I. BACKGROUND

26
27
28

This dispute arises from a series of three marriages between plaintiff Vy Nhu Hoang Dinh (“Dinh”), a Vietnamese citizen, and three American citizens: Jason Prince (“Prince”), Joey Duran (“Duran”), and plaintiff Man Van Chau (“Chau”). Dinh is presently married to Chau.¹

In March 2002, Dinh entered the United States on an F-1 non-immigrant student visa.² In May 2004, when Dinh was a student at the College of Southern Nevada in Las Vegas (“CSN”),

² For F-1 student visa requirements, see 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(F) and 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(f). “[A]n F-1 student is admitted [to the United States] for duration of status. Duration of status is defined as the time during which an F-1 student is pursuing a full course of study at an educational institution approved by the Service for attendance by foreign students, or engaging in authorized practical training following completion of studies.” 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(f)(5)(i). In some circumstances, a student admitted on an F-1 visa can extend her stay upon employment. Id. § 214.2(f)(5)(vi).

1 Dinh's mother, Thi Uyen Hoang ("Hoang"), called Dinh from Vietnam to tell her that the family
2 was in financial trouble and that Hoang would not be able to keep paying Dinh's educational 3 expenses. Hoang told Dinh about a matchmaker Hoang had met in Vietnam, Mr. Hoa ("Hoa"), 4 and that Dinh might have to marry someone of Hoa's and Hoang's choosing in order to keep 5 studying in the United States. Dinh asserts that arranged marriages are quite common in 6 Vietnam, as is obeying one's parents' selection of a spouse.

7 A. The Prince Marriage

8 One month later, on June 2, 2004, Dinh met with Hoa in person in Utah. She paid him 9 $12,000 and he introduced her to Prince. That same day, Dinh and Prince were married.
10 Immediately after the ceremony, Dinh returned to Las Vegas. About ten days later, she received 11 a "divorce paper" from Hoa concerning her marriage to Prince. (AR 126.) Dinh contacted her 12 mother, who told Dinh to do as Hoa said. Dinh's divorce from Prince was final on October 27, 13 2004. (AR 503-05.)

14 Sometime between November 2 and 22, 2004, Dinh applied to two colleges in Utah:
15 University of Utah College of Nursing and Westminster College International. (AR 105-09.)

16 B. The Duran Marriage

17 Hoang ordered Dinh to go to Utah in late November 2004. Upon arriving in Utah, Hoa 18 introduced her to Duran.³ They were married on November 26, 2004. Immediately following the 19 ceremony, Dinh signed a Form I-485 Application to Register Permanent Resident or Adjust 20 Status, although she asserts that she did not date that form.

21 Dinh immediately returned to Las Vegas to finish the academic semester at CSN. She 22 claims that she intended to return to Utah in January 2005 to cohabitate with Duran and establish 23 a married life with him.

24 By January 2005, however, Dinh asserts that Duran had stopped returning her phone calls 25 and she understood that he did not want to establish a life with her. Dinh called her mother, who 26

27 ³ The record is unclear as to whether they were married on the same day as their first meeting or 28 whether they met the day before.

1 gave Dinh permission to divorce Duran. Dinh claims that she instructed her mother to tell Hoa to 2 cancel the arrangement and not to file any of the immigration paperwork associated with Dinh's 3 marriage to Duran. Hoang agrees that she "called it off." (Hoang Aff., AR 130.) It is unclear if 4 Hoa or Duran ever received the message that Dinh did not want the immigration paperwork to be 5 filed.

6 Later in January 2005, Dinh traveled to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania to visit a friend in 7 dental school. While there, she met Chau. They immediately hit it off and began dating. (Dinh 8 Aff. ¶¶ 12–13, AR 118.)

9 On March 30, 2005, United States Citizenship and Immigration Services ("USCIS")
10 received the Form I-485 signed by Dinh and a Form I-130 Petition for Alien Relative with Duran 11 as the petitioner and Dinh as the beneficiary. The Form I-130 Petition serves to classify the 12 beneficiary as an immediate family member of the petitioner; the Form I-485 serves to adjust the 13 beneficiary's status to temporary legal permanent resident ("LPR") once the immediate family 14 classification is granted.

15 On August 30, 2005, the divorce decree for the Dinh-Duran marriage was entered in Utah.
16 (AR 500–01.)

17 On March 6, 2006, USCIS rejected the immigration forms filed in March 2005 in relation 18 to the Dinh-Duran marriage. (AR 538.)

19 C. The Chau Marriage

20 On October 4, 2006, Dinh and Chau married in Las Vegas. After finishing dental school, 21 Chau moved to Las Vegas, where he and Dinh still reside. On October 12, 2006, Chau executed 22 a Form I-130 Petition on Dinh's behalf, and Dinh executed another Form I-485 on her own 23 behalf. On October 23, 2006, they submitted these forms to USCIS. (AR 133–36, 514–15.) On 24 the Form I-485, Dinh indicated that she had never before applied for permanent resident status in 25 the United States. (AR 134.)

26 On October 10, 2007, the U.S. Attorney in Utah charged Duran with misdemeanor aiding 27 and abetting the attempted entry of an illegal alien under 8 U.S.C. §§ 2 and 1325(a)(3). (AR 282– 28 83.) Duran pled guilty, and, on November 2, 2007, a judgment and conviction was rendered

1 against Duran. (AR 284.) Hoa was separately indicted for a conspiracy to arrange marriages
2 between American men and Vietnamese women in which the men allegedly received a kickback 3 and the women were allegedly unaware of the scam. (AR 315–87.) Dinh was never criminally 4 indicted.

