' disputes concerning the Plaintiffs' failure to 13 provide evidence of monetary damages. Anthony Glassman appeared on behalf of the Plaintiffs 14 and argued at length that the Plaintiffs did not intend to introduce any "testimony whatsoever 15 with respect to any specific sum of money or sums of money that were lost" at trial. The court 16 specifically inquired of Mr. Glassman how Plaintiffs estimated their damages at $100 million as 17 stated in their discovery responses. Mr. Glassman responded that the estimate was based upon 18 his "experience as a media lawyer," and an award of $40 million that Steven Wynn had recently 19 been awarded in an unrelated case. These arguments were made in support of Plaintiffs' position 20 that Defendants' discovery requests were overly broad, and irrelevant because Plaintiffs were not 21 required to plead or prove any actual damages.

22 At the hearing, the court directed Plaintiffs' counsel to produce documents supporting all 23 of their theories regarding damages and entered a written Order (Dkt. #91) requiring the 24 Plaintiffs to serve supplemental written responses to certain of the interrogatories and requests 25

---

26 <sup>1</sup> The court has been conducting regular scheduling and dispute resolution conferences in this 27 case since January 8, 2013, in addition to hearings on motions to compel. The court eventually 28 required the parties to submit their discovery disputes and their respective positions concerning those disputes in a joint status report, rather than requiring formal briefing in the form of a motion, response and reply to avoid the delay entailed in the briefing process.

1 for production of documents no later than August 6, 2013. The written order warned Plaintiffs 2 that they would be precluded from using any undisclosed evidence or documents responsive to 3 the discovery requests compelled in this order at trial, in motion practice, at a hearing, or for any 4 other purpose. The court denied Defendants' request to compel further responses to other 5 discovery requests based on Plaintiffs' counsel's repeated representations that they did not have, 6 were not alleging, and knew of no actual damages. However, on November 25, 2013, Plaintiffs 7 filed a Response to Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment (Dkt. #135) which argued, for 8 the first time, that Plaintiffs suffered actual damages. The response asserted that "actual 9 damages" should be called "special damages," and therefore summary judgment should not be 10 entered against them even though Plaintiffs had no evidence of quantifiable economic harm.

11 Under these circumstances, Defendants ask the court for preclusion sanctions for 12 Plaintiffs' bad faith and wilful refusal to produce evidence of economic damages in discovery.
13 Defendants argue that Plaintiffs cannot rely on the existence of actual damages in opposing the 14 motion for summary judgment, while steadfastly refusing to provide Defendants with discovery 15 of their damages, and representing to the court that there were no actual damages. Defendants 16 have been prejudiced by the Plaintiffs' failure to provide evidence regarding the computation of 17 their damages, and supporting documents which deprive Defendants' counsel of addressing the 18 merits of Plaintiffs' alleged economic losses during discovery. The only way this prejudice 19 could be potentially cured is to re-open discovery. However, because the first time Plaintiffs 20 claimed they had suffered actual damages was only after the close of discovery, and in response 21 to Defendants' motion for summary judgment, this would reward Plaintiffs for their intentional 22 disregard of their discovery obligations. A more effective and efficient sanction is therefore 23 entry of an order precluding Plaintiffs from making any reference to any actual damages and 24 pecuniary losses during trial.

25 Finally, Defendants argue that they will be profoundly prejudiced by Plaintiffs' attempt 26 to rely on the existence of actual damages while not providing information about them during 27 discovery. Plaintiffs' perversion of the discovery process by withholding evidence throughout 28

1 discovery has thwarted Plaintiffs’ ability to ascertain facts in dispute, clarify the issues, and 2 avoid surprise at trial—the purpose of the discovery rules.

3 Plaintiffs oppose the motion arguing that their initial complaint alleged presumed, actual, 4 consequential, general, special and punitive damages, and sought injunction relief in addition to 5 attorney’s fees and costs. The FAC also sought “all damages” including presumed, actual, 6 consequential, general and punitive damages in addition to injunction relief and attorney’s fees 7 and costs. Plaintiff’s opposition asks the court to deny the motion arguing that this is not an 8 “extreme case” that warrants the harsh sanction of exclusion, especially when it amounts to 9 dismissal of a claim, citing R&R Sails, Inc. v. Insurance Co. of Penn., 673 F.3d 1240, 1247 (9th 10 Cir. 2002). Defendants argue that courts have excluded of evidence of damages only in extreme 11 situations in which the Plaintiff did not disclose its damages until shortly before trial or well after 12 the close of discovery. Defendants maintain that they timely disclosed evidence of special 13 damages during the discovery process.

14 The opposition maintains that actual damages and special damages are occasionally used 15 interchangeably “as was inadvertently done in this case by both parties.” However, in Nevada, 16 special damages are a species of compensatory damages. Compensatory or actual damages 17 include general damages for loss of reputation, shame, mortification and hurt feelings, and 18 special damages which are quantifiable monetary losses that flow directly from the injury to 19 reputation caused by the defamation, for example, loss of business. General damages are 20 presumed and emotional damages do not require objective evidence and may be based solely on 21 testimony. These types of damages are not amenable to calculation and are left to the trier of 22 fact to determine.

