Case No. 2:13-cv-00927-JCM-GWF

ORDER

Plaintiff, who is a prisoner in the custody of the Nevada Department of Corrections, submitted a civil rights complaint pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and the court has screened plaintiff’s civil rights complaint pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1915A. In that order, the court dismissed claim 2 and the defendants named therein after finding that the statute of limitations on the claim had expired. Plaintiff now moves the court to reconsider its order dismissing that claim (ECF No. 4).

As plaintiff provides no legal authority to support his right to seek reconsideration, the court treats petitioner’s motion as one made under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(b), which allows courts to revise “any order or other form of decision, however designated, which adjudicates fewer than all the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties ... before the entry of judgment ...,” and as one calling for the court to exercise its inherent common-law authority “to rescind an interlocutory order over which it has jurisdiction ...” See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b); see also Los Angeles v. Santa Monica Baykeeper, 254 F.3d 882, 887 (9th Cir. 2001). This authority is discretionary and should only be exercised where there is new evidence presented which is substantially different than that originally before the court, where controlling authority has changed or where the decision was clearly erroneous

1 and a manifest unjust would result. U.S. v. Houser, 804 F.2d 565, 567 (9th Cir. 1986).

2 Plaintiff argues that he could not have brought his claim earlier because he was obligated to 3 pursue it through both the prison grievance procedure and through a state court habeas action which 4 ultimately brought him relief in his efforts to have his good time credits restored. He seeks equitable 5 tolling of the limitations period.

6 Count 2 of the complaint alleges that defendants Cox, Oliver Robinson and Neven violated
7 plaintiff's rights secured by the Fourteenth Amendment by acts described in paragraphs 1-32 of the 8 Nature of the Case section ("as though fully set forth herein, re-alleged"). Complaint, p. 5-A. The facts 9 related to these three defendants and due process are summarized as follows:

10 On January 29, 2009, plaintiff was removed to administrative segregation pending an 11 investigation of possible disciplinary charges. Plaintiff alleges that Sgt Oliver "abruptly concluded the 12 investigation" without establishing any facts and in spite of the directives of "A.R. 707 and/or [the] 13 Disciplinary Manual" and ignoring directives he received from AW Baca to investigate. Plaintiff alleges 14 that instead Oliver drafted a notice of charges (NOC) based on opinion and assumptions, denying him 15 due process.

16 Defendant Robinson conducted the disciplinary hearing on March 3, 2009. He reached a finding 17 of guilty without setting out any evidence in the record to support the finding. At the conclusion of the 18 hearing, Robinson failed to make any statement of the evidence relied upon, despite being aware of the 19 requirement that he do so. Plaintiff's appeal of the proceedings was denied by defendants Neven and 20 Cox. Thereafter, in May, 2009, plaintiff filed a "petition with the District Court" challenging the loss 21 of good time credits.¹ Although the district court denied relief, plaintiff alleges that the Nevada Supreme

23 ¹ The court takes judicial notice of the docket of the Eighth Judicial District Court in plaintiff's state
24 habeas petition referred in the complaint. See Eighth Judicial District Court Register of Actions, Case No. A-09-
25 596574- W. U.S. ex rel. Robinson Rancheria Citizens Council v. Borneo, Inc., 971 F.2d 244, 248 (9th Cir.1992) (federal courts may take judicial notice of other courts' proceedings, within the federal judiciary and without, if the proceedings directly relate to matters before the court). The state habeas action was filed on May 21, 2009

1 Court reversed the decision and plaintiff ultimately “received a honorable discharged [sic] from parole 2 as a result of” the state courts’ orders.

3 The procedural due process required in a prison disciplinary proceeding is outlined in the United 4 States Supreme Court decision Wolff v. McDonnell, 418 U.S. 539 (1974). Wolff established that 5 prisoners in a disciplinary proceeding are entitled to “advance written notice of the claimed violation and 6 a written statement of the factfinders as to the evidence relied upon and the reasons for the disciplinary 7 action taken.” Id. at 563. There must be a ‘written statement by the factfinders as to the evidence relied 8 on and reasons’ for the disciplinary action. Id. at 564. Finally, prisoners should be allowed to call 9 witnesses and present documentary evidence in their defense when permitting them to do so will not 10 compromise unduly institutional safety or correctional goals. Id. at 566.

11 Based upon the allegations in the complaint, including the specific references to the procedures 12 that were not properly followed, the court construed this claim as one of denied procedural due process.
13 However, in reviewing plaintiff’s arguments for reconsideration and in reviewing pertinent case law and 14 precedent related to the accrual of a procedural due process claim, the court is convinced that the true 15 nature of the claim being raised is not a denial of procedural due process, but rather, a denial of 16 substantive due process - a challenge to the fact of his “conviction” on the disciplinary charges and the 17 resultant loss of good time credits.

18 Where a § 1983 action alleges constitutional violations that would necessarily imply the 19 invalidity of the conviction or sentence, the prisoner must establish that the underlying sentence or 20 conviction has been invalidated on appeal, by a habeas petition, or through some similar proceeding.
21 See Heck v. Humphrey, 512 U.S. 477, 483-87 (1994); Edwards v. Balisok, 520 U.S. 641, 646-48 (1997).
22 Where the claim is akin to one of malicious prosecution, one element of proof is that the criminal

1 proceedings were concluded in plaintiff's favor. Heck, 512 U.S. at 483-87; see also Blueford v. Prunty,
2 108 F.3d 251, 255 (9th Cir. 1997) (affirming dismissal without prejudice of claims relating to 3 disciplinary proceedings where good-time credits were involved). Giving the claim a liberal construction
4 allowed to pro se parties, the court concludes that the instant § 1983 allegations of procedural defects
5 are actually an attempt to challenge the substantive result of the disciplinary hearing. As such, the 6 favorable termination rule of Heck applies, Butterfield v. Bail, 120 F.3d 1023, 1024-45 (9th Cir. 1997), 7 and the claim could not accrue until the state court proceedings were favorably terminated in 2012.

8 The statute of limitations as to count 2 of the complaint has not expired. The motion for 9 consideration will be granted and the claim will be allowed to proceed against defendants Oliver, 10 Robinson, Cox and Neven.

11 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the motion for reconsideration (ECF No. 4) is 12 GRANTED. Count 2 of the complaint and defendants Robinson, Neven and Cox and the claim for 13 Denied Due Process (Count II) are hereby reinstated as defendants. This action shall proceed on all 14 claims against all defendants. All further directives set forth in the court's original screening order shall 15 remain in force.

16 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the spelling of plaintiff's surname shall be corrected on the 17 docket and on all future pleadings to WORDLAW.

18 IT IS SO ORDERED.