5 On February 14, 2008, Plaintiffs filed a petition for writ of mandamus in this Court, 6 seeking a mandate that USCIS adjudicate the pending Form I-130 Petition. Dinh v. Mukasey, 7 2:08-cv-00196-JCM-LRL. The case was dismissed upon a stipulation by the parties to hold the 8 interview necessary to process the Form I-130 Petition.

9 On June 16, 2008, USCIS interviewed Dinh and Chau. During the interview, Dinh
10 allegedly learned for the first time about Duran’s conviction. On July 1, USCIS issued a Notice 11 of Intent to Deny (“NOID”) to Chau under 8 U.S.C. § 1154(b) based on Duran’s conviction for 12 marriage fraud in relation to the Dinh-Duran marriage. Chau did not respond to the NOID, and, 13 on December 15, USCIS denied the Form I-130.

14 Dinh’s then-counsel, Mr. Albert C. Lum, recommended that she not appeal the ruling, but 15 instead be placed in removal proceedings so she could relitigate the Form I-130 Petition. On May 16 5, 2009, Dinh was placed in removal proceedings. She was initially charged with immigration 17 fraud under 8 U.S.C. § 1227(a)(1)(B) and overstaying her visa under 8 U.S.C. § 1227(a)(1)(A).
18 On October 5, the Government withdrew the fraud charge.

19 On November 15, 2009, Chau filed a new Form I-130 Petition. (AR 486–87.) On 20 February 1, 2010, Dinh and Chau interviewed with USCIS. On April 28, 2010, USCIS denied 21 the Form I-130 Petition on the grounds that there was no evidence that the Dinh-Duran marriage 22 was in good faith. (AR 389–92.)

23 D. The First Appeal to BIA

24 On May 14, 2010, Chau filed a timely appeal with the Board of Immigration Appeals 25 (“BIA”). On September 30, 2011, the BIA vacated USCIS’s decision and remanded with 26 instructions for USCIS to issue a NOID to Chau. On February 6, 2012, USCIS issued the NOID
27 to Chau. (AR 74–79.)
28

1 On March 13, 2012, Chau responded to the NOID. (AR 67–137.) Chau’s response
2 contained arguments which are substantially similar to the arguments made in Plaintiffs’ response 3 to Defendants’ motion for summary judgment. Attached to the response were (i) copies of 4 various websites purporting to explain Vietnamese tradition and custom, including arranged 5 marriages; (ii) e-mails substantiating that Dinh applied to two colleges in Utah for the spring of 6 2005; (iii) Dinh’s CSN transcripts; (iv) affidavits by Dinh and Hoang; (v) Dinh’s flight itinerary 7 to Philadelphia in January 2005; and (vi) the Form I-485 that Dinh submitted on October 23, 8 2006. Chau did not submit any documents showing any property or financial arrangements 9 between Dinh and Duran.

10 E. The Second Appeal to BIA

11 On March 20, 2012, USCIS again denied the Form I-130 Petition. (AR 38–46.) On April 12 17, Dinh appealed to the BIA. On September 11, 2012, the BIA adopted USCIS’s opinion and 13 dismissed the appeal. (AR 4–6.)

14 F. The Instant Case

15 On October 11, 2012, Plaintiffs filed the Complaint. (Dkt. No. 1.) The defendants are 16 (i) the United States of America; (ii) Jeh C. Johnson, in his official capacity as Secretary of the 17 Department of Homeland Security;⁴ (iii) Eric H. Holder, Jr., in his official capacity as Attorney 18 General of the United States; (iv) Alejandro Mayorkas, in his official capacity as Director of 19 USCIS; and (v) Leander B. Holston, in his official capacity as Officer in Charge of the USCIS 20 local office in Las Vegas, Nevada.

21 Plaintiffs assert that this Court has jurisdiction under section 702 of the Administrative 22 Procedure Act (“APA”), 5 U.S.C. § 702, the Mandamus Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1361, and the 23 Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, as amended (“INA”), 8 U.S.C. §§ 1101–1537.
24 Plaintiffs seek relief pursuant to the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201–2202, the All 25 Writs Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1651, and the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. §§ 704–706. In 26

27 ⁴ In the Complaint, Plaintiffs named Janet Napolitano as a defendant in her official capacity as 28 Secretary of DHS. Jeh C. Johnson has since replaced Ms. Napolitano in that position.

1 particular, Plaintiffs seek judicial declarations that (1) 28 U.S.C. § 1154(c) does not bar Dinh 2 from receiving immigration benefits; (2) Dinh entered the marriage with Duran in good faith; and 3 (3) Dinh did not seek to obtain the status of LPR based upon the marriage to Duran. Plaintiffs 4 also request an order that USCIS re-adjudicate the operative Form I-130 Petition (relating to the 5 Dinh-Chau marriage) and that USCIS cannot rely on 28 U.S.C. § 1154(c) to deny that petition.
6 Finally, Plaintiffs request costs and fees under 28 U.S.C. § 2412.

7 8 II. ANALYSIS

9 A. Standing

10 Defendants challenge Dinh’s standing because she is the intended beneficiary of a Form I-11 130 Petition rather than a petitioner. The standing inquiry involves “both constitutional 12 limitations on federal-court jurisdiction and prudential limitations on its exercise.” Warth v.
13 Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 498 (1975).

14 A party has constitutional standing under Article III of the U.S. Constitution if she has 15 suffered an injury-in-fact that is fairly traceable to the challenged action of the defendant and that 16 likely will be redressed by a favorable decision. Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 17 560–61 (1992). The agency’s denial of the I-130 petition certainly injured Dinh as she was thus 18 prevented from adjusting her status to lawful permanent resident on the basis of being Chau’s 19 wife. The denial is obviously traceable to the agency, and this Court is capable of redressing the 20 injury.