23 Under Nevada law, Plaintiffs argue, the jury has wide latitude in awarding special 24 damages which do not require an injured person to prove injury with mathematical exactitude.
25 Plaintiffs disclosed their special damages in discovery in the form of search engine optimization 26 expenses incurred in attempting to mitigate the harm caused by the websites and produced a 27 summary of these expenses totaling $58,133.92. Plaintiffs also stated in Cohen’s answers to 28 interrogatories that Cohen’s damages exceeded $100 million over a twenty-year period, and

1 supplemented these responses as ordered. Plaintiffs also disclosed Mr. Stern's declaration 2 attesting he invested several million dollars less because of Defendants' websites, and 3 Defendants deposed Mr. Stern. Finally, Plaintiffs filed Mr. Cohen's declaration who attested he 4 incurred over $100,000, not including attorney's fees spent on this litigation, in expenses to 5 uncover the source of the websites and "dealing with the problems created by the websites." In 6 supplemental answers to interrogatories CAM produced an illustration of income generated by 7 investment offerings from 2010 to 2013, with supporting documentation showing a total income 8 extrapolated over twenty years of $158,477,077.00. Defendants deposed Cohen and CAM's 9 CFO, Scott McGuinness, but did not ask them about the illustration. However, defense counsel 10 did ask Cohen about the search engine optimization expenses.

11 Plaintiffs assert that Defendants' motion selectively quotes a few discovery responses and 12 arguments of counsel to support their preclusion sanction arguments. Public policy favors 13 disposition of cases on their merits, and the court "must not decide this case on technicalities, 14 semantics, or arguments of counsel, which are not evidence." Opposition (Dkt. #153), 9:28-15 10:1.

16 Plaintiffs maintain that the arguments of counsel at the July 23, 2013 hearing were not 17 evidence, and in effect, "taken out of context" because they referred to a black binder containing 18 financial records which included appraisals, evaluation and mortgage documents that Plaintiffs 19 were waiting to produce provided defense counsel would agree to an "attorney's eyes only" 20 protective order provision. At the hearing, the court denied this request. When the court 21 inquired what documents Plaintiffs had produced to defense counsel, Plaintiffs' counsel stated a 22 host of declarations from investors in CAM properties, including Mr. Stern's declaration, had 23 been produced and went on to explain that Plaintiffs' general and presumed damages, including 24 emotional distress, would be supported by Mr. Cohen's testimony and a psychiatrist. Plaintiffs' 25 counsel also explained that damages to Plaintiffs' reputation would be supported by testimony 26 from Cohen and CAM representatives "about the magnitude of Plaintiffs' business, income, 27 equities and properties, fee structure, etc." although a specific sum would not be presented 28 because "such damages are incalculable and are presumed."

1 Under these circumstances, Plaintiffs argue, they have complied with their discovery 2 obligations and the court's orders. Rule 37(c)(1) does not apply because Plaintiffs produced 3 information regarding their special damages and Defendants have not identified what untimely 4 disclosed evidence they want excluded. Plaintiffs maintain that Defendants' motion is 5 essentially a premature motion in limine, and that Defendants are requesting resolution of a 6 factual dispute and that the court weigh evidence like the sufficiency of Mr. Stern's reduced 7 investment which is not an appropriate purpose for a motion in limine. The court should defer 8 evidentiary rulings until trial so questions of foundation, relevancy and potential prejudice are 9 resolved in proper context when the court is in a better situation to assess the value and utility of 10 the evidence.

11 DISCUSSION

12 Defendants served Plaintiffs with routine contention interrogatories and requests for 13 production of documents seeking discovery of Plaintiffs' damages contentions and documents 14 tending to support or refute those contentions. Defendants' written discovery was served on 15 Defendants Cohen and CAM April 30, 2013. Among other things, the discovery requests sought 16 Plaintiffs' bases for pleading damages in excess of the jurisdictional threshold of $75,000.
17 Plaintiffs responded to these requests by objecting on various grounds including that the 18 information requested was overly broad, unduly burdensome, vague, irrelevant, and not 19 reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Plaintiffs' answers to the 20 interrogatories indicated that they were seeking "general and presumed damages" but did not 21 allege "specific instances of actual damage."