21 Prudential standing refers to a body of “judicially self-imposed limits on the exercise of 22 federal jurisdiction,” Allen v. Wright, 468 U.S. 737, 751 (1984), “founded in concern about the 23 proper—and properly limited—role of the courts in a democratic society.” Warth, 422 U.S. at 24 498. As relevant here, one of the requirements for prudential standings is that “the plaintiff 25 generally must assert his own legal rights and interests, and cannot rest his claim to relief on the 26 legal rights or interests of third parties.” Valley Forge Christian Coll. v. Am. United for 27 Separation of Church & State, Inc., 454 U.S. 464, 474 (1982) (internal quotation marks and 28 citation omitted). In other words, third-party standing is not allowed. The applicable standard is 1 “whether the interest sought to be protected by the complainant is arguably within the zone of 2 interest to be protected or regulated by the statute . . . in question.” Bennett v. Spear, 520 U.S.

3 154, 163 (1997) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). Courts have repeatedly held 4 that the beneficiary of a Form I-130 Petition, such as Dinh, is within the zone of interests of 8 5 U.S.C. § 1154(a), which, among other things, establishes the petitioning procedure for an alien 6 spouse to obtain classification as an “immediate relative.” See, e.g., Bangura v. Hansen, 434 F.3d 7 487, 499 (6th Cir. 2006); Taneja v. Smith, 795 F.2d 355, 357 n.7 (4th Cir. 1986) (collecting 8 cases); Oddo v. Reno, 17 F. Supp. 2d 529, 531 (E.D. Va. 1998).

9 Therefore, Dinh has both constitutional and prudential standing.

10 B. Jurisdiction under the Mandamus Act

11 Defendants contend the Court lacks jurisdiction under the Mandamus Act, 28 U.S.C.
12 § 1361. (Mot. Summ. J. at 13 n.6, Dkt. No. 13.) They are correct. The Supreme Court has held 13 that mandamus is an “extraordinary remedy” and that “petitioners must show that they lack 14 adequate alternative means to obtain the relief they seek.” Mallard v. U.S. Dist. Court for S. Dist.
15 of Iowa, 490 U.S. 296, 309 (1989). Mandamus is unavailable here because the APA provides an 16 alternative means of relief for Plaintiffs. Independence Min. Co., Inc. v. Babbitt, 105 F.3d 502, 17 507 (9th Cir. 1997); Dong v. Chertoff, 513 F. Supp. 2d 1158, 1161 (N.D. Cal. 2007). As a 18 practical matter, however, Defendants gain nothing by nixing the Mandamus Act claim because 19 “the result and the analysis that flow from [the APA and the Mandamus Act] are the same.”
20 Dong, 513 F. Supp. 2d at 1161; Independence Min. Co., 105 F.3d at 507 (“[T]he Supreme Court
21 has construed a claim seeking mandamus [under the Mandamus Act] , in essence, as one for relief 22 under § 706 of the APA.” (citing Japan Whaling Ass’n v. Am. Cetacean Soc’y, 478 U.S. 221, 230 23 n.4 (1986))); Hernandez-Avalos v. I.N.S., 50 F.3d 842, 845 (10th Cir. 1995) (“A mandatory 24 injunction issued under the APA is essentially in the nature of mandamus.” (internal quotation 25 marks and citation omitted)). However, the lack of jurisdiction under the Mandamus Act does not 26 mandate dismissal of the case because jurisdiction is afforded under the APA.

1 C. Standard of Review / Summary Judgment

2 This Court has jurisdiction to review a final agency decision denying an I-130 petition on 3 the basis of marriage fraud under the judicial review provisions of the APA. Ginters v. Frazier, 4 614 F.3d 822, 828–29 (8th Cir. 2010); Sheikh v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 685 F. Supp. 2d 5 1076 (C.D. Cal. 2009). Under the APA, the Court reviews agency decisions to determine if they 6 are “arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law[.]” 5 7 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A). The Court’s review is limited to the administrative record that was before 8 the agency when the agency made its decision. See Camp v. Pitts, 411 U.S. 138, 142 (1973); 9 Baria v. Reno, 94 F.3d 1335, 1340 (9th Cir. 1996). An agency, in reaching its decision, “must 10 examine the relevant data and articulate a satisfactory explanation for its action including a 11 rational connection between the facts found and the choice made.” Motor Vehicle Mfrs. Ass’n of 12 U.S., Inc. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 463 U.S. 29, 43 (1983) (internal quotation marks 13 omitted). However, the Court’s scope of review is narrow; it should not substitute its judgment 14 for the agency’s. J & G Sales Ltd. v. Truscott, 473 F.3d 1043, 1051 (citing Motor Vehicle Mfrs.
15 Ass’n, 463 U.S. at 43).

16 The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provide for summary adjudication when “there is no 17 genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” 18 FED. R. CIV. P. 56(a). However, Rule 56’s “material-fact” standard does not apply here because 19 the Court’s role is limited to reviewing the administrative record. Zemeka, 2013 WL 6085633 at 20 *4, 5. The agency’s role is to resolve factual issues. Id. “[T]he function of the district court is to 21 determine whether or not as a matter of law the evidence in the administrative record permitted 22 the agency to make the decision it did.” Cottage Health Sys. v. Sebelius, 631 F. Supp. 2d 80, 89– 23 90 (D.D.C. 2009) (emphasis supplied). Therefore, Plaintiffs’ argument that numerous questions 24 of fact preclude summary judgment is incorrect.

25 D. I-130 Petitions and Sham Marriages

26 A U.S. citizen may petition for his spouse (the beneficiary) to be classified as an 27 “immediate relative” by filing a Form I-130 Petition for Alien Relative. 8 U.S.C.
28 § 1151(b)(2)(A)(i); 8 C.F.R. §§ 204.1(a)(1), 204.2(a). If granted, this classification allows the

1 spouse to “jump the line” and immediately apply for temporary lawful permanent resident 2 (“LPR”) status by filing a Form I-485 Application to Register Permanent Resident or Adjust 3 Status. 8 U.S.C. §§ 1151(b)(2), 1255(a).

4 USCIS, however, cannot approve a Form I-130 Petition if the beneficiary previously 5 entered a sham marriage to evade immigration laws. The applicable statute provides:

6 Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (b) of this section⁵ no petition shall 7 be approved if (1) the alien has previously been accorded, or has sought to be 8 accorded, an immediate relative or preference status as a spouse of a citizen of the 9 United States . . . by reason of marriage determined by the Attorney General to 10 have been entered into for the purpose of evading the immigration laws or (2) the 11 Attorney General has determined that the alien has attempted or conspired to enter 12 into a marriage for the purpose of evading the immigration laws.

13 8 U.S.C. § 1154(c). Put more simply, “[a] marriage entered into for the purpose of evading 14 immigration laws thus precludes a beneficiary from ever receiving ‘immediate relative’ status 15 from a subsequent I-130 petition.” Zemeka, 2013 WL 6085633 at *4.

16 On behalf of the Attorney General, a USCIS district director determines whether 17 § 1154(c) applies to any given petition. See Matter of Tawfik, 20 I. & N. Dec. 166, 168 (B.I.A.
18 1990). “In making that adjudication, the district director may rely on any relevant evidence 19 having its origin in prior Service proceedings involving the beneficiary, or in court proceedings 20 involving the prior marriage.” Id. However, the district director must make an independent 21 determination of whether the prior marriage was fraudulent based on the evidence before the 22 district director; she may not rely solely upon a prior determination of sham marriage. Id.

23 To reject an I-130 Petition on these grounds, a “reasonable inference” of a prior sham 24 marriage is insufficient; there must be “substantial and probative evidence” that the “beneficiary 25 entered into a marriage for the primary purpose of obtaining immigration benefits.” Id.; Damon 26 v. Ashcroft, 360 F.3d 1084, 1088 (9th Cir. 2004) (“Whether Sung Hee entered into the qualifying 27 marriage in good faith is an intrinsically fact-specific question reviewed under the substantial 28

⁵In relevant part, 8 U.S.C. § 1154(b) provides: “After an investigation of the facts in each case . . . , the Attorney General shall, if he determines that the facts stated in the petition are true and that the alien in behalf of whom the [Form I-130] petition is made is an immediate relative . . . or is eligible for preference . . . , approve the petition[.]” The mandatory “shall” of subsection (b) is modified by the language in subsection (c).

1 evidence standard.”). It is not necessary that the beneficiary obtained the desired benefit. 8
2 C.F.R. § 204.2(a)(ii). Under the deferential substantial evidence standard, an agency’s findings 3 may not be overturned “unless the evidence presented would compel a reasonable finder of fact to 4 reach a contrary result.” Family, Inc. v. U.S. Citizenship & Immigration Servs., 469 F.3d 1313, 5 1315 (9th Cir. 2006) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted, emphasis in original).

6 “The central question is whether the bride and groom intended to establish a life together 7 at the time they were married.” Laureano, 19 I. & N. Dec. at 2; cited with approval in Damon, 8 360 F.3d at 1088. “Evidence to establish intent could take many forms, including, but not limited 9 to, proof that the beneficiary has been listed as the petitioner’s spouse on insurance policies, 10 property leases, income tax forms, or bank accounts; and testimony or other evidence regarding 11 courtship, wedding ceremony, shared residence, and experiences.” Id.; see also 8 C.F.R.
12 § 204.2(a)(1)(i)(B) (listing similar types of documents). Evidence of post-marriage conduct is 13 relevant, but only insofar as it sheds light on the parties’ subjective intent at the time they were 14 married. Bark v. I.N.S., 511 F.2d 1200, 1202 (9th Cir. 1975); Laureano, 19 I. & N. Dec. at 2.

15 The legal standard is somewhat illogical. It is not necessarily true that a marriage entered 16 into without the intent to establish a life together was therefore entered into with the primary 17 purpose of evading the immigration laws. See Singh v. U.S. Dep’t of Justice, 461 F.3d 290, 294 18 n.3 (2d Cir. 2006) (“[Petitioner’s] failure to satisfy his burden of showing good faith is not 19 enough to establish that his first marriage was a sham intended to evade the country’s 20 immigration laws.” (emphasis in original)); Laura L. Lichter, Litigating the Denial of a Marriage-
21 Based Immigr. Petition Part I: Creating a Strategic Record, 11-09 IMMIGR. BRIEFINGS 1 (2011) 22 (noting the “significant conceptual distinction between the lack of evidence to carry a petitioner’s 23 burden and the presence of record materials showing an intent to defraud the government”). In an 24 analogous criminal case addressing fraudulent marriages, the Ninth Circuit elaborated on this 25 point:

26 Marriages for money or other ulterior gain are as ancient as mankind, yet may still 27 be genuine, and marriage fraud may be committed by one party to the marriage, or 28 a person who arranged the marriage, yet the other spouse may genuinely intend to marry. See Genesis 29:18–30 (Jacob honestly married, twice, but Laban had fraudulently caused him to marry Leah and thereby extorted an additional seven

1 years of work). The ulterior motive of financial benefit or immigration benefit 2 does not make the marriage a fraud, though it may be evidence that the marriage is 3 fraudulent.