22 In an Answer to Interrogatory No. 1, Cohen indicated that he "incurred many thousands 23 of dollars" in search engine optimization expenses to mitigate the harm caused by the 24 Defendants. In Answer to Interrogatory No. 2(b), Cohen supported his allegation in Paragraph 7 25 of his FAC that his potential damages exceeded the jurisdictional minimum of $75,000 by 26 responding that he was seeking "general and presumed damages" and did not allege "specific 27 instances of actual damage." The same answer was given to support his FAC allegations about 28 damages to his reputation. He answered Interrogatory No. 6(b) which asked for the bases for

1 supporting the allegation in Paragraph 73 of his FAC that Defendants' invasion of privacy and 2 false light caused him damages "in excess of $100 million." The answer did not provide any 3 detail or explanation concerning how he calculated this loss. He gave a similar answer 4 supporting Interrogatory No. 7 which asked him the bases of his contention in Paragraph 82 of 5 his FAC that Defendants interfered with his business dealings and caused parties to be hesitant to 6 do business with Plaintiffs. In Answer to Interrogatory No. 7(b) Cohen indicated that he valued 7 the damage suffered in this category "to be in excess of $100 million." Again, he failed to 8 provide detail concerning how he calculated this loss and did not differentiate whether the $100 9 million in damages claimed in answer to Interrogatory 6(b) was the same as or cumulative to the 10 damages claimed in Answer to Interrogatory No. 7(b).

11 Counsel for Defendants sent a detailed letter to Plaintiffs' counsel June 14, 2013, 12 outlining why Defendants' counsel believed the responses were deficient and required immediate 13 supplementation. Plaintiffs' counsel responded in a letter dated June 21, 2013. Plaintiffs' 14 counsel took the position that defense counsel's letter "wrongly assumes that in responding to 15 interrogatories and requests for production of documents regarding the damages our client has 16 sustained as a result of your client's defamatory websites, our obligation is to provide the kind of 17 documentation and calculations you would normally be required to establish the extent of 18 damages incurred." (Dkt. #150), Exhibit "F". The letter went on to explain in detail Plaintiffs' 19 position that Plaintiffs had no duty to plead or prove special damages and no proof of calculation 20 of damages was required for Plaintiffs' defamation and defamation per se claims.

21 With respect to damages on the remaining claims, Plaintiffs claimed to have produced all 22 relevant documents. The letter indicated that Mr. Cohen had no responsive documents regarding 23 his emotional distress caused by the offending websites, other than an anticipated psychiatric 24 expert report. The letter also indicated that Mr. Cohen had no responsive documents relating to 25 damages stemming from the invasion of his privacy and being portrayed in a false light. With 26 respect to the claim for intentional interference of prospective business advantage, Plaintiffs 27 claimed they had already produced the only responsive documents relating to this claim. These 28 documents consisted of declarations from existing investors, one of whom stated he invested less

1 with Plaintiffs because he saw the websites. The letter indicated that approximately 100 pages of 2 responsive documents had been produced which included the declarations and represented that 3 “other than those investors who volunteered to prepare sworn declarations, it is virtually 4 impossible to ascertain what other investors chose to invest less or cease doing business with 5 Plaintiffs in response to the websites.”

6 When the parties were unable to resolve their disputes without the court’s intervention, 7 the court heard argument of the parties disputes at the July 23, 2013 hearing. At the July 23, 8 2013 hearing, defense counsel requested an order compelling the Defendants to produce 9 financial status and performance information, including copies of their bank account statements, 10 brokerage account statements, commodity account statement, tax returns and financial 11 statements, including profit and loss statements and balance sheets. Defense counsel represented 12 that the discovery requests directed to obtain this information was taken directly from discovery 13 responses received from Plaintiffs, i.e., the exact information that Plaintiffs were seeking from 14 Defendants. Plaintiffs had not produced any information responsive to these requests, but 15 offered to produce two types of information: Plaintiffs’ opinions regarding the value of the 16 commercial properties in which CAM has an ownership interest, and redacted appraisals for the 17 majority of the properties. None of these documents, Defendants argued, were adequate to 18 explore the truth or falsity of statements on the website about CAM’s financial condition such as 19 operating losses, tenant occupancy rates, lines of credit, complex financial transactions and 20 loans. Mr. Glassman, counsel for Plaintiffs, argued at the hearing that Plaintiffs had a binder 21 containing appraisals for each of the properties owned by CAM that contained all the 22 information Defendants needed to show that the Plaintiffs were not operating a Ponzi scheme as 23 the website suggested, and that the properties had a loan-to-value ratio of fifty percent.

24 Defendants sought discovery of Plaintiffs’ financial condition and status because 25 Plaintiffs alleged they were defamed by statements on the websites that CAM’s financial empire 26 was crumbling, under financial distress, and had operating losses that were continuing to mount 27 as the company lost tenants and occupancy rates on some of the properties dropped as low as 28 twenty-eight percent. Defendants believed they were entitled to information of Defendants’

1 financial condition to prove these statements were true as a complete defense to Plaintiffs’
2 defamation claims. Additionally, Defendants sought financial documents to evaluate Plaintiffs’ 3 damages claims.