4 United States v. Tagalicud, 84 F.3d 1180, 1185 (9th Cir. 1996).

5 The Ninth Circuit, however, in a recent opinion collapsed the two inquiries. “In 6 determining whether [the beneficiary] entered into her marriage in good faith, and not for the 7 purpose of procuring an immigration benefit, the central question is whether she and [her former 8 husband] intended to establish a life together at the time they were married.” Damon, 360 F.3d at 9 1088. Likewise, the Third Circuit recently held that where substantial evidence sustained the 10 conclusion that a couple did not intend to establish a life together, that marriage was fraudulent as 11 contracted for the purpose of evading the immigration laws. Malik v. Attorney Gen. of U.S., 659
12 F.3d 253, 257–58 (3d Cir. 2011); see also 3A AM. JUR. 2d Aliens & Citizens § 353 (2013)
13 (“[O]therwise valid marriages entered into by parties not intending to live together as husband 14 and wife are not recognized for immigration purposes.”).

15 The result of this collapsed inquiry is not as harsh as it may seem though. The BIA has 16 been deferential to the “myriad permutations of human relations” that may constitute a “life 17 together.” Lichter, supra, 11-08 IMMIGR. BRIEFINGS at *1 (citing Matter of Peterson, 12 I. & N.
18 Dec. 663 (B.I.A. 1968)). In Peterson, the BIA held that a marriage was bona fide where the 19 husband admitted marrying his immigrant spouse for the purpose of obtaining a housekeeper.
20 Peterson, 12 I. & N. Dec. at 664.

21 The Ninth Circuit has taken a similarly broad stance. Agencies and courts should not 22 impose their own subjective views of what constitutes the appropriate behavior of a married 23 couple or “what a ‘real’ marriage is.” Damon, 360 F.3d at 1089.

24 The concept of establishing a life as marital partners contains no federal dictate 25 about the kind of life that the partners may choose to lead. Any attempt to regulate 26 their life styles, such as prescribing the amount of time they must spend together, 27 or designating the manner in which either partner elects to spend his or her time, in 28 the guise of specifying the requirements of a bona fide marriage would raise serious constitutional questions. . . . Aliens cannot be required to have more conventional or more successful marriages than citizens.

Bark, 511 F.2d at 1202. The proper analytical focus is on the objective evidence of the parties’ subjective intent to establish a life together at the time of marriage. Damon, 360 F.3d at 1089

1 (“An immigration judge’s personal conjecture cannot be substituted for objective and substantial 2 evidence.” (internal quotation marks and citations omitted)).

3 The Government has the burden of providing substantial and probative evidence that the 4 prior marriage was a sham. Matter of Kahy, 19 I. & N. Dec. 803, 806 (B.I.A. 1988) (“[W]here 5 there is evidence in the record to indicate that the beneficiary has been an active participant in a 6 marriage fraud conspiracy, the burden shifts to the petitioner to establish that the beneficiary did 7 not seek nonquota or preference status based on a prior fraudulent marriage.”); Laureano, 19 I. &
8 N. Dec. at 2; SARAH B. IGNATIUS & ELISABETH S. STICKNEY, IMMIGR. LAW & FAMILY § 12:11 9 (2013); see Smolniakova, 422 F.3d at 1041. Although the lead BIA case, Kahy, states that the 10 burden shifts to the petitioner upon the Government’s provision of “evidence,” not just any 11 amount of evidence places the burden on the petitioner. If it did, then an amount less than 12 “substantial” could ultimately be sufficient for the Government to prevail. The proper measure of 13 the evidence necessary to shift the burden is “substantial evidence.” See Abufayad v. Holder, 632 14 F.3d 623, 631 (holding “that the BIA’s determination that the Government met its burden of 15 introducing ‘some evidence’ of Abufayad’s inadmissibility [was] supported by substantial 16 evidence”); Zemeka, 2013 WL 6085633 at *6 (holding that “substantial evidence” supported 17 placing the burden on the petitioner to establish the bona fides of his prior marriage).

18 If USCIS discovers substantial evidence related to marriage fraud, it must issue a NOID to 19 the petitioner. 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(8)(iv). “The NOID informs the petitioner of ‘the derogatory 20 information’ in question and affords him the ‘opportunity to rebut the information and present 21 information in his/her own behalf before the decision is rendered.’” Zemeka, 2013 WL 6085633 22 at *5 (quoting 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(8)(iv), (b)(16)(i)). “Upon receiving the NOID, the burden 23 shifts to the petitioner to rebut USCIS’s finding of fraud and establish that a prior marriage was 24 not ‘entered into for the purpose of evading immigration laws.’” Id. (quoting Kahy, 19 I. & N.
25 Dec. at 805 n.2). Of course the burden shifts to the petitioner only if the determination of fraud 26 underlying the NOID is based on substantial evidence. See Kahy, 19 I. & N. Dec. at 806.

27 In sum, the essential question is whether, as a matter of law, substantial and probative 28 evidence in the record supports the agency’s finding that Dinh did not intend to establish a life

1 together with Duran at the time of their marriage. Although the agency may find that a marriage 2 is fraudulent based on either party's lack of bona fide intent and therefore deny an I-130 Petition, 3 the denial of a subsequent I-130 Petition for a prior fraudulent marriage must rely on the 4 beneficiary's (Dinh's) intent to evade immigration laws in that prior marriage rather than the prior 5 petitioner's (Duran's) intentions. In other words, there is no transferred intent from one spouse to 6 another that carries forward to a subsequent I-130 Petition. See Kahy, 19 I. & N. Dec. at 806.
7 However, depending on circumstance, the prior petitioner's (Duran's) intent to evade immigration 8 laws may be evidence of the beneficiary's (Dinh's) same intent.

9 Because the BIA's opinion expressly adopts and supplements USCIS's decision, the Court 10 reviews both. Salazar-Paucar v. I.N.S., 281 F.3d 1069, 1073 (9th Cir. 2002) ("When the BIA 11 conducts a de novo review of the IJ's decision, as here, we review the BIA's decision rather than 12 the IJ's, except to the extent that the BIA expressly adopts the IJ's ruling.").

13 E. Application of Law to Facts: the Dinh-Duran Marriage

14 1. "Sought to be accorded"

15 Plaintiffs contend that § 1154(c) is inapplicable because Dinh did not seek "to be 16 accorded" immediate relative status as Duran's wife. Although Dinh admits she signed the Form 17 I-485 Application, she avers that she did not date that form and that, one month after the marriage 18 and several months before the Form I-485 was submitted to USCIS, she instructed her mother to 19 tell Hoa and Duran not to file the immigration forms. Dinh also argues that because the Form I-20 485 was "rejected" rather than "accepted" or adjudicated, she did not seek "to be accorded" 21 immediate relative status.

22 Defendants argue that Dinh "sought to be accorded" immigration benefits because she 23 signed the Form I-485 and that Form was then submitted to USCIS (albeit several months later).

24 The Court is unaware of any precedent interpreting the phrase "sought to be accorded."
25 There is evidence in the record that, as of about one month after the wedding, Dinh 26 communicated her desire that the immigration papers not be filed. (Dinh Aff. ¶ 17, AR 119.)
27 However, she knowingly and voluntarily signed the Form I-485 immediately after the wedding, 28 and she delegated the form's filing to Hoa or Duran. The Court must infer that Dinh intended the

1 form to be filed, at least during the one month before she instructed her mother to tell Hoa not to 2 file the form, and therefore she “sought to be accorded . . . preference status as the spouse of a 3 citizen of the United States.” A signature alone may not be enough to establish that a person 4 “sought to be accorded” preference status, but signing the form and doing nothing to prevent the 5 filing from occurring for one month is.

6 Section 1154(c) is not inapplicable on this ground. Dinh “sought to be accorded” 7 immediate relative status as Duran’s spouse.

8 2. Conspiracy Withdrawal

9 Dinh argues that her communication to her mother that she did not want to marry Duran 10 and not to file the immigration papers amounted to a withdrawal from the conspiracy. This is 11 presumably a reaction to the second part of § 1154(c), which provides that a Form I-130 Petition 12 must be denied if “the alien has attempted or conspired to enter into a marriage for the purpose of 13 evading the immigration laws.” However, neither the USCIS decision nor the BIA affirmance 14 held that Dinh conspired in this manner, nor is there any evidence in the record of a conspiracy.
15 The Court assumes that Dinh is not admitting to this type of conspiracy in order to establish that 16 she withdrew from it. Because conspiracy is not at issue, this argument is irrelevant.

17 3. Intent to Establish a Life Together at the Time of Marriage

18 On March 20, 2012, USCIS found that the Dinh-Duran marriage was fraudulent. (AR 38– 19 46.) Of note, the agency considered (i) affidavits by Dinh and Hoang (Dinh’s mother); 20 (ii) briefings submitted by Plaintiffs’ current counsel, Mr. Xavier Gonzales; (iv) briefings by 21 Plaintiffs’ former counsel, Ms. Silvia L. Esparza; and (v) documents submitted by Plaintiffs 22 which purport to document Vietnam and Vietnamese culture, including arranged marriages.
23 USCIS’s finding was based on the following evidence in the record:

24 (1) Duran pled guilty to aiding and abetting the attempted entry of an illegal alien 25 by means of a sham marriage.

26 (2) The Dinh-Duran marriage did not comport with the “pomp and circumstance” 27 normally surrounding a traditional Vietnamese arranged marriage. Neither Prince 28 nor Duran is Vietnamese. There is no evidence that either was acquainted with traditional Vietnamese customs. It is very unlikely that a proper arranged marriage would be planned when one of the parties was presently married or recently divorced, as the Duran marriage occurred about one month after the Prince

1 divorce. Also, the record contains no evidence that Dinh's family ever met 2 Duran's family.

3 (3) USCIS has seen many one-sided fraudulent marriage schemes, but never one in 4 which the alien was the unknowing party.

5 (4) There is no evidence in the record to support Dinh's claim that she made 6 arrangements to attend school in Utah in January 2005.⁶ Even if she had provided 7 this evidence, it would be of limited evidentiary value because Dinh's first 8 husband (Prince) also lived in Utah.

9 (5) There is no substantive evidence in the record of commingled assets, joint 10 property, or any other joint financial arrangements.

11 (6) There is no evidence in the record about how Dinh and Duran communicated 12 subsequent to their marriage. Defendants point out that Dinh did not go to Utah to 13 try to work it out with Duran as would normally be expected.

14 (8) There are no photographs in the record of Dinh's local friends or college 15 colleagues attending the wedding.

16 (9) There was plenty of time (four months) between the marriage and the filing of 17 the immigration papers. Dinh therefore had a "reasonable opportunity to decide 18 not to move forward with the filing of her adjustment of status application."

19 (10) Chau submitted nothing to support the bona fides of the Duran marriage in 20 response to the NOID.

21 (11) Dinh did not provide a reasonable explanation as to "why someone other than 22 [her] would be motivated to submit and pay for applications on her behalf after the 23 decline in her marriage [to Duran]."

24 (12) The affidavits by Dinh and Hoang are of little evidentiary value without 25 supporting documentary evidence.

26 The BIA adopted USCIS's decision and made the following additional points:

27 (1) Dinh's claim that she was an unwitting participant in the marriage fraud for 28 which Duran was convicted is belied by the fact that she had two consecutive marriages to different U.S. citizens, each ending in divorce after only a few months. (AR 5.)

(2) Dinh paid $12,000 to a broker to marry her first husband, but never lived with him. (AR 5.)

(3) It was to Dinh's benefit that the immigration forms be filed; there is no plausible reason why Duran would file them some four months after the marriage.