4 Plaintiffs steadfastly resisted discovery of their financial status arguing it was not relevant 5 because Plaintiffs were not required to allege or prove actual or specific monetary damages for 6 their defamation and defamation per se claims because the only damages they suffered were 7 presumed damages for which a monetary calculation was impossible. Plaintiffs repeatedly 8 represented to the court and opposing counsel that they had produced all responsive documents 9 supporting their damages claims for emotional distress and intentional interference with 10 prospective business advantage. Specifically, Plaintiffs’ counsel represented that Mr. Cohen 11 would testify about his emotional distress, and an expert psychiatrist would also testify. With 12 respect to the intentional interference with prospective business advantage, Plaintiffs’ counsel 13 represented that the declarations from existing investors that had been produced, were the only 14 evidence supporting this claim. Plaintiffs’ counsel also represented that Plaintiffs had no 15 documents responsive to damages for invasion of privacy and being portrayed in a false light.

16 At the July 23, 2013 hearing, Plaintiffs’ counsel said all responsive documents had been 17 produced, or would be produced, in the form of a binder counsel brought with him to court if the 18 court would order the documents could only be reviewed on an “attorney’s eyes only” basis.
19 Plaintiffs’ counsel argued at length that Mr. Hansen was unlikely to abide by any order the court 20 had imposed treating these documents as confidential because of his history of allegedly showing 21 contempt for court orders, and personal characteristics and background. The court denied the 22 request to amend the protective order governing confidentiality to include an “attorney’s eyes 23 only” provision because the parties had negotiated and presented the court with a stipulated 24 protective order that did not contain such a provision, and the court was unwilling to presume 25 that the Defendants would violate their obligations under the protective order.

26 The court peppered Mr. Glassman with a number of questions. The court’s initial 27 concern was that Plaintiffs’ discovery responses contained a battery of boilerplate objections 28 which concluded with language to the effect that, without waiving these objections the Plaintiffs

1 would produce all non-privileged documents. No privilege log was served and it was impossible 2 to tell from the way the responses were worded whether the objections were made “for the 3 record” but all responsive documents had been produced, or whether responsive documents had 4 been withheld on relevance, privilege, or a multiple other objections grounds. The court asked 5 what documents had been produced to defense counsel up until the time of the hearing. Mr.
6 Glassman responded that Plaintiffs had “produced a host of declarations from investors and 7 Cohen Asset Management Properties.” Transcript of Hearing (Dkt. #90) 10:4-12. The court 8 then asked whether Plaintiffs had provided “any other documents that support your liability or 9 damages theory of the case?” Id. 13-15. Mr. Glassman responded that additional documents had 10 not been produced because defense counsel would not accept the “kind of stipulation that we 11 want” because the client was concerned about what Mr. Hansen would do with the information 12 provided. Id. 13-22.

13 The court was candidly frustrated with Mr. Glassman’s verbal gymnastics and evasive 14 responses to the court’s inquiries. More than once the court asked Mr. Glassman to simply 15 answer yes or no whether any documents other than declarations had been produced supporting 16 Plaintiffs’ liability and damages claims. Mr. Glassman responded “a small amount” but that 17 Plaintiffs were prepared to produce additional responsive documents as soon as a stipulation and 18 order preventing Mr. Hansen from reviewing them was entered.

19 The court specifically inquired whether the documents in the binder which Mr. Glassman 20 described as “very, very extensive” for each property were the “only documents that you intend 21 to rely upon to support your claims of your client’s damages arising out of the actions that are the 22 subject of this complaint?” Id. 14:14-19. Mr. Glassman asked that the court repeat the question.
23 Id. 20. The court did: “Are these the only documents you intend to rely upon to support all of 24 the complaint allegations you made in this case, including your damages?” Id. 21-23. Mr.
25 Glassman responded that a psychiatrist would testify about Mr. Cohen’s emotional distress as 26 would Mr. Cohen, and that Plaintiffs would probably have an expert testify to the various ways 27 Mr. Cohen earned money and fees “but there will be no testimony whatsoever with respect to 28 any specific sum of money or sums of money that were lost as a consequence.” Id. 14:24-15:7.

1 This caused the court to ask how Mr. Cohen had come up with the $100 million damage amount 2 claimed in Mr. Cohen's discovery responses. Mr. Glassman responded that "we came up with it 3 based upon my experience as a media lawyer for approximately forty years; other judgments; 4 based on the fact that Steve Wynn , , , was awarded $40 million . . . the only damages that were 5 presented to the jury in the Wynn case recently were presumed damages." Id. 15:8-18.

6 The court was not satisfied with this response and pointed out that the way that Plaintiffs'
7 discovery responses were worded suggested that Plaintiffs had a way of calculating the $100 8 million estimate beyond an argument that could be made to the jury. Id. 19-23. Mr. Glassman 9 indicated that the damages claimed were personal to Mr. Cohen and based on the fact that he is 10 known in many business communities and cities throughout the United States. Id. 15:24-16.
11 The court again asked what documents the Plaintiffs intended to rely upon to support allegations 12 both on liability and damages because the other side was entitled to that information. Id. 16:5-9.
13 Mr. Glassman again responded that all of the documents were either in the binder, consisted of 14 Mr. Cohen's testimony, and that Plaintiffs' damages were "obviously impossible to calculate." 15 Id. 10-25. Mr. Glassman acknowledged that this sounded unusual that a jury would have the 16 opportunity to make an award of damages based on a presumption. Id. 17:20-22.