⁶ This is incorrect. Exhibit B to Dinh's March 9, 2012 filing with USCIS is a copy of a series of e-mails demonstrating that Dinh applied to the University of Utah College of Nursing and to Westminster College International in Salt Lake City, Utah. (AR 105-09.) However, these e-mails date from November 2 to November 22, 2004, which was after the Prince divorce and before the Duran wedding. (Id.)

1 (4) The affidavits of Dinh and Hoang are contradictory and self-serving and thus do not outweigh the substantial evidence in the record.

2 On appeal to this Court, Plaintiffs argue there is not substantial and probative evidence in 3 the record that Dinh intended a sham marriage with Duran. Moreover, they argue USCIS and the 4 BIA misinterpreted the record evidence and ignored various facts which militate in Dinh's favor.
5 In particular, Plaintiffs highlight the following:

6 (1) In January 2005, about six to eight weeks after the wedding, Dinh told Duran 7 (indirectly through Hoang and possibly through Hoa) not to file the immigration forms. (Dinh Aff. ¶¶ 17, 19, AR 119; see Hoang Aff., AR 118.)

8 (2) In January 2005, Dinh sought permission from her mother to divorce Duran 9 once she realized Duran did not want a real marriage, as he was not returning her phone calls. (Dinh Aff. ¶¶ 10, 11, 14, AR 119.)

10 (3) Dinh and her mother wanted Dinh to marry for financial benefit to help with 11 college tuition. (Dinh Aff. ¶ 2, 3, 8, AR 116–17; Dinh Aff., AR 126.)

12 (4) Arranged marriages for economic reasons often occur within a short amount of time, even at the first meeting between two persons. (AR 84, 86.)

13 (5) It is common in the Vietnamese culture to rely on parental choice of 14 matchmaker and of arranged spouse. (Dinh Aff. ¶ 4, AR 117; see AR 83, 85, 266, 272.)

15 (5) Dinh intended to return to Utah in January 2005 to attend college, as evidenced 16 by her college applications. (AR 105–09.)

17 (6) Dinh intended to live with Duran and “fulfill all the incidences of marriage” with him. (Dinh Aff. ¶ 5, AR 117.)

18 (7) Dinh was lawfully present in the United States on an F-1 student visa when her 19 marriage to Duran occurred. Therefore, she did not have an immediate need for a change of immigration status.

20 (8) Dinh did not date the immigration forms and took no affirmative steps to file 21 them. (Dinh Aff. ¶ 16, AR 119.)

22 (8) USCIS conducted no interviews or other background research regarding the Dinh-Duran marriage.

23 (9) Dinh began her relationship with Chau before the Duran petition was submitted 24 to USCIS. (Dinh Aff. ¶ 13, AR 118.)

25 (10) The Dinh-Duran immigration forms were submitted without Dinh's knowledge. (Dinh Aff. ¶ 20, AR 120.)

26 As noted above, the Court's role is not to assess the affiants' credibility or to weigh the 27 evidence. The review is more holistic: is there “substantial and probative evidence” in the record 28 that Dinh did not intend to establish a life with Duran at the time they were married.

1 The Agency⁷ relied heavily on the lack of “pomp and circumstance” surrounding the 2 Duran wedding to counter Plaintiff’s assertion that the Dinh-Duran marriage was a culturally 3 acceptable arranged marriage. It is unclear, however, on what basis the Agency chose to rely on 4 the evidence describing elaborate, ritualistic, and time-consuming arranged marriages instead of 5 the evidence stating that arranged marriages for economic reasons often occur on a very short 6 time frame. The evidence describing arranged marriages does not seem especially probative. It is 7 in the form of printouts from various travel and news websites and contains general information 8 for tourists and sensationalist warnings against marriage fraud scams.

9 Although the Agency was free to weigh this evidence as it saw fit, the Court cannot 10 “reasonably discern” the “[A]gency’s path” from the smattering of inconsistent evidence about 11 arranged marriages in the Vietnamese culture to the finding that Dinh’s marriage to Duran did not 12 constitute a culturally acceptable arranged marriage. Nw. Motorcycle Ass’n v. U.S. Dep’t of 13 Agriculture, 18 F.3d 1468, 1478 (9th Cir. 1994) (“A court may not supply a reasoned basis for the 14 agency’s action that the agency itself has not given. However, a court can uphold an agency 15 decision of less than ideal clarity if the agency’s path may reasonably be discerned.” (internal 16 quotation marks and citations omitted)). In the absence of a reasoned basis to selectively rely on 17 one portion of the conflicting evidence about arranged marriages, it appears the Agency 18 inappropriately imposed its own subjective views of what a culturally proper arranged marriage 19 should look like. See Damon, 360 F.3d at 1089; Bark, 511 F.2d at 1201–02.

20 Even viewed collectively, the remainder of the evidence relied upon by the agency is not 21 “substantial and probative.” Duran’s guilty plea cannot be imputed to prove Dinh’s intent. Just 22 because USCIS had never seen a one-sided fraudulent marriage scheme where the alien is the 23 unknowing party does not mean they do not exist. The Indictment against Hoa alleges a 24 conspiracy in which U.S. citizens were paid between $500 and $10,000 to marry Vietnamese 25 nationals by marriage arrangers, who were paid approximately $30,000 by each Vietnamese 26

27 ⁷ Because the BIA expressly adopted USCIS’s opinion, the Court collectively refers to USCIS and 28 the BIA as the “agency.”

1 national. (AR 324–27.) This scheme did not appear to depend on the Vietnamese nationals 2 obtaining any immigration benefit. The arrangers and the U.S. citizens apparently obtained huge 3 sums for the effort of recruiting Vietnamese nationals and making sure that a marriage occurred.
4 What transpired after the marriages seems immaterial to the U.S. citizens and the arrangers.
5 Whether or not the charges in the Indictment are true, this alleged conspiracy shows that a one-6 sided fraudulent marriage with an unknowing alien participant could occur.