17 The court repeatedly questioned Mr. Glassman to test his arguments that Plaintiffs simply 18 had no damages that were capable of mathematical computation and that the only damages 19 Plaintiffs were claiming were presumed. The court finally tested Mr. Glassman's representations 20 by asking whether the Plaintiffs could "live with an order" precluding Plaintiffs from introducing 21 any evidence of actual damages. Id. 19:10-18. Mr. Glassman again responded, "I know of no 22 actual damages." Id. 17-20. Mr. Glassman went on to make statements that the Plaintiffs had 23 "no way of knowing, it was impossible to calculate the exact amount of money" the Defendants' 24 conduct caused, and that there was no way to calculate the Plaintiffs lost "X number of dollars" 25 as a result of the Defendants' conduct. These arguments were not, as the opposition to this 26 motion claims, limited to the defamation or defamation per se claims. Mr. Glassman assured the 27 court that he was "not trying to play hide the ball," (Id. 22:9-10) and that he would provide 28

1 “every bit of information that we have that supports a damage claim.” Id. 15-16. Mr. Glassman 2 continued to represent that the only damages the Plaintiffs were seeking in this case were 3 presumed damages. The court made it clear:

4 Nobody is telling you that you cannot present a presumed damages case. What I 5 am trying to tell you loud and clear is that if you have documents that support your liability theories or your damages theories, you’re required to produce them.

6 Id. 25:11-15.

7 Counsel for Defendants had the last word in rebuttal and used it to point out that the 8 complaint allegations contain claims that require proof of actual damages, not presumed 9 damages. Id. 26:19-25.

10 With repeated assurances from Plaintiffs’ counsel that the only damages claimed were 11 presumed damages, or damages for which a monetary calculation was impossible, the court only 12 compelled the Plaintiffs to supplement certain discovery responses that were ambiguous. The 13 supplementation was ordered precisely to require the Plaintiffs to plainly specify that the only 14 damages claimed in this case were presumed damages and that Plaintiffs were not claiming any 15 damages that were capable of mathematical calculation. The court entered a written Order (Dkt.
16 #91) following the hearing which specifically warned the Plaintiffs that failure to comply with 17 their discovery obligations and the court’s order would result in preclusion sanctions.

18 I. Applicable Law.

19 A. Rule 26(a).

20 Rule 26(a)(1)(A) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requires parties to make initial 21 disclosures “without awaiting a discovery request.” Rule 26(a)(1)(A)(iii) requires a plaintiff to 22 provide “a computation of each category of damages claim” and make documents or other 23 evidentiary material on which the computation was based available for inspection and copying.
24 According to the advisory committee note to Rule 26, this requirement is “the functional 25 equivalent of a standing Request for Production under Rule 34.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 26 advisory 26 committee’s note to 1993 Amendment.

27 Rule 26(e)(1) requires a party making initial disclosures to “supplement or correct its 28 disclosures or responses . . . in a timely manner if the party learns that in some material respect

1 the disclosure or response is incomplete or incorrect, and that the additional or corrective 2 information has not otherwise been known to the other parties during the discovery process or in 3 writing.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1). The advisory committee’s note to the 1993 Amendment 4 indicate that “a major purpose” of the Rule 26(a) initial disclosure requirement “is to accelerate 5 the exchange of basic information about the case and to eliminate the paperwork involved in 6 requesting such information.” Id.

7 A party who fails to comply with its initial disclosure requirements and duty to timely 8 supplement or correct disclosures or responses may not use any information not disclosed or 9 supplemented “to supply evidence on a motion, at a hearing, or at trial, unless the failure was 10 substantially justified or is harmless.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 27(c)(1). Yeti by Molly, Ltd. v. Deckers 11 Outdoor Corp., 259 F.3d 1101, 1106 (9th Cir. 2001). A party facing sanctions under Rule 12 37(c)(1) for failing to make its initial disclosures or timely supplement or correct incomplete or 13 incorrect responses bears the burden of establishing that its failure to disclose the required 14 information was substantially justified or is harmless. Torres v. City of L.A., 548 F.3d 1197, 15 1213 (9th Cir. 2008).

16 B. Rule 16(f).

17 Rule 16(f) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure authorizes the court to impose 18 sanctions on a party’s motion or on its own motion, including any sanction authorized by Rule 19 37(b)(2)(A)(ii-vii), if a party or its attorney fails to obey a scheduling order or other pretrial 20 order. Id. Sanctions for failure to obey a discovery order include, among other things, striking a 21 party’s pleadings in whole or in part or rendering a default judgment against the disobedient 22 party. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(b)(2)(A)(iii), (vi).

23 Rule 16(f) gives the court broad discretion to sanction attorneys and parties who fail to 24 comply with reasonable case management orders of the court so that they “fulfill their high duty 25 to insure the expeditious and sound management of the preparation of cases for trial.” Matter of 26 Sanctions of Baker, 744 F.2d 1438, 1440 (10th Cir. 1994) (en banc). The Ninth Circuit has held 27 that the purpose of Rule 16 is “to encourage forceful judicial management.” Sherman v. United 28 States, 801 F.2d 1133, 1135 (9th Cir. 1986); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 16 advisory committee’s

1 note (stating “explicit reference to sanctions reinforces the rule’s intention to encourage forceful 2 judicial management.”) Violations of Rule 16 are neither technical nor trivial. Martin Family 3 Trust v. Heco-Nostalgia Enterprises, Co., 186 F.R.D. 601, 603 (E.D. Ca. 1999). Rule 16 is 4 critical to the court’s management of its docket and prevents unnecessary delays in adjudicating 5 cases. Id. The Ninth Circuit has emphasized that a case management order “is not a frivolous 6 piece of paper, idly entered, which can be cavalierly disregarded by counsel without peril.”
7 Johnson v. Mammoth Recreations, Inc., 975 F.2d 604, 610 (9th Cir. 1992) (internal quotations 8 and citations omitted). Disregard of a court order undermines the court’s ability to control its 9 docket and rewards the indolent and cavalier. Id.

10 Violations of a scheduling order may result in sanctions including dismissal under Rule 11 37(b)(2)(C). Dreith v. Nu Image, Inc., 648 F.3d 779, 787 (9th Cir. 2011) (internal quotations 12 omitted). The goal of Rule 16 is to get cases decided on the merits. In re: Phenylpropranolamine 13 (PPA) Products Liab. Litig., 460 F.3d 1217, 1227 (9th Cir. 2006). Rule 16(f) “puts teeth into 14 these objectives by permitting the judge to make such orders as are just for a party’s failure to 15 obey a scheduling or pretrial order, including dismissal.” Id.

16 C. Rule 37.

17 Rule 37 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure authorizes a wide range of sanctions for a 18 party’s failure to engage in discovery. The court has the authority under Rule 37(b) to impose 19 litigation-ending sanctions. The Rule authorizes sanctions for a party's failure to make 20 disclosures or cooperate in discovery. Rule 37(c)(1) provides, in relevant part:

21 A party that without substantial justification fails to disclose information required 22 by Rule 26(a) or 26(e)(1), or to amend a prior response to discovery as required 23 by Rule 26(e)(2), is not, unless such failure is harmless, permitted to use as evidence at a trial, at a hearing, or on a motion any witness or information not so disclosed.

24 Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1). Rule 37 “gives teeth” to the disclosure requirements of Rule 26 by 25 forbidding the use at trial of any information that is not properly disclosed. Goodman v. Staples 26 The Office Superstore, 644 F.3d 817, 827 (9th Cir.2011). Rule 37(c)(1) is a “self-executing, 27 automatic” sanction designed to provide a strong inducement for disclosure. Id. The 1993 28 amendments to Rule 37 were “a recognized broadening of the sanctioning power.” Yeti by

1 Molly, 259 F.3d at 1106. Rule 37(a)(3) explicitly provides that an evasive or incomplete 2 disclosure, answer, or response to a discovery obligation “is to be treated as a failure to disclose, 3 answer, or respond.” Id.

4 In the Ninth Circuit, “[t]he district court is given broad discretion in supervising the 5 pretrial phase of litigation.” Continental Lab., 195 F.R.D. at 677 (quoting Miller v. Safeco Title
6 Ins. Co., 758 F.2d 364, 369 (9th Cir.1985)). If full compliance with Rule 26(a) is not made, Rule 7 37(c)(1) mandates some sanction, “the degree and severity of which are within the discretion of 8 the trial judge.” Keener v. United States, 181 F.R.D. 639, 641 (D. Mont.1998). The Ninth 9 Circuit reviews a district court's decision to sanction for a violation of the discovery rules for 10 abuse of discretion which gives “particularly wide latitude to the district court's discretion to 11 issue sanctions under Rule 37(c)(1).” Yeti by Molly Ltd., 259 F.3d at 1106 (citing Ortiz–Lopez v.
12 Sociedad Espanola de Auxilio Mutuo Y Beneficiencia de Puerto Rico, 248 F.3d 29, 34 (1st 13 Cir.2001)).

14 In Yeti by Molly, the Ninth Circuit recognized that some courts have upheld preclusion 15 sanctions under Rule 37(c)(1) for a litigant’s failure to comply with the requirements of Rule 26, 16 even where they would preclude a litigant’s entire claim or defense. Id. at 1106. The Ninth 17 Circuit has explicitly rejected the notion the district court is required to make a finding of 18 willfulness or bad faith to exclude damages evidence when preclusion sanctions do not amount 19 to dismissal of a cause of action. Hoffman v. Constr. Protective Servs., Inc., 541 F.3d 1175, 20 1180 (9th Cir. 2008). However, when preclusion sanctions amount to dismissal of a claim, the 21 district court is required to make a finding of willfulness, fault, or bad faith, and to consider the 22 availability of lesser sanctions. R&R Sales, Inc. v. Insurance Company of Pennsylvania, 673 23 F.3d 1240, 1247 (9th Cir. 2012).