7 There is evidence in the record that Dinh applied to two colleges in Utah, although these 8 applications preceded the Duran marriage. Therefore, Dinh did not make plans to attend college 9 in Utah so that she could establish a married life with Duran. Dinh averred that she “always had 10 the intention to establish a married life with whomever my mother chose for me to marry.” (Dinh 11 Aff. ¶ 7, AR 258.) This appears consistent with the Vietnamese custom of accepting a parent’s 12 choice of spouse, and does not necessarily prove that Dinh did not intend to establish a married 13 life with Duran. It also seems consistent with the $12,000 payment to arrange the Prince 14 marriage and the nearly immediate arrangement to marry Duran once the Prince marriage failed.
15 (See Dinh Aff., AR 126–27.) The $12,000 fee appears to have been for the arrangement of a 16 marriage for Dinh, even if it took several spouses to find the “right” spouse. (See id.)

17 Cutting against Dinh is that there is no documentation of joint property or financial 18 arrangements with Duran, and no evidence that any friends or colleagues attended the wedding.
19 On the other hand, it seems quite natural that few, if any, of Dinh’s friends or coworkers could 20 attend a hastily-organized wedding in another state. It is also unclear why she did not take more 21 affirmative steps to communicate with Duran (possibly in person, by traveling to Utah) in January 22 2005 when he would not return her phone calls. These facts support a reasonable inference, but 23 nothing more, that the marriage was a sham.

24 It seems true, as the agency concluded, that four months is sufficient time to decide not to 25 move forward with the filing of immigration papers. And toward the beginning of these four 26 months Dinh decided just that—she instructed that the immigration forms not be filed. Her 27 divorce from Duran while the immigration forms were pending with USCIS is an objective 28 indication that she did not marry Duran with the primary purpose of evading the immigration

1 laws. See Tawfik, 20 I. & N. Dec. at 169 (“[W]hile the petition filed by the beneficiary’s first 2 United States citizen wife was still pending . . . , the beneficiary divorced that wife, without 3 knowledge as to what the outcome of the petition might be. . . . [H]is divorce, prior to a decision 4 on the petition which may have been to his favor, tends to reflect the bona fide nature of the 5 marriage that he chose to terminate.”).

6 Dinh’s lack of knowledge that the immigration forms were filed also supports Plaintiffs’ 7 position. In Kahy, the BIA dismissed an appeal of the denial of a Form I-130 Petition in part 8 because “the petitioner ha[d] submitted no evidence that the visa petition was filed without the 9 knowledge or approval of the beneficiary.” 19 I. & N. Dec. at 807. Here, there is evidence in the 10 record (Dinh’s affidavit) that Dinh was unaware that the forms were filed. If Dinh had married 11 Duran with the primary purpose of evading the immigration laws, it seems she would have 12 proactively followed up to ensure the immigration forms were filed; she likely would not have 13 allowed Duran to sit on them for four months before filing them. Also, it seems she would not 14 have sought a divorce from Duran as it could have raised red flags within USCIS. Further, it 15 seems she would not have knowingly lied on her October 23, 2006 Form I-485 (in relation to the 16 Dinh-Chau marriage) by indicating that she had never before applied for LPR status if she were 17 aware of the filing of the Dinh-Duran immigration forms, which included a Form I-485. (AR 18 134.)

19 The Agency also points to Dinh’s failure to provide a reasonable explanation as to why 20 someone other than her would be motivated to submit and pay for applications on her behalf.
21 Because there was not substantial and probative evidence that the Duran marriage was a fraud, 22 the burden of proof did not shift to Dinh. Thus, her lack of rebuttal evidence is of no moment.

23 The Court agrees that self-serving affidavits are suspect, especially when there is no 24 supporting documentation. But all affidavits are self-serving to some extent; if not, they would 25 have no evidentiary value for the affiants. S.E.C. v. Phan, 500 F.3d 895, 909 (9th Cir. 2007).
26 And here, there is objective evidence that (i) Dinh intended to return to Utah to study, albeit with 27 whomever she ended up marrying there; (ii) she divorced Duran before USCIS ruled on her 28 immigration applications; (iii) she did not need an immediate change of immigration status,

1 although the Court understands that obtaining LPR status is of enormous long-term benefit even 2 if one is not in imminent need of a change in status; and (iv) she indicated in her application for 3 LPR status following the Chau marriage that she had never before applied for LPR status.

4 Several reasonable inferences could be drawn from the record evidence. However, 5 reasonable inferences do not amount to “substantial and probative evidence.” Tawfik, 20 I. & N.
6 Dec. at 168. Based on the evidence in the record as to Dinh’s intentions, a reasonable factfinder 7 would be compelled to find that Dinh intended to establish a life with Duran at the time they were 8 married, even if that life was motivated by short-term financial gain and did not align with the 9 traditional notion of marriage for romantic purposes. See Tagalicud, 84 F.3d at 1185; Peterson, 10 12 I. & N. Dec. at 664.

11 Accordingly, section 1154(c) does not bar the approval of the Form I-130 Petition that 12 Chau filed on Dinh’s behalf.

13
14 III. CONCLUSION

15 In accord with the above, the Court hereby ORDERS:

- 16 1. Defendants’ motion for summary judgment (Dkt. No. 13) is DENIED.
- 17 2. This matter is remanded to USCIS to re-adjudicate the Form I-130 Petition and Form I-18 485 filed by Chau and Dinh on October 23, 2006. (AR 133–36, 514–15.) USCIS may 19 not use 8 U.S.C. § 1154(c) as a basis to deny the Form I-130 Petition.