24 The Ninth Circuit has identified five factors that a district court must consider before 25 dismissing a case or declaring a default: (1) the public’s interest in expeditious resolution of 26 litigation; (2) the court’s need to manage its docket; (3) the risk of prejudice to the other party; 27 (4) the public policy favoring the disposition of cases on their merits; and (5) the availability of 28

1 less drastic sanctions. Payne v. Exxon Corp., 121 F.3d 503, 507 (9th Cir. 1997); Stars' Desert
2 Inn Hotel & Country Club, Inc. v. Hwang, 105 F.3d 521, 524 (9th Cir. 1997).

3 In most cases the first two factors weigh in favor of the imposition of sanctions, while the 4 fourth factor cuts against dismissal. The Ninth Circuit evaluates whether a district court properly 5 considered the availability of lesser sanctions by examining whether the court: (1) explicitly 6 discussed the possibility of less drastic sanctions and explained why alternative sanctions would 7 be inappropriate; (2) implemented alternative sanctions before ordering default; and (3) warned 8 the party of the possibility of default before actually ordering it. Hwang, 105 F.3d at 524 (citing 9 Hyde & Drath v. Baker, 24 F.3d 1162, 1166 (9th Cir. 1994)); see also Valley Eng'rs v. Electric 10 Eng'rs Co., 158 F.3d 1051, 1057 (9th Cir. 1998). Ninth Circuit decisions “suggest that a district 11 court’s warning to a party that his failure to obey the court’s order will result in dismissal can 12 satisfy the ‘consideration of alternatives’ requirement.” Ferdik v. Bonzelet, 963 F.2d 1258, 1262 13 (9th Cir. 1991). The key factors the court should consider are prejudice and availability of lesser 14 sanctions. Id. (citing Wanderer v. Johnston, 910 F.2d 652, 656 (9th Cir. 1990)).

15 Due process requires that neither dismissal nor preclusion of evidence that is tantamount 16 to dismissal may be imposed when failure to comply is due to circumstances beyond the 17 recalcitrant party’s control. United States v. Sumitomo Marine & Fire Ins. Co., 617 F.2d 1365, 18 1369 (9th Cir. 1980). The Ninth Circuit has specifically encouraged dismissal, however, where 19 the district court determines “that counsel or a party has acted willfully or in bad faith in failing 20 to comply with rules of discovery or with court orders enforcing the rules or in flagrant disregard 21 of those rules or orders.” Sigliano v. Mendoza, 642 F.2d 309, 310 (9th Cir. 1981) (quoting G-K 22 Properties v. Redevelopment Agency, 577 F.2d 645, 647 (9th Cir. 1978) (citing National Hockey 23 League v. Metropolitan Hockey Club, Inc., 427 U.S. 639 (1976))).

24 II. Analysis and Decision.

25 Applying these principles the court finds that Plaintiffs’ failure to make required 26 discovery disclosures concerning their damages was willful and in bad faith and that preclusion 27 sanctions are warranted. Specifically, the court finds that the Plaintiffs should be precluded from 28 claiming or introducing any evidence of quantifiable economic harm attributable to Defendants’

1 alleged conduct. Plaintiffs have steadfastly maintained in this case that they were not required to 2 provide a damages calculation by category and method with supporting documentation because 3 their damages were not capable of mathematical calculation. However, in response to 4 Defendants' motion for summary judgment Plaintiffs have taken a substantially and materially 5 different position about what damages Plaintiffs are required to plead and prove.

6 Defendants' motion for summary judgment argues summary judgment should be 7 entered on those claims which require proof of actual damages, that is, quantifiable monetary 8 losses. This decision does not presume to decide any of the issues before the district judge in the 9 motion for summary judgment. However, because this decision granting Defendants' request for 10 preclusion sanctions may be adopted by the district judge, and potentially result in dismissal of 11 one or more of Plaintiffs' claims, the court will apply the five factors the Ninth Circuit requires 12 for consideration of case-dispositive sanctions.

13 As in most cases, the first two factors weigh in favor of preclusion sanctions. The 14 parties submitted a proposed discovery plan and scheduling order (Dkt. #28) December 18, 2012, 15 which requested special scheduling review and more time than deemed presumptively reasonable 16 under LR 26-1(e). The court set the matter for hearing and granted the parties' request for 17 special scheduling review and the additional time requested. See Minutes of Proceedings (Dkt.
18 #32). The court entered discovery plan and scheduling order on January 8, 2013 (Dkt. #31)
19 which established a July 29, 2013 discovery cutoff, and August 28, 2013 deadline for filing 20 dispositive motions. On July 10, 2013, the parties submitted a Stipulation (Dkt. #80) requesting 21 a 90-day extension of the discovery plan and scheduling order deadlines to exchange initial 22 expert disclosures indicating additional time was needed to obtain discovery. The court granted 23 the parties' request at a status and scheduling conference held June 25, 2013. See Minutes of 24 Proceedings (Dkt #79).

25 On September 9, 2013, the parties submitted an additional Stipulation to Amend the 26 Discovery Plan and Scheduling Order Deadlines (Dkt. #98) requesting an additional 15-day 27 extension indicating the time was needed to complete depositions of non-parties and Plaintiffs' 28 six experts which were disclosed August 30, 2013. The court granted this stipulation. See Order

1 (Dkt. #99). Discovery closed and Defendants timely filed a Motion for Summary Judgment 2 (Dkt. #119) October 30, 2013, after the close of discovery in accordance with the Local Rules of 3 Practice, and the court's discovery plan and scheduling order deadlines.

4 LR 26-1(e) is structured to encourage the parties to complete discovery before filing 5 dispositive motions so that the record is fully developed and summary judgment motions are not 6 prematurely filed. Defendants relied upon Plaintiffs' discovery disclosures and representations 7 to counsel and the court that Plaintiffs were not claiming any actual or quantifiable monetary 8 damages in this case in preparing their case and then filing their motion for summary judgment.
9 The court's scheduling orders are designed to accomplish the expeditious resolution of cases, and 10 to manage the court's docket. Plaintiffs' failure to provide discovery of their damages theories 11 and supporting evidence within the time allowed by the court's scheduling orders is disruptive, a 12 violation of the discovery rules discussed in this order, and displays an utter disregard of court 13 imposed deadlines established to bring this case to expeditious resolution.

14 Defendants are prejudiced by Plaintiffs change in position and failure to make discovery 15 disclosures concerning the damages theories asserted, for the first time, in response to 16 Defendants' motion for summary judgment. The only potential remedy other than preclusion 17 would require re opening of discovery, cost the Defendants more time and money, render the 18 work done on the summary judgment motion largely worthless and further delay resolution of 19 this case on its merits.

20 The fourth factor, public policy favoring disposition of cases on their merits, weighs 21 against ordering preclusion sanctions. With respect to the fifth factor, the court specifically 22 addressed preclusion of undisclosed damages information at the July 13, 2013 hearing, and in the 23 written Order (Dkt. #91) following the hearing which granted in part and denied in part 24 Defendants' request to compel supplemental responses to the Defendants' answers to 25 interrogatories and responses to request for production of documents. As indicated, the court 26 required supplemental responses with respect to certain discovery requests and not others 27 because of Plaintiffs' repeated representations that Plaintiffs had no quantifiable monetary 28 damages. The court specifically inquired of counsel for Plaintiffs whether the Plaintiffs "could

1 live with” an order precluding Plaintiffs from introducing any evidence of actual damages to test 2 the sincerity of these representations. Mr. Glassman responded “I know of no actual damages.”
3 Transcript of Hearing (Dkt. #90) 19:17-20.

4 Mr. Glassman went on to make additional statements that Plaintiffs had “no way of 5 knowing, it was impossible to calculate the exact amount of money” the Defendants’ conduct 6 caused, and that there was “no way” to calculate the Plaintiffs’ lost “X number of dollars” as a 7 result of the Defendants’ conduct. As indicated earlier in this order, these arguments were not, 8 as Plaintiffs’ opposition to this motion now claims, limited to the defamation or defamation per 9 se claims. Plaintiffs were explicitly warned that preclusion sanctions would be ordered for a 10 violation of their discovery obligations and representations to the court and opposing counsel.
11 Under these circumstances, less drastic sanctions would reward the conduct Plaintiffs were 12 warned was impermissible and would not be tolerated.

13 To permit Plaintiffs to now claim that they have quantifiable monetary damages in any 14 context in this case—in motion practice or at trial—would reward the type of gamesmanship and 15 trial by ambush the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the cases construing them were 16 designed to avoid.

17 Counsel for Plaintiffs successfully persuaded the court that Plaintiffs should not be 18 compelled to supplement discovery responses designed to obtain information about Plaintiffs’ 19 damages contentions and supporting documentation because they were not required to plead or 20 prove damages capable of monetary calculation on any of their claims. Allowing the Plaintiffs to 21 maintain an inconsistent position in response to Defendants’ motion for summary judgment or at 22 trial would give the Plaintiffs an unfair advantage and impose an unfair detriment on the 23 Defendants. It would allow and encourage the type of chicanery and manipulation of the judicial 24 process that flies in the face of fundamental fairness.

25 For the reasons stated, and having carefully reviewed and considered the moving and 26 responsive papers and voluminous supporting exhibits, declarations and transcripts,

27 IT IS ORDERED that:
28

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

1. Defendants' Motion to Exclude Evidence Regarding Plaintiffs' Actual Damages (Dkt. #150) is GRANTED to the extent that Plaintiffs shall be precluded from claiming or introducing any evidence of quantifiable economic harm attributable to the Defendants' alleged conduct for any purpose in this case, including motion practice and trial.

2. Plaintiffs' Motion to Strike Defendants' Sur-Reply (Dkt #175) is DENIED.

DATED this 7th day of May, 2014.

PEGGY A. LEEN
UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE